BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

A Family Resemblance.

Relatives are oft perlexing,
And not infrequently most vexing.
—Old Mother Nature.

Trader the Wood Rat had established himself comfortably in Farmer Brown's sugar-house. It was rather far North for Trader to be, it was quite by accident that he had got so far North. But he had been there for some time and he felt just as much at home there as if his family had been there before him.

Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and Mrs.

Whitefoot chuckled. "Do you know why he screeched?" he inquired.

Whitefoot had their home nicely established in the sugar-house. They had built it in the firebox of the evaporator. They had been greatly interested in Trader. Of course, being a Rat, he was a sort of cousin.

"Do you know, Whitefoot," said Mrs. Whitefoot, "it seems to me that Cousin Trader must be quite closely related. It seems to me that he must be closer to us than any other of the Rat cousins."

"Why so?" asked Whitefoot.

"Have you noticed his hands and feet?" inquired Mrs. Whitefoot. "They are white," declared little Mrs. Whitefoot. "They are white just like ours."

"I hadn't thought of that," exclaimed Whitefoot. "And he has a white waistcoat, too. Now you speak of it, there is quite a strong family resemblance, the chief difference being his size. Of course, he is ever and ever so much bigger than us. Somehow, he doesn't seem to me a bit like Robber the Brown Rat."

"Who are you talking about?" demanded a voice, and there was Trader himself.

"I was just saying," said Whitefoot, "that you don't seem at all like your cousin, Robber the Brown Rat."

"I hope I don't," declared Trader most emphatically. "I hope I don't. There is a fellow who is a disgrace to the whole family. Yes, sir, he's a disgrace! If you ask me, he's a disgrace to the whole animal world. If I thought I looked like him I never would be able to hold my head up in good company. That fellow is an outcast. He's bad all through. I'm glad to hear you say that I don't look anything like him."

"We were saying," spoke up little Mrs. Whitefoot somewhat timidly, "that it seems as if you must be related to us quite closely, because you look so like us, only bigger."

Trader looked a bit puzzled. Then he happened to notice the white hands and feet of Mr. and Mrs. Whitefoot and Whitefoot's white waistcoat. He grinned. "I guess you're right," said he. "I guess I do look something like a great, overgrown Wood Mouse. Well, I'm glad that we are to be neighbors and I think that we shall get along together very well. How did you happen to move in here?"

"So as to be somewhat where we would feel safe from Yowler the Bobcat," declared Whitefoot. "You know he has kittens to feed now."

"So I hear, so I hear," replied Trader. "I had a very narrow escape from him the other night. If he hadn't screeched when he did he probably would have caught me."

Whitefoot chuckled. "Do you know why he screeched?" he inquired.

Trader shook his head. "Why?" said he.

"Because he was angry, and he was angry because he couldn't get into this sugar-house, and all the time he knew we were in here," replied Whitefoot.

"Well, that screech gave me warning just in time to dodge out of sight," declared Trader. "It was then I decided to have a look at the old sugar-house with a view of living here."

"We are glad you did," cried Mrs. Whitefoot and Whitefoot together.

YOUR HEALTH

Migraine Headache

By L. W. Kohn, M. D., New York city, Member Gorgas Memorial.

Some people suffer frequently from so-called migraine. It is often called blind or nervous headache. Women are especially afflicted with this condition and usually in early adult life. It is a very troublesome affliction and is not so easily conquered.

This disease is believed to be inherited in many instances and may be traced directly through several generations of the same family. At times it is found in several members of a family.

Many forms of headache manifest themselves at times but the cause may often be traced to a disease elsewhere, such as congestion of the liver, constipation, menstrual disorders, diseases of the nose, sinuses and teeth, and kidney disturbances. When it occurs quite regularly and often without a recognizable cause for its production, it is regarded as a migraine. It is a very distressing condition but does not as a rule endanger the life of the individual. As the person grows older, the attacks gradually disappear.

The attacks of so-called migraine are usually characterized by a one-sided headache accompanied by nausea or vomiting, inability to concentrate mentally, or intolerance to light and noises. The attack is often brought about by mental excitement, worry or sleeplessness. It is also believed by many observers that constipation or a sluggish liver may initiate its production but we have no absolute proof of the true fundamental cause. Of late many physicians feel that its origin lies in either a nervous disturbance or in some disorder of the glands of internal secretion.

The treatment will depend upon the nature of the superinducing cause as well as upon the physical condition of the individual and his powers of resistance. Oftentimes, regulation of diet or limitation of certain types of food bring benefit. Attention to the bowels is usually essential. The guidance of an intelligent physician should of course be sought.

Moths will not come near cloths sprinkled with turpentine.

HELPED DURING MIDDLE AGE

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommend it."—Mrs. T. A. Miller, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

Talks on Electric Service

WHY THE PROPOSED CHANGE IN RATES?

The proposed electric rate does not mean an increase in the revenue of the Lighting Department.

For every penny of increase in the bill of any customer, a corresponding decrease will be made in the bill of some other customer

The natural question for you to ask is:

"Why does the Department want a new rate if it does not mean more money?"

The answer is in the future development of the business. Low priced electricity is necessary in order to enable every customer to make use of this product for all of the new purposes now being developed.
The new rate change is in order to encourage additional use.

The net earnings of the Department will not increase one cent unless more service is rendered to the community and more electricity is used by the customers.

OLD RATE
10c per Kilowatt hour.
NEW RATE
3c per Kilowatt hour, plus the initial charge.

Stories That Recall Others

Best Gait.

Bobby was spending his vacation in the country where his constant companion was a sturdy black shetland pony that possessed that well known pony trait of always trotting trice as fast on the homeward journey as on the outbound way. Some horse loving friend inquired of the boy: "Bobby, what is Dandy's fastest gait?"

He flashed back a quick reply: "The barnyard gate!" said he.

Decoration Day Decorations.

Several gaudily colored steins arranged about the railing in a tea shop caught the eye of a five-year old youngster eating with his parents.

"Mom, buy me one of those things," the lad pleaded.

"Why, son, I can't they're decorations," remonstrated the mother.

"Well, get me one Decoration day then," rejoined the five-year old, as his parents made wary faces and others within hearing distance laughed heartily.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug: Castoria is vegetable. So it is safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pet away. And it's always ready for the cruelest pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea: effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

EXPECT HOT CONTEST FOR DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION FOR CONGRESSMAN

According to expectations in the democratic ranks, a hot contest is to develop at the party's congressional district convention for the second congressional district, which will be held in this city on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 22. The rival candidates for the nomination are former State Senator Hermon J. Gibbs of Yantic and State Representative William M. Citron of Middletown. The one receiving the nomination will be the opponent of Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London, who seems to be practically certain of renomination by the republicans. Gibbs ran against Freeman in 1926. Citron was minority leader of the lower house during the 1927 session. The congressional district includes the three eastern Connecticut counties, New London, Windham and Middlesex, in which the two candidates are mustering delegates who will give them support when the convention is called.

On the same day another convention will be held in the town hall in this city, this one being the convention of the 19th senatorial district, which comprises the towns of Norwich, Preston and Ledyard.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE LATE THOMAS J. O'NEIL

The following tribute to the late Thomas J. O'Neil of Jewett City, at one time a resident of Norwich, where he has two brothers living, is paid by Everet H. Hiscox of Jewett City:

In the passing of Thomas J. O'Neil of Worcester, an engine driver of the old school has "opened wide," with his last signal clear.

Mingled with feelings of sincere regret, there comes to this writer fond memories of 40 years and more, when the first delights of possibly becoming a railroad man, were made real by boyhood associations with Tom O'Neil.

It is within memory's scope when Tom was fireman on the long forgotten way freight, in the training of such masters of the engine driver's art as John Cobleigh and "Sid" Williams of Norwich. Shortly after the death of the renowned William Cooper, Tom O'Neil was advanced to the right hand side of the cab. With every bit that the term implies, he soon became a true "Knight of the Throttle."

Here began the establishing of a long and faithful record for engineering efficiency, equalled by few of the fine men who at that time daily handled the old type of engines over the local iron. Mr. O'Neil was in no sense a sensational runner, nor was he of the sort that simply "Opened her up and let her go." He was a part of his machine and knew it from trucks to dome. To him his crowning attainment came when 40 years ago he was assigned to run the boat train. In those days the night boat express was surely something to talk about. With a fast schedule and important traffic its demands upon engineering skill found in Thomas O'Neil a driver to the manner born. This writer "flagged" the boat train at Jewett City then, and on stormy nights when the great engine whizzed by, and Thomas caught the gleam of the flagman's lantern, never did he fail to acknowledge the welcome "High Ball" with two short blasts. Saying something that only the language of an engine's whistle can tell, when the driver up in the roaring machine, greets his friend beside the rail.

GUTTERSON GARAGE AND ALBANY CAR BURNED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 13—A two-car garage owned by Wilder Gutterson on Breen road, Watch Hill, and a Pierce-Arrow touring car owned by Ronald Kinnear of Albany, N. Y., were destroyed by fire this evening about 8 o'clock. The Kinnear family, after occupying the Gutterson cottage, were returning to their winter home today. The chauffeur had driven the auto into the garage and had not been away five minutes when flames, originating from an unknown cause, were seen shooting from the building. The Watch Hill fire department with the Seagraves pumper, Chief George W. Hoxie and force of men responded. The contents of two chemical tanks were used and a line of hose laid to keep the flames from spreading to adjoining roofs. The fire was confined to the building where it originated.

A Lincoln sedan of Bradford Shinkle with some other automobiles had pulled to the side of the road to permit the fire apparatus to pass, when a Ford touring car owned and driven by A. Z. Ashear, who conducted a Watch Hill shop came up behind the Shinkle car, striking it in the rear. Ashear was thrown through his own windshield, but escaped uninjured. Officer Robert M. Kessel investigated and found that one driver was as much to blame as the other

SCHOOL BOY BEATEN FOR WEARING HOOVER BUTTON

A Laurel Hill woman brought the tale to republican headquarters on Broadway Thursday afternoon that her small son had been beaten up by a group of boys at the Laurel Hill school because he was hearing a Hoover button. The teacher, she said, failed to reprimand the boys for attacking her son but ordered him to take the button off before he could come into the school room.

However, the Laurel Hill woman took a supply of buttons home with her and said she proposed to send her son to school today with a Hoover button on and see what would happen.

Many pretty gifts were received by the little hostess.

WILL ROUTE BUS ON WEST SIDE OF RIVER

Effective Sept. 30, the 10 a. m. bus will be routed over the west side of the Thames river to New London, making train connections at New London. The New England Transportation Co. has made this decision following a survey resulting from an effort by the Norwich chamber of commerce to have the bus service improved. In a letter to the local chamber of commerce, Traffic Manager H. Price of the New England Transportation Co., says:

"Mr. Stewart has handed me your letter of Sept. 4th which comments on the connection between Train No. 12 which is due New London, at present, at 1:39 p. m. (E. S. T.) and motor coach for Norwich.

With our acquisition of the New London Coach Co we adopted in so far as it was practicable to do so, the schedule operated by that company and which has been operated by the New London Coach company and their predecessor for a considerable length of time.

This particular schedule was so designed as to meet the major needs of Norwich and New London; being predicated on an hourly basis and at regularly stated intervals so that there would be no possible confusion in the mind of the public. However, in adjusting our east and west side schedules, special attention was paid to the matter of train connections at New London and in this manner we have afforded connections with all trains with the exception of Train No. 12 from New York. In the past it was found that the people of Norwich were very desirous of having a connection with Train No. 10, the 9:00 a. m. (E. S. T.) train from New York and we have provided for that connection having in view of previous conversations with Norwich, considered that there was the more important connection.

We should, obviously, like to connect with all of the trains but this is not possible without the employment of an additional bus and an extra operator whose sole duty would be to perform the connection which you now mention with Train No. 12 and I know that you will appreciate that this would be extremely uneconomical.

You raise the question with Mr. Stewart concerning the connection with Train No. 173 at 10:47 from New London. We have scheduled this connection but as I undestood from Mr. Stewart in connection with your previous letter the opening of the draw-bridge jeopardized the connection. We are, therefore, planning on the fall timetable, effective September 30th, to schedule the present 10:00 a. m. coach from Norwich via the west side route from Norwich to insure the train connection mentioned.

It is possible that there may be some criticism from local points along the route, such as in the vicinity of the state hospital, Allyn's Point, etc., and I presume that if such a condition arises the chamber will assist us in explaining to the relatively few passengers who are involved the reasons for the change and the necessity therefore.

Appreciating your interest in this matter, I am

Very truly yours,
(signed) H. PRICE
Traffic Manager

REPORT VETERANS HOSPITAL TO BE NEAR HARTFORD

According to a special dispatch from Washington to a Hartford newspaper, the site to be selected for the new 250-bed Veterans hospital which the federal government will erect in southern New England will probably be in or near Hartford.

Norwich has offered two sites for the hospital, New London and the southern part of the county has at least one site, Danielson, Putnam and Willimantic all have proposed sites.

The tentative plan of the government to choose a site of the proposed hospital near the capital of Connecticut is based, according to an official of the Veterans' bureau, upon a recent survey in which it was found that Willimantic is approximately the center of the district to be served—Connecticut, Rhode Island and part of Massachusetts—and that a point near Hartford is the center of the ex-service man population of the district.

Final choice of the proposed hospital site will be made by the federal board of hospitalization of which General Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' bureau, is chairman The hospital will employ more than 160 persons, three-fourths of whom will be non-professional and non-technical employes drawn largely from the area in which the hospital will be located.

UNDER $300 BONDS FOR HIGHER COURT TRIAL

Before a justice of the peace court in Montville Wednesday night, James Kello, alleged to be the proprietor of a gambling place in that town, was bound over to the next term of the superior court on the charge of conducting a place resorted to and operated for gaming.

Kello was arrested Sunday night by Officer Sisson after an altercation between Kello and Mike Solocub of Waterford.

According to the police, Solocub went into the place about 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon and played cards until 6. About that time an argument arose between Kello and Solocub regarding the former taking so much money from the games for the house. Kello threw Solocub out of the place and locked the door. According to testimony, the latter made a rush for the door and put his fist through a large plate glass window.

Solocub was also arrested. He pleaded guilty to a charge of breach of the peace and was fined $3 and costs.

Kello, represented by Attorney V. P. A. Quinn, entered a plea of not guilty to operating a gaming resort. Attorney C. V. James of Norwich prosecuted the state's case and there was some humorous testimony introduced which at times kept the audience in the court room in gales of laughter.

Probable cause was found in the case and Kello was bound over to the superior court under bonds of $300 which he furnished.

Three Auto Cases.

Three cases were presented before the court Tuesday night.

John Kessler of Montville was fined $25 and costs on a charge of misuse of dealer's numbers on his truck. He was arrested by Officer Sisson, who testified that the accused was coasting down Doyle hill at a speed of 35 miles an hour. He was represented by Attorney Josiah Greenstein.

JONES HANDS BECK BAD DRUBBING IN DAY OF UPSETS IN NATIONAL AMATEURS

By ALAN J. GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

BRAE BURN COUNTRY CLUB, Newton, Mass., Sept. 13—(AP)—Bobby Jones, once more the ruthless par smasher, galloped rough shod into the semi-finals in defense of his national amateur golf championship today by routing John Beck, the London cotton broker, 14 up and 13 to go, in as one-sided a match as this ancient tournament has ever witnessed.

While Jones was smothering his British rival, delivering the decisive blow at the 33rd hole after covering the first 18 holes in a record-breaking 70, the rest of the quarter finalists battled each other in a trio of exciting matches, two of which went to the 35th hole before being decided. In them the British champion, T. P. (Phil) Perkins, emerged triumphant over John Dawson, of Chicago, 3 and 1, while George Voigt, sensational New Yorker, stopped the advance of Oscar F. Willing, of Portland, Ore., 4 and 3, and Phillips Finlay, of Boston, rallied to beat Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, of St. Paul, 3 and 1, in the biggest surprise of the day.

In the semi-finals tomorrow, at 36 holes, Jones, heading toward his fourth title in five years, will tackle the slim, 20 year old Harvard sophomore, Finlay, while Voigt will match his courage and strokes with the 23 year old invader, Perkins. The Perkins-Voigt match is scheduled to start at ten a. m., and the other at 10:15.

All but King Bobby, among this surviving quartet are new faces in the semi-finals of the American championship. It is the first invasion for Perkins, who also enjoys the distinction of being the first Briton to advance this far in the tournament since Willie Hunter, then holder of the British amateur title, reached the semi-finals in 1921 at St. Louis, where he fell before Bob Gardner. For Voigt, the medalist, it is the first time he has ever figured at all in the match play while the youthful Finlay, possibly a champion in the making, has gone one round farther than he did a year ago.

Finlay took his second prominent scalp when he came from behind today to beat Johnston. The young Bostonian, as hard and long a hitter as American golf now boasts, downed Francis Ouimet in the first round with a rousing finish. He may give even the champion. Jones, a keen battle tomorrow if he has any more shots in his bag to compare with those that broke Johnston's heart today.

Two great recovery shots, one at the 32nd and the other at the 33rd hole, enabled Finlay to take from Johnston the advantage that the St. Paul star had held most of the day. Johnston's margin in the morning was only one up and he lost or regained this a half a dozen times in the afternoon. But it looked promising for Jimmy when he still had a one-hole lead with only five to go.

It looked even more promising when Finlay hooked his second shot wildly, on the long 32nd hole, into the rough, with trees and a big wire screen between him and the green. Johnston, playing safe, was on in three and he looked to have the hole clinched until Finlay, with a mighty blast, lifted his ball over screen, trees and traps. He was not only on the green but dead to the pin for a sensational birdie four that gave him the hole and squared the match.

Finlay's drive from the 33rd tee was a tremendous shot carrying fully 300 yards but again wild and far off the fairway, to the right of the green. Again he fired a seemingly impossible shot to the green, this time to save his par in four, win and take the lead as Johnston found a trap and required five. With only three holes to go, Finlay had no trouble keeping the edge, halving the 34th and driving to the edge of the 255 yard 35th green to clinch a four and win the match as Johnston dubbed an approach shot.

His nip and tuck battle was in sharp contrast with the drubbing that Jones administered to Beck. Not in 13 years has any contestant passed over the line with so decisive a defeat as the Briton absorbed at the hands of the champion.

Jones' margin of 14 and 13 equalled the mark that Jerry Travers, so far the only four time champion, set in 1915 when he beat the late George Crump at Detroit.

Bobby was a remorseless scoring machine against the invader. After squaring the first hole, he won six in succession, finished the main round 12 up and ended the match at the fifth hole of the afternoon round. Beck failed to win a single hole and was thoroughly outclassed. Jones' morning card of 70, which might have been two or three strokes better had several of his putts gone an inch or two farther, was one stroke better than the previous tournament record of 71, set by Johnston and Voigt in the qualifying play. Altogether Bobby was three under par for 23 holes.

Dr. Willing, sensation of the previous two days of the tournament was beaten by two factors—his own inability to take advantage of opportunities, and Voigt's pinch-hitting ability. The Portland dentist, 3 down at the end of the morning round, fought gamely but missed a succession of good chances to over-take his rival, who saved himself time after time with marvelous recoveries or deadly putts.

At the 23rd, for instance, Voigt put his drive in a gully and found the rough with his second, only to pitch on beautifully and get his half in par 5 while Willing was straight all the way. At the 24th, Voigt drove into the water near the green and had to take a penalty stroke but Willing took 3 putts and missed another chance to gain. On the 27th, Voigt sank a long putt to win and did the same thing on the 28th to get a half. It was a ding-dong affair, nevertheless, down to the finish. Willing played the first four holes in two under par but he was able to win only one of them and the issue was settled on the 33rd green.

Perkins and Dawson had another great battle in which the lead changed several times. Perkins, although around in par 72 for the morning 18 holes, was only one up. Dawson twice squared the match in the early stages of the final round and then made a great effort to overhaul the Briton after trailing by three holes, with only six to go. Winning the 31st, and 32nd, Dawson stood only one down with four to go but his poor approaching cost him the 34th, 35th and the match.

Perkins had to make only one shot to win the deciding hole. He drove this 225 yard green with a number 1 iron and was conceded the match without further effort, when Dawson hit a tree with his drive, failed to get on in two and went past the cup on his third shot.

GIANTS ADVANCE BY DOUBLE WIN OVER BRAVES

BOSTON, Sept. 13—(AP)—Giant fortunes continued to improve today when the New Yorkers won twice from the Braves, and, by virtue of St. Louis's defeat moved to within one and one-half games of the league lead. The scores today were 12 to 2 and 7 to 6. It was the third consecutive double success for the Clan McGraw over the home forces and a new modern major league record. Two more victories here tomorrow would give the aspiring second-placers a new mark for all time.

The double victory today failed, however, to shake the Cubs from the heels of the Giants. In helping New York by downing the leading Cardinals, 6 to 1, in a specially arranged game at Chicago, the Bruins moved to within two games of the lead and half a game of the Giants.

Larry Benton collected his twenty-fourth victory in the opener as he hurled his twenty-sixth complete game, but Joe Kenewich, Jim Faulkner and Carl Hubbell all were called on in the second clash. Credit for the victory finally went to Faulkner, but Hubbell had to rescue his fellow Toronto pitcher in the ninth when the Braves threatened to shoot away a three-run margin the Giants had built up in the first half of the round.

The Giants continued their hard hitting, getting 16 safeties for 28 bases on the opener and 15 more in the night cap. Mann and Jackson, each with a home run, were the batting stars of the first game, while Francis Hogan, with a single and a double, and two runs driven home took the laurels in the second.

LUCY GIVEN UNPOPULAR VERDICT OVER HUGHIE DEVLIN AT NEW LONDON

Another excellent card of bouts last night at the New London Arena gave the fans an eyeful for their money and proved that Ernest Fakoury is striving hard to revive the game and keep it going. The bouts are drawing very good crowds something that is unusual for New London and Fakoury is one of the few promoters in the state that is packing the crowds in and getting a good break. As long as he continues the good cards the crowds will come now that they have started.

The one real black mark against the bouts last night was the decision in the main go that between Pete Lucey of New Haven and Hughie Devlin of New Bedford. There was no question that the verdict went the wrong way and gave the fans a bad taste to an otherwise excellent card. Practically every one in the Arena figured that Devlin had won the decision and were certainly all run down when Referee Pete Dunn of Bridgeport raised Lucey's hand. The latter turned in a very fine job in the other bouts but missed up on the star one.

Every go was chock full of action, and gave the fans two K. O's, an insight into the gameness of their local battler, Joey Diggan, and the opportunity to see what New Bedford, Mass., had to offer in the line of battlers.

The first bout of four rounds was a slam-bang affair and gave Sailor Estis a K. O. over Jimmy Brown of New Haven, but he very nearly dropped the fight himself when he went down under the blows of the dusky New Haven boy. They stood toe to toe and slugged throughout the first round, with Brown having the upper hand. In the second Brown swarmed over Estis, drove him back with lefts and rights and dropped him to the canvas. The latter gamely arose, stood up under another onslaught, which lasted until the New Haven lad was arm weary, and then brought over his right to the dusky boy's jaw who went sprawling for the count. Brown weighed 160 and Estis one pound less.

Tommy McCarthy of Norwich lost to Frenchy Labarre in the second fight of six rounds, of the evening. The Norwich boy seemed to be way off form and just couldn't get started against his husky foe. Labarre took the aggresive throughout and used his straight left jab to good advantage. He lost some of the spring in his legs towards the last, and was somewhat tired at the bell but easily won the decision. Mac's best round was the fourth when he drove Frenchy back with some hard blows, but lost the lead again in the fifth. Mac weighed in 124 and the French boy 127.

In lieu of Spike Marino's ability to make 118 lbs, the veteran baldheaded Al Thomas, who it is claimed, was at one time featherweight champ of New England, went in at the last minute against tough Johnny Bedell of the New Bedford stable, and gave an excellent exhibition of boxing, until he took one on the chin in the fifth that spilled him to the canvas for the count. Bedell who looked young enough to be Al's son took plenty of lefts to the face and the crafty Thomas tied Johnny up pretty well in the clinches. He managed to avoid Bedell's hard blow until the fatal fifth round of the eight round go and went down and out for the count. But his exhibition won the hearts of the fans and he received a big hand. He weighed 117 1-2 to Bedell's 115.

The main bout went on next. Hughie Devlin the fighting Irishman from New Bedford fighting a cool steady fight took it easy for the first round while Lucey waded in with both arms swinging. His plan of battle was to keep on top of Devlin, but the latter got to work and started to use his left. He used his right only when he saw an opening and was way ahead in the infighting, punishing Pete at this game. Pete, throughout, continued to pile in while Huchie tied him up and made him miss often. But when Pete elected to slug Hughie beat him to it and continually set the former back on his heels.

Every round of the ten was hard fought and the ninth particularly was a hummer. It seemed that Devlin was in the lead a good part of the way and had the fight won. Dunn, however, saw differently and raised Lucey's hand which forthwith set the gallery wild. It certainly was a tough one for Devlin to lose. It was a furious battle unequaled even by the Lucey-Beauregard go two weeks ago.

Al. Gillett of New Bedford, outclassed Joey Duggan, the New London favorite and only the latters undying gameness enabled him to stay the limit. Gillett unmercifully drove Joey's head back with a mean left and hard rights and had Duggan pretty well cut up and down on the canvas several times. Twice, Joey stayed down for the count of nine, more to get his wind than from being hurt and came back fighting hard. He was bleeding from the mouth and nose and was a badly beaten boy, and the crowd was yelling for his seconds to toss in the sponge. But he stood the storm until the final bell. Gillett won hands down, but Duggan made him fight every minute. Joe weighed 121 1-4 and Al, 119.

Next Thursday evening another show will be staged and an excellent card is guaranteed to the followers of the game.

RAIN HALTS NATIONAL TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 13—(AP)—Rain, putting an abrupt end to play in the quarter final round of the national tennis championship late today found the Americans uniformly successful in jousts with foreign players. If they can hold their advantages tomorrow they will have the semi-final bracket entirely to themselves.

Even the great Henri Cochet of France was on the short end of the count when the down-pour sent gallery and players scurrying. A youthful American, Gregory Mangin of Newark, was playing the role of giant killer with dazzling success, having taken the first set by a score of 6-4 while Cochet had won the single game played in the second set only after a bitter fight although he had the advantage of service.

Mangin is 20 and a comparative newcomer to championship tennis, but it was a player two years his junior, who scored the one complete international victory of the day. Frank Shields, the national junior champion, it was who eliminated Jacques Brugnon, veteran of Davis cup play and ninth in the world ranking by scores of 7-5, 6-1, 6-0. Shields has not yet lost a set in the four matches he has played in this tournament.

It remained for Francis T. Hunter, the New Rochelle, N. Y., veteran of 33 who yesterday defeated Jean Borotra, to hold his own. In a gripping battle with the third foreign survivor, nonchalant young Jack Crawford of Australia, Hunter led by scores of 7-5, 3-6 6-3, when the match was called.

The last of the four semi-final tilts brought together two of America's foremost stars, George Lott winning by the impressive scores of 6-2, 6-2, 7-5 over Johnny Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif.

It was decided by the officials and players that the interrupted matches will be continued where they were stopped by rain instead of being played over. Tomorrow will be devoted to finishing the Hunter-Crawford and Cochet-Mangin matches and in addition Miss Helen Wills will play an exhibition against a man opponent.

This will force the playing of the semi-final round Saturday and the final Monday.

KRAUSS AND FABER ADD STRENGTH TO TAFTVILLE A. A.

Manager Jim Troland of the Taftville A. A. after looking over the record of the House of David, the "bewhiskered beauties" has deemed advisable to strengthen his club for the game Saturday afternoon at the Providence street grounds. With this in view he has secured the services of Carlie Krauss for the short stop berth and will shift Joe Faber to second for this game. Krauss and Faber add strength to the team both on the defensive and at the bat. Krauss and Faber made a snappy combination in the center of the diamond which is needed by any club that stacks up against the House of David. Each and every one of the long-haired ball tossers is a sticker of the ball and balls from their bats travel like a streak.

As to his pitching choice for Saturday's game Manager Troland is undecided. Dugas or Lloyd Jarvis will get the assignment with the other getting the J. B. Martin game on Sunday. Both pitchers want to work in the J. B. Martin game so Troland has decided to flip a coin and the one that wins gets his choice of assignments. No matter who pitches Saturday's game it is bound to be well worth seeing, not only as a curiosity because of the weird appearance of the House of David players but from a baseball standpoint. It will be one of the best games of the season.

MANUSH IS HERO OF BROWNS-WHITE SOX GAME

ST. Louis, Sept. 13—(AP)—Collecting half of his team's eight hits, H. E. Manush, left fielder, boosted his second place batting averages to .375 over Lou Gehrig of the Yankees today as the St. Louis Browns bested the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4.

Manush, who trails "Goose" Goslin of the Senators for American league batting honors, connected with a circuit wallop, a two bagger and a pair of singles in as many times to the plate.

EGG PRODUCTION DECLINES IN THE 45TH WEEK

The 1,400 hens in the egg laying contest at Storrs laid 3,954 eggs during the 45th week. This is a yield of a little over 40 per cent. The decline this week amounted to 298 eggs over last week's production and 753 eggs over the corresponding week for last year. The average production per bird to date is 172 eggs. This is six eggs more per bird than for the same length of time last year.

For 16 consecutive weeks George Lowry's White Leghorns from West Willington, Conn., have won first honors with a lay of 60 eggs. This is the same production as last week's. Clarence E. Lee's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Auburn, N. Y., was an easy second with 54 eggs. This pen laid one more egg this week than last. George Lowry's pen No. 65, the second best pen in the contest to date, was third with a lay of 50 eggs. A pen of White Leghorns owned by Tip Top Farm of Waldoboro, Maine, and a pen of the same breed owned by Hollywood Poultry Farm of Woodinville, Wash., were tied for fourth place with a lay of 47 eggs each.

At the end of the forty-fifth week there were thirteen pens of Leghorns, eight pens of Reds, and one pen of White Wyandottes that had passed the 2,000 mark. The leading pen of the contest had a total of 2,666 eggs. In order to compete with the world record pen of birds owned by the University of British Columbia, the contest management has decided to hold this pen for the full year. The world record pen finished the contest with a record of 2,986 eggs. This record was made at the Agassiz contest in 1925-1926. The leading pen in the Storrs contest will have to average 46 eggs per week for the next seven weeks to beat this record.

A Rhode Island Red bird No. 436 owned by George B. Treadwell of Spencer, Mass., after laying 121 consecutive days skipped a day and has laid every day since. She is the outstanding individual bird in the contest with an egg production at the end of the forty-fifth week of 295 eggs.

FIFTY-FIVE OUT FOR N. F. A. FOOTBALL

About 55 students answered Coach Courtland Whitney's call for football candidates at the Norwich Free Academy yesterday afternoon. It was a husky looking bunch of material that reported for tryouts and some looked as though they might have speed. This squad will be cut almost immediately to 45 and these will be uniformed and outfitted today. Practice will start on Saturday with conditioning drills at 10 o'clock in the morning and at 2.30 in the afternoon. During the week practice will be at 2.30 o'clock.

Coach Whitney, although he has plenty of likely looking material has a tough problem before him. Left by graduation with only four varsity veterans Whitney must build an almost entire team. Capt. LaCroix who played end last year takes care of one of the end positions with Chet Berghinzo, a sub last year, a logical candidate for a permanent berth this year. Jack Marks is the only varsity backfield man left and on the line there are the veterans, Fox and Mish. A center, three backfield men, and two tackles must be developed along with suitable substitutes before the 29th of September when the season's schedule opens.

The schedule includes nine games with some of the largest teams in the state. Opening with Chapman Tech at New London on Sept. 29th the season will close on Nov. 24th with the Bulkeley game at Norwich. This year there will be no game on Thanksgiving. The season's schedule includes games with Wilby, Warren Harding, Hartford Public High and the Coast Guard Junior Varsity. There are four games away from home and five at the campus. The FARM POSSIBILITIES AND IMPOSSIBILITIES.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

If the farm were simply another means of making money, on a par with retailing and manufacturing, for instance, it would still be a perfectly worthy function.

No one would be warranted in sneering at it or in making fun of it or in denouncing it.

On the other hand, no one would be over-tempted to indulge in eulogiums upon it or to get enthusiastic about it. It would simply take its place in the common ranks as one undistinguished private in the economic squad,

That last, however, is just the thing the farm will not do and cannot be made to do. It won't dress up with other occupations in any drab uniformity. It won't line up with them in any orderly rank. It insists upon its own individuality in an often highly bothersome way.

To some it is an Eden the rewinning of which is their highest human hope; to others it is a sore thumb they would give almost anything to be rid of, or having cured of its cantankerousness.

But it's rarely if ever just a placid business affair. I don't know that any business always runs smoothly. Judging from their talk business men have their bumps, now and then. But farming is practically all one Big Bump. It's a hill-climb on which there are more "thank-ye-moms" than level intervals. It keeps its addicts dodging a good part of the time and guessing most of the remainder.

It isn't like any other vocation in the whole list of human activities.

For four separate and satisfactory reasons; to wit, namely, that is to say:

Ordinary business has just one end and aim, the making money for the business man:

But farming has four ends or aims, each one of which is above and before money-making. These four are, in due order;

1—Building a family;
2—Making a home;
3—Feeding a world;
4—Nurturing real men and women, which terms do not include either dudes or grubbers on the one side nor flappers and feminists on the other.

It has long been a settled conviction of mine that quite too much stress is being laid, these days, on the purely economic side of farming. Of course, farm economics and farm money-earning must be considered. Just as the pile-driven foundations under city sky-scrapers must be considered. As the sky-scraper must have its solid base in order to sustain the soaring upper structure, so the farm must at least pay its way in order to maintain its proper functions of family and home making, or world-feeding, of character building.

But a city-full of massive foundations grinning up out of the mud with no superstructures built on them would be no more tragically absurd that a country-full of farmers whose sole or even chief idea was to make money off their farms.

When you come down to brass tacks about the only possible use of money is to get something else with it,—something one wants more. The business man gathers it in order to buy Rolls-Royces or ocean-going yachts or diamonds or "Old Masters" or—not so infrequently—"little places in the country" where he can crawl out from the business scramble occasionally and kick up his heels and cool them in a more congenial air.

But the farmer has his "little place in the country" to begin with. And I am going to keep right on insisting that the using its products to make families and homes and character is not only more important but, in the end, much more happiness-promoting than the possession of high-priced cars or costly yachts or palaces full of doubtful "Old Masters."

It seems, too, that I am not entirely alone in this contention. In his recent address at the Salem church anniversary, Senator Bingham deserted the dusty fields of politics long enough to make an excursion into this green country lane. I hope he will repeat it in a hundred other towns and cities of the state.

Probably you read the address, as it was reported in The Bulletin, next day. But it won't hurt you to read it again. He said—I quote from The Bulletin report:

"We cannot have successful government by the people unless the people are fit to be governors. We cannot have a citizenry capable of conducting the affairs of state unless we train our young people to carry on the duties of citizenship and give them strength of body and mind to bear its responsibilities.

"A study of our reformatory institutions shows that by far the larger part of their inmates come from city streets rather than from country lanes. On the other hand most of the great leaders in American life have come from country homes.

"The expression 'life on a farm' means different things in different regions. Where the farm is a large institution covering a thousand or more acres of rich arable land where the chief aim and end of the owners is to make money, the atmosphere of farm life is not necessarily any better than that of the industrial life in a great city. On the other hand where the farm has the common attributes of a Connecticut or typical New England farm, with its wide range of possibilities and impossibilities and where the thought is that of a home maker rather than that of a money maker, the conditions for the development of a sound citizenry are the very best.

"Life in the country forces a man to face so many varied problems that he is not only willing, but able to sit down and grapple with the problems of citizenship. He does not have to call a conference of those who know more about a subject than he does before he has a fairly satisfactory solution of the immediate problem. That solution may not be as wise and efficient as the city dweller can get from the conferees. On the other hand the very act of working out the problem has given the country-man new strength to his character and thereby made him of more value as a member of the community."

Perhaps there are those who will give greater heed or at least pay more respectful attention to what an eminent U. S. senator says than to what plain John Farmer writes. Anyway John Farmer owns up that the above is just what he would like to have said, put out more forcibly and convincingly.

The only criticism fairly to be made of it is that, perhaps, it doesn't sharply enough warn of the one great danger to which isolated country-thinking and opinion-forming is liable, i.e., the tendency of such self-determination to degenerate into dogmatism and obstinacy and even bigotry. But that is another question to be considered at another time.

Especially noteworthy is that clause where the senator speaks of "the typical New England farm . . . where the thought is that of a home-maker rather than a money-maker." You'll also note the reference to such a farm's "wide range of possibilities and impossibilities." A superficial thinker would have left out those last two words.

Yet they are never left out of the wise farmer's dictionary. It is quite as essential for him to know what his farm can't do as what it can do. In truth, I fancy that more farm troubles are due to the farmer's failure fully to appreciate what his acres can't do and his persistent endeavor to dragoon them into subservience, than to his ignorance of what they want to do.

I remember once watching a typical old farmer and his son engaged in the winter work of splitting up into stove size the chunks of sawed hickory and maple logs. The older man would end up a more or less knotty block, decide about how he wanted to rive it, and then go at it with main strength and stubbornness to split it just that way. The younger man, on the other hand, seeing how a chunk apparently was willing to split, took off a slab here and a stick there, till he had worn it down to stove capacity. The interesting thing was that he split up about five chunks to his dad's three, and with less work.

On the whole, it is usually wiser to take either a knotty maple chunk or a typical New England farm or the universe, for that matter, about as some wiser power made them, and do the best we can with them. We certainly can't make 'em over, and, the older I grow, the more doubtful I become as to whether we'd much improve them, even if we could "reform" them all exactly to our short-sighted likings.

Taking, first, Senator Bingham's "impossibilities," I should say that one of them is the impossibility of getting very rich on a New England farm.

Taking up, second, his "possibilities," don't you yourself think that the possibility of making a true home and nurturing a worthy family and fostering the development of noble manly and womanly character is really more important than even getting rich?

—If you don't, then in heaven's name get off that farm! You don't belong on it.

CHAMPION SOCONY TEAM GIVEN A CHOWDER SUPPER

Members of the Standard Oil Co., in New London from the village have been cheering for the Socony team to win the flag of the city league. They did come through and Wednesday evening at the Aunt Sarah Peabody club rooms on Water street, the baseball team was given a big blowout. The whole team was present, with the cheering squad and cheer leader, Laurence Sullivan. The room was decorated with oil cans having the words Socony on them. The team colors, blue and white in crepe paper were used and a large sign across the door read "Welcome to the city champions". The room held a crowd of 50. At 8 o'clock an address was made by President Billie Fitzgerald who said: "We are here tonight as club members to help give the Socony team and their cheering squad and friends a real good time, for winning the city league loving cup. A team can't often come up from the bottom of the list to win 7 straight games and catch the Kaseys, who had the flag in their hat bag all put away. But the never-say-die spirit of the oil cans helped them win 8 straight games!" Manager Happy Go-Lucky E Chapman of the team said: "I have not the words to tell of my players and the good work they have done, in bringing home the bacon! A small gold baseball is waiting for the players!" He led in giving the Socony cheer. Supper was then announced by Steward Walter Welles, a haddock chowder, something he oil cans never had before, as it was cooked a new way. Gordon Mahan had had a couple of plates and said: "I don't find any oysters in this stew." Slim Beaney said: "Where are your table manners? In Occum? That is a fish chowder!" and started a laugh. Ice cream and cake with West View coffee finished the feast. Then the Rockefeller trio sang "Under the Old Apple Tree" with 19 parts. Soft shoe dancing was done by Eddie Burns with Huck Taylor at the piano. Laughing Billie Barry broke out his new saxophone that came from his uncle, George Todd in England. He played a double tune. Casey Jones at the Throttle and Smile Awhile. There was a sketch, Maggie and Jiggs at a dinner in Boston that proved a lighting act. At the close of the big time everyone sang "Keep in the Middle of the Road".

Mrs. Bert Jackson was in her yard at her home on Shore avenue and had been mowing the grass. As the sun was down and it was getting dark she finished, put away the lawn mower and started for the house. She got in all right but noticed a large animal that was black and white which she thought was a kitten. But she soon saw her mistake. It was a skunk, but seemed not afraid and tame. She wanted to get him out of the house, so kept the door open. But the visitor was sitting there and did not move. She wanted to get her supper: "Come get out! I want to eat!" Sticking up his ears, the visitor beat it, politely running along, so the lady could eat her beef stew and Maine potatoes. She said that never did she see a skunk that was not afraid but came into the house to make a call. Before she retired for the night she made sure that the doors were locked so the black and white kitten could not come back.

The boat Fishers Island Club was hauled out at Rogers yard Wednesday and will be put in quarters for the winter months in the yard. Foreman Orlando Clark will see that the boat is put in a berth so it will be the first boat out in the spring. Capt. John Jansen was in charge of the boat all summer, making some long trips. Owner Rogers expects the number of boats stored in his yard this fall will break all records. He has a force of 16 men and if a boat comes in the dock during the night broke down or leaking badly he and Parker Wilder will get out of their warm beds to haul out the craft and make repairs, so it can get to its home port. This summer Parker Wilder had to get up at two or three o'clock in the morning to lend some one a hand. One night he put on a bathing suit and with a knife in his teeth went under water to cut a rope which was tangled in a wheel.

WESTERLY

GRANGE DAY, KINGSTON FAIR, VARIETY OF ATTRACTIONS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 13—The second day of Kingston fair on Thursday, although beginning with threatening skies developed into an almost perfect fair day, which brought out increasing crowds, not only from Rhode Island towns but from places in Connecticut as well. The day was special "Grange Day" and the early attendance was made up of representatives of many state granges.

The vaudeville and exhibition of four grange floats brought many to the grandstand at 11:00 a. m. The efforts of versatile Grangers gave the judges, S. C. Damon, John Ladd and Ethel T. James a difficult task in awarding the prizes. The first was awarded Narragansett Grange No. 1 Many compliments were paid Warren Nichols, state inspector of mills and his dozen assistants for this. The float, with farm scene settings, showed the three Graces, Alice Goodwin as Ceres, Helen Tucker as Pomona, and Catherine Nichols, chairman of the committee as Flora. Ed Prentiss was the plowman at the plow.

Exeter Grange float depicted the Queen of the Harvest, a girl with a sheaf of wheat. Hope Valley Grange float was given 4th place, the subject being "The Farmer Feeds Them All." On this float Walter D. Barber represented the father and Alma D. Cahoon, the mother with babe in arms and six small children seated at the dinner table.

In the afternoon the grandstand, with the exception of a small section, was filled, to witness the racing, with a number of very close heats.

In the evening show, with the pageant "Progress," a cast of 300 was used. Elaborate fire works closed the evening.

Following is the program for Friday: Governor's day—8:00 a. m.—Grounds open to the public; 10:00 a. m.—Vaudeville in front of the grandstand with music by band; 11:00 a. m.—Reception to His Excellency, Governor Norman S. Case and staff; 11:30 a. m.—Grand cavalcade of prize winning animals; 12:00 m.—Address of governor and other state officials; 12:45 p. m.—Society will entertain governor and guests at dinner ;1:00 p. m.—Exercises will begin in front of the grandstand and continue through the afternoon consisting of music, vaudeville, horse racing, horse show and dancing by William H. Brown. 2:25 Trot. Purse $1,000. 2:17 Trot. Purse $1,000. 3-year-old Trot. Purse $500; 6:00—Grounds open for the night show; 8:00—Pageant of Progress, under the direction of Weldon Wade; 9:30—Fireworks by the American Fireworks Co., featuring Lindbergh; 11—Grounds closed.

ORDERED CONCESSIONIST TO LEAVE AIR GROUNDS

Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell on Wednesday evening apprehended a number of Rhode Island State college students as they were scaling the fence to the fairgrounds to beat their way into the grounds. Thursday morning, as police custodian of the grounds, he notified a faker on the Midway who had a ball rolling game that he could surrender his sublet contract, as his dealings were not strictly honest.

Mrs. Belle W. McCall of 8 Maple St., tells why:

"Rinso saves clothes"

"The first time I tried Rinso I couldn't believe my eyes—the clothes turned out such a dazzling white!

"And all without any of that scrubbing which was necessary with old-fashioned bar soaps and chips. No wonder the clothes don't wear out so quickly or fray at the edges now!

"Rinso suds aren't lazy! They get after dirt so, that I use it for dishes and pots and pans and all cleaning. It surely makes quick work of grease. Saves your hands, too."

Its rich suds loosen dirt

Women tell us in letter after letter how thick, creamy and lasting Rinso suds are. "Dirt soaks right out," they say. "This way saves the hands," thousands write us. And women everywhere are delighted because Rinso is "So safe!"

Get the big household package in time for next washday. It's all you need—no bar soaps, chips or powders. Marvelous in washers, too; the makers of 34 leading washing machines say, "Use Rinso!"

DANIELSON

LARGE CROWD AT OPENING OF THEATRE.

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 13—With all the glamorous effects usually arranged for such events, the Orpheum theater was reopened to the public tonight after having been closed since early July for a remodeling and renovation and redecoration. There is no exaggeration in relating that the patrons of the house crowding the lobby in over-capacity numbers tonight were, insofar as those who managed to obtain seats was concerned, delighted with what the management has achieved in giving it a better theater than it ever could lay claim to in the past.

If expressions of appreciation mean anything at all, and they must have in an instance where they were so unrestrained and spontaneous, the public shares in the pride of the Putnam Theaters corporation in what has been done for the pleasure and comfort of the patrons of this house.

There could have been very few who failed to sense that a considerable fortune has been spent in making the Orpheum what it is today, a miniature of some of the finest of the large theaters of the country.

Tonight a guest organist, John Kehoe, of Boston, was at the newly installed Kilgen organ, an instrument of rare beauty of tone and an innovation, musically, for picture fans here. Regularly the organ is to be played by Miss Alice Bessette, who has been the highly capable pianist of the theater for several years, and who has taken during the past few months a special course in organ playing with a view to playing the new organ at the Orpheum. The feature picture tonight was Warming Up, with Richard Dix as the star. Town and borough officials were among the special guests of the management at the reopening of the theater tonight.

Now that James R. Walsh, town tax collector for a number of years past, has the nomination of his own party as well as that of the republican party, which, by the way, renominated him Monday evening prior to the democratic caucus of the following night, is assured of reelection it may not be out of the way to say something of the really splendid record he has made in office. Official figures establish that for the years 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926, Mr. Walsh collected and turned over to the town treasurer 98 per cent of the total possible to be collected on the rate books given him. Here is a near approach to perfection, as experienced persons in town administration profess that it is well nigh impossible to collect 100 per cent on any tax list in a town the size of Killingly. On the 1927 list, payment of which was due the past spring, Mr. Walsh is on his way to an equally good record. Herein is a record that has earned Mr. Walsh the distinction of being unanimously nominated not only by attendants at his own democratic party caucus, but as well by the hundreds who attended last Monday evening's republican caucus. And herein, too, is another illustration of how the electors of the town of Killingly, regardless of party affiliations, hold to the Killingly tradition that it is good policy to keep an efficient official in office, whatever may be his party affiliations. Since he has taken office Mr. Walsh has collected upward of $550,000 in tax money.

Following notifications by banks here as well as notices through other channels, for weeks past, it may be reiterated today that Third Liberty loan bonds are due for redemption Saturday of this week, and holders of them who do not care to lose interest on their investments will be turning them in this week end. Danielson commercial banks have expressed the desire to be of service to holders of these bonds in arranging for the payment of them and reinvestment of the proceeds if the owners so desire.

There are indications that there is going to be considerable contesting for the nominations for representative in Killingly this fall. To date two republican candidacies have been announced. Representative Arthur W. Williams, who served in the 1927 session of the legislature, as a republican from Killingly will again be in the field. George Williams, Dayville, a former tax collector of Killingly, also is in the field as a republican. Other persons are talked of as candidates but are not as yet avowedly so. Among these are several democrats, who feel that their party may show exceptional strength in the state election this particular year in Killingly. All of which forecasts lively political events of a local nature.

This fall will not witness any effort to revive the voting machine agitation in Danielson. The proposal appears to "over the dam" for the time being. It will be recalled that voters rather decisively defeated the plan to introduce voting machines in Danielson last year. It was said at the time that the matter was not dead, but there have been no signs of revival, and talk about the subject about town today appeared to meet with a thums down reception. The cost of the devices is held to be one of the chief obstacles against their adoption in this town.

Time to get your chimneys cleaned. Call me for that good service. Chas. Breayea. Tel. 550.—Adv.

Mrs. Ella Stone and daughter, Gertrude of Academy street, were in Providence today for the funeral of Attorney Samuel S. Stone, a relative, and member of the legal firm of Stone and Lovejoy.

Humidity was at such a high point in Danielson today that about every inanimate thing seemed to ooze moisture, with resultant uncomfortableness.

It was understood today, following a meeting of the warden and court of burgesses last night, that selection of a successor to Night Officer John Gebert, resigned, would be deferred for the time being. Chief John McFarland was at the meeting.

Again today J. Carl Witter gave the word "Go" to the drivers in the horse races at Woodstock fair, many others from Danielson being in attendance at the annual exhibition.

A. P. WOODWARD APPOINTED MARSHAL OF PUBLIC SAFETY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 13—As forecast in this column last Monday A. Putnam Woodward, chief of the fire department, was appointed last night at the meeting of the warden and court of burgesses to be marshal of public safety in the borough of Danielson. This is a newly created office under the provisions of a section of the recently adopted and modernized by-laws, which received the approval of electors in a special borough meeting last Saturday evening. The compensation in the new office is to be at the rate of $30 per week. Chief Woodward will take up his new duties October 1.

Creation of this office will bring about a mildly revolutionary condition in Danielson as to "letting things go," wherein menaces to public health and public safety are concerned. Marshal Woodward will make regular inspections in the business area of the community. He will see to it that accumulations of waste materials, creating a fire hazard, are promptly destroyed or removed. In his new office he has the power, under the by-laws, to see that this is done. The same applies to any condition or situation that endangers the public health. Nuisances, it is promised, will be promptly abated. Failure to comply with formal orders of the public safety marshal as to removing fire hazards or situations that endanger the public health will cause the responsible persons to be subject to specified penalties.

As head of the fire department, Chief Woodward has accumulated a book full of experience to guide him in making Danielson a more healthful and safer place in which to live. There is advance assurance that he will receive the co-operation of the public in his newly created position, and all that is to be done may be the means, in due time, of bringing about a higher classification of the borough's property, as to fire insurance rates. If this is achieved, there is the prospect of lower rates on much of the property within the zones that Marshal Woodward will cover.

In various parts of the town enumerators are engaged just now in listing children of school age, as is done every September. The number enumerated is the basis of establishing how much the state shall pay this town toward meeting the cost of the schools.

In Attawaugan a contractor who has put in more than a mile of concrete roadway on the Danielson-Putnam trunk line is now engaged with the work of building a new bridge where the Assawaga river flows through the village, and with getting road shoulders in shape, and building retaining walls at properties cut into during the building operations. The route is open to traffic without interruption.

Max Bretschneider, who has been at Horton, Kan., for more than a year in the engineering department of one of the great western railroads, is visiting here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arndt Brettschneider of Mechanic street. Mr. Bretschneider is a graduate of Killingly high school and of Northeastern university at Boston, where he received a degree as an electrical engineer.

The new home in this district of the Danielson office of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, at the northwest corner of Main and Academy streets, is almost ready for occupancy. The property has been in course of remodeling since early summer. The structure, as it stands today, is an important addition to Danielson's business section.

It was said today that there is no immediate prospect of any concern taking over the local plant of the Connecticut Mills for operation. This fine plant has stood idle for going on a year, and all rumors as to its being taken over by this or that manufacturing concern have, evidently, been placed on nothing more substantial than a hope that it might be true.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, officer in charge of the Danielson barracks of the state police, is in daily attendance at the trial of the alleged "ice-box" bandits in Willimantic. Lieut. Urquhart spent much time investigating the case prior to and following the arrest of the accused, Raymond and Lalone. State Officer Elton Nolan also is attending the trial.

At the home in North Foster where he was born and where his father lived before him, Elmer F. Stone, aged 67 years, died this morning after an illness of months. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. and Emily Stone, old residents of the town of Foster, just over the line from the town of Killingly. He leaves his wife and two stepsons, Manford Young of West Gloucester, R. I., and Willoughby Young of Foster. Mrs. John A. Gilbert of Danielson is an aunt of Mr. Stone's.

PUTNAM

WEBSTER MAN FILES CLAIM FOR REWARD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 13—The Lalone-Raymond trial, now in progress at Willimantic, has again brought to the fore the claim of Thomas L. Martin of Webster, Mass., for the reward offered by the state of Connecticut for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayers of State Trooper Irving H. Nelson on the night of April 6.

Mr. Martin, who is employed as a starter for the Acme Bus Line terminal in Webster, has filed affidavits with officials of this state in proof of his claim for the $1,000 and has received a letter from Gov. John H. Trumbull promising him that his rights will be safeguarded and that the attention of the prosecutor will be directed to the affidavits, which, if found correct, will entitle the Webster man to a share or to the whole reward.

According to Martin's story, on the night of April 6, the night of the killing of Officer Nelson, he was the one to whom the general alarm was spread to be on the lookout for the bandit car. Nothing developed, however, until the following Monday night, April 9, when his continued search for information gave him the necessary clue that led to the apprehension of Raymond and Lalone.

While in conversation with a taxi driver of Webster, Frank Spiewakowski, alias Spinne, Martin found that on Friday evening, April 9, Spinne had been hired by two strangers in front of the YD lunch wagon at Webster and was directed to drive them over a certain route to Worcester. Further questioning by Martin led him to believe the passengers were the men wanted by the Connecticut authorities for the murder of the Danielson officer.

He immediately got in touch with Officer Roy Burns of the Webster police and Sheriff Gilbert Osborne of Worcester county. The following morning, Osborne, accompanied by Officer Donald E. Geddes of the Danielson state police barracks, brother officer and close friend of the slain Nelson, had Spinne drive them over the route taken on the previous Friday evening. The result was that both Raymond and Lalone were taken into custody shortly after.

This, however, did not end Martin's detective work. He secured several other witnesses who identified Lalone and Raymond as having been in Webster on the night of the murder, including one Langevin, a schoolmate of the accused, who, with Spinne's identification, are considered to be stumbling blocks in the attempted alibi of the prisoners, who claim they were in a Worcester theatre at the time of the slaying of Officer Nelson.

In support of Martin's story and claims are signed affidavits from James H. Hetherman, chief of the Webster police; Officer Roy Burns of the Webster police, and Sheriff Osborne of Worcester county, together with one from Frank Spiewakowski, driver of the taxi which took Lalone and Raymond to Worcester from Webster after they had abandoned their car at Dudley.

The fact that Spinne had deemed the incident of so little importance as to keep it quiet for four days, when a systematic man hunt in three states was being pursued by the authorities and Martin's quick-wittedness in unearthing the one clue that led to the arrest, is a strong factor in his attempt for the $1,000 reward.

As partial recognition of his able work and realization of the opportunities afforded him by his recognition to aid the police, Mr. Martin has received an appointment to the Webster police force.

POLITICAL GATHERING AT WOODSTOCK SATURDAY

PUTNAM, Sept. 13—Eastern Connecticut's largest political gathering since William McKinley's election as president, will be at Woodstock Hill on Saturday, providing the weather man reserves a bit of sunshine for that particular day. This afternoon enthusiasm was keyed up to such a point that no one dared estimate the hundreds and possibly the thousands that will gather at the mass meeting of the Windham County Hoover and Curtis club.

The programme as arranged by the committee headed by Clarence W. Bowen of Woodstock Hill, secretary of the organization, is now complete. From 2 until 3 o'clock the Governor's Foot Guard band, under the direction of Lieut. William B. Tasillo, Fairman's Concert band and Symphony orchestra of Providence, Roswell Fairman, conductor, and the Willimantic Elks' band under the direction of Charles N. C. Wheeler, will render the musical programme.

The speaking programme will open at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Thomas B. Powell of Woodstock Hill, will offer prayer. Sheriff Charles A. Gates of Willimantic, president of the club, will deliver the opening remarks, followed by an address by Gov. John H. Trumbull of Connecticut. Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, vice-chairman of the Hoover-Curtis advisory campaign committee, will be one of the most nationally known speakers. Will Irwin, nationally known writer, editor and author of the "Life of Herbert Hoover," will address the meeting. Senator Hiram Bingha mof Connecticut is also included on the list of speakers. J. Henry Roraback of the republican state central committee of Connecticut, Richard P. Freeman, member of congress from Connecticut, and Frederic C. Walcott, candidate for United States senator from Connecticut, are also on the list.

The committee has arranged for an amplifier to be installed, so that the persons seated or standing far in the rear will be able to hear as well as those seated directly in front of the speakers. Plenty of seats will be provided as arrangements for such have been made with various resorts in this vicinity where benches may be obtained.

Not only will Windham county and Connecticut be represented, but delegations from all over New England and even more distant points will come to Putnam Friday evening and will go to Woodstock Hill on the following day. Alfred P. Sloane, president of General Motors, has been extended an invitation to attend, but until late afternoon he had not informed the committee of his acceptance.

With the final preparations made for the mass meeting the committee now only hopes that excellent weather conditions will be provided to have the history-making event pass as eastern Connecticut's greatest of the past quarter of a century.

Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Beard will return to the orient on Sept. 28, sailing from San Francisco. Dr. and Mrs. Beard are in Putnam for a short stay with Mrs. Beard's sister and brother, Miss Emma and Elbert J. Kinney, of Center street. They have spent about a year in this country, Dr. Beard making several lectures on his life and the conditions of China. They will be departing on their sixth trip to China, where they have spent 34 years of their lives. For over a decade Mr. Beard was president of Foo Chow college, and during the recent strife between the northern and southern armies, both he and his wife were in constant danger, their work being in the center of the numerous conflicts. Mr. Beard is not at present assured as to what his official work will be on his return, since the college is in the hands of the Chinese, but he expects to act as an advisor to the college officials.

Their daughters are to return to their studies at Oberlin college in Oberlin, Ohio.

Sunshine and cloudless skies today doubled the crowds at Woodstock fair, as the gates were fairly swarmed with people seeking admittance this afternoon. Yesterday, the crowd was not so large since threatening rain kept hundreds at home, although numbers did accept the dare of the unpleasant weather, which did not break until early evening. Today the exhibits and horse racing were the center of interest. Some of the best racers in southern New England were entered for the ribbons and a number of the prize winning events were close.

Sergt. George Liard and Special Officer Fred Bechard of the Putnam police department departed this morning to answer their summons recently served on them, demanding their appearance at the trial of Albert J. Raymond and Roland G. Lalone, alleged slayers of State Policeman Nelson, now being tried for murder at Willimantic.

Officer Bechard narrowly escaped being in a collision, when the two bandits, speeding up School street in their car a few moments after they had fired the fatal shots into the body of Officer Nelson, crowded him from the highway, running him into a ditch. Officer Bechard received a fairly good glimpse of the bandit car, although he was unaware of who was riding in the enclosed vehicle. Sergeant Liard was on duty in the business section when the car rounded the silent policeman in Bugbee square; he also obtained a mind picture of the car and gazed on the silhouettes of the driver and occupants. Sergeant Liard said before leaving that it would be impossible for him to identify either Lalone or Raymond as being in the car that passed him.

Friday evening will mark the opening of the year 5689, according to the Jewish calendar, and Jews all over the universe will usher in the new year with impressive services at synagogues. In Putnam all members of the faith are today preparing for the new year. Services will be held at the synagogue on Main street Friday evening. Announcements were made today that all business would be suspended among the members of the faith on Friday evening, continuing over Saturday. "Rosh Hashannah" is the term applied to the new year.

Announcements were made today by the registrars of voters that 500 new voters will cast ballots in the fall elections this year. This is one of the city's largest enrollments. It is not known the exact number registered in each party.

Supt. of Schools Leon N. Farrin today was engaged in solving the problem of the crowded conditions at the Israel Putnam school. At present the grades have been doubled in the fifth and sixth courses. At the Smith street school, in the north end of the city, only about 80 pupils are enrolled, the smallest in several years. Schools in Putnam Heights have been closed and the pupils are being transferred to the Israel Putnam school by local taxi drivers. It was thought today that the situations could be eliminated if the Putnam Heights pupils were taken directly to the Smith street school, since they have no distance to walk to school. This motion is to be referred to the town school committee tonight at their monthly meeting.

STOCK MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE, WITH THE FINAL QUOTATIONS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Frequent shifts of speculative sentiment characterized today's stock market, with final quotations decidedly irregular. The market sold off sharply in early trading when distinct weakness developed in the amusement group, but the lowering of call money rates and rumors of early gold imports from Great Britain helped to revive bullish enthusiasm and stimulated the resumption of pool activities in a select assortment of specialties.

Considerable nervousness was apparent throughout the session over the federal reserve brokers' loans report to be issued after the close, Wall street estimates of the increase ranging all the way from $50,000,000 to $150,000,000. The actual figures showed an increase of $95,982,000, bringing the total to $4,386,191,000. No change was made in the 5 per cent. rediscount rate.

The weekly statement also disclosed increased holdings of government securities by the federal reserve bank. It was pointed out, however, that this did not indicate any change in federal reserve policy, but merely temporary taking over of securities of correspondent banks incidental to the retirement of the Third Liberty loan Sept. 15. The mid-month turnover of government funds, including the new treasury financing and income tax payments, involves about $2,000,000,000. Government withdrawals on Sept. 15 will be unusually large, totaling about $93,000,000 from all federal reserve banks.

The reaction in today's market was widely regarded as a natural readjustment of a top-heavy speculative position following the recent spirited advance. The break in the amusement shares was inspired in part, by official denials that the Warner Bros.-Stanley Co., merger announced yesterday contemplated the inclusion of any other theatres or chains for the present. Warner Bros., common and a stock each broke about 14 points, but rallied slightly from their lows. Fox Film dropped 7 points and recovered 1 1-8 and Stanley and Keith-Albee showed net declines of 4 1-2 and 3 1-4, respectively.

Brooklyn Union Gas soared 13 points to a new high record at 162 on unconfirmed reports that it was to be taken over by the recently consolidated United Light & Power and the American Light & Traction Co., controlled by the Mellon interests. Westinghouse Manufacturing changed hands in large volume on persistent reports of an early merger with Baldwin Locomotive and other companies, but after moving up to within about a point of the year's high it cancelled the day's gain.

Revival of activity and strength in the oil shares was accompanied by unconfirmed rumors of an early announcement of a world curtailment of crude oil program. Texas corporation crossed 71 to a new peak and mid-continent sold above 24 for the first time this year. New peak prices for the year, or longer, also were registered by such popular shares as Chrysler, Packard, Graham Paige, Murray corporation, Johns Manville, Davison Chemical and Standard Commercial Tobacco, the last- named responding to reports of a 10 per cent stock dividend tomorrow.

American Linseed broke 6 points, Warren Bros. 5 3-4, Curtiss nearly 4 and the American Tobacco issues. International Telephone, Briggs Manufacturing, Case Threshing, Lambert and Victor Talking Machine yielded 2 points or more.

Cotton prices broke $1.70 to nearly $2.50 a bale with selling influenced by better weather reports. Wheat prices closed a shade lower. Coffee and sugar quotations showed little change.

Call money renewed at 7 1-2 and then dropped to 7 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates held firm.

Sterling cables established another new low at $4.85 1-32 and then rallied slightly. Japanese yen broke 13 points to $45.50 cents.

JEWETT CITY

ASHLAND OPERATIVES TO HAVE OUTING SEPT. 29

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 13—At a well attended meeting of the operatives of the Ashland Cotton company, it was decided to go ahead with the proposed outing for the operatives of the company and their families. The meeting was held at the Ashland club and superintendents. F. L. Stebbins and William J. Duggan were the company's representatives. Various plans were discussed and the date set for Saturday September 29th. The outing will be held at Ashland park and judging from the enthusiasm expressed at the meeting it should go over as the biggest event of its kind ever held in eastern Connecticut. It seems safe to estimate at this early date that upwards of 1,000 will attend. F. L. Stebbins and William J. Duggan were appointed a general committee with the power to appoint other committees.

Last clambake of the season. Quinebaug camp, Sun., 1 p. m.—adv.

PACHAUG GRANGE FAIR OPENS FOR EIGHTH SEASON

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 13—Pachaug grange fair opened its eighth annual exhibition Thursday, a large number attending. The afternoon was given over to the children, the schools in Griswold, Voluntown and Lisbon being closed to enable the pupils to attend. The houses are full of splendid exhibits. One house is devoted to junior entries and represents much hard work on the part of the children. Mrs. W. B. Montgomery is superintendent of this house. Mrs. R. H. Young assistant. The 4-H club canning exhibit, and the garden vegetables, pumpkins, potatoes, beans, corn, peppers, tomatoes, beets, cabbages, kale, New Zealand spinach, Swiss chard and carrots are just as fine as those the elders' exhibited. Three pounds of potatoes were given several of the children, and a dozen large bags of potatoes are the result.

One 4-H club boy, Stuart Babcock of Norwich, exhibited Italian bees and queen, Caucasian bees and queen, extracted comb and candied honey.

The children also showed many varieties of flowers. The Voluntown Center and Wylie schools had a remarkable showing of 135 examples of the problem fusion method used in teaching. A dog whose home is in an inn near London makes frequent journeys to nearby towns to visit his friends, disdaining to walk, he boards a bus, climbs upstairs and crawls under a seat. GOODRICH HOLDUP STORY AWAITS VERIFICATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 13—After investigating the report of Theodore Goodrich, East Lyme milkman, that he was held up at the point of a revolver by two negroes on Fitch avenue yesterday for the purpose of robbery and that only because of his presence of mind in pulling his own revolver and sending one or more bullets into the body of one of the crooks, he would probably have been relieved of his money, if not slain, the police are inclined to disbelieve Goodrich's story. The declaration of Goodrich, however, is still under investigation and within another 24 hours, it is almost positive that it will be decided without a question of doubt whether Goodrich told the truth or manufactured the story. According to Goodrich he was in the act of delivering milk about 5.30 and as he drove his car through the thoroughfare he was held up by the two Negroes, one of whom wore over his face a dark colored handkerchief with holes cut in it for his eyes. Goodrich declared that the Negro with the handkerchief ordered the milk man to hold up his hands and when the latter failed to do so, but struck at the Negro's arm, the latter dropped the hand within which was the revolver. At the same time, Goodrich said that he pulled his own revolver and started firing, sending three or four shots at the Negro. As the Negro either fell or jumped from the automobile after receiving a bullet wound, he ran down the highway followed by his companion, the two entering a touring car parked beside the road driving away. Goodrich then went to police headquarters and made a report of the supposed holdup. Officers who investigated Goodrich's story found the handkerchief it was claimed that the Negro who went to the automobile wore, also found a smeared section of the road, which indicated that the discoloration was blood from the Negro's wound and which led from where the holdup was supposed to take place to the bandits' car.

If the Negro was shot and not killed, he would be compelled to seek medical aid, but the police have not been informed of anyone seeking the treatment for the wound. Today, Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh took the handkerchief, which was stained, apparently with blood, to the state laboratory for analysis that the substance on it can be determined.

Goodrich claimed to have been held up and robbed some time ago, but he never reported the incident to the police.

CANDIDATES AWAITING JUDGE CALKINS' RETURN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 13—Political backers of Probate Judge Arthur B. Calkins, now on a vacation in Maine, are of the belief that he may reconsider his recent statement that he intended to retire and would not be a candidate for the office which he has held for the past seventeen years. Russell H. Corcoran, United States commissioner and Nathan Belcher seem to be the most aggressive aspirants for the office and in all probability will be candidates should Judge Calkins stick by his determination. Attorney J. James Floyd, an avowed candidate for the place, has the support of several leaders in the party. The probate district includes the towns of Waterford and New London.

Connecticut college this year has several foreign students. Chief among them is Senora Carolina Arellano de Jorry of Santiago, Chile. She will live at the home of Mrs. Anna C. Cary and her daughter, Prof. Esther Cary, chairman of the department of romance languages at the school, of No. 7 Fremont avenue. Senora de Jorry plans to enter classes of design, also studying English and art. She is connected with the most famous families of South America and is a young lady of striking beauty and winsome personality. Her life has been chiefly spent in prominent government society of her native country and has had the honor to dance with the prince of Wales on two different occasions, once in San Francisco and again in her own home city. She also knows Prince Umberto of Italy and Prince Fernando de Bourbon of Spain.

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. Augusta Jaeger of 193 Shaw street last night on her 80th birthday. The affair was held in the lodge rooms of the auxiliary to the Order of Sons of Herman. Sisters of the lodge served a tempting supper after which there were games and dancing. Mrs. Jaeger received many gifts.

The auxiliary of the Home Memorial hospital will hold its first fall meeting tomorrow afternoon at the hospital. During the first part of the meeting the members will sew.

Will Rogers, famous humorist and commentor, yesterday paid a two hour visit to Fred Stone, still a patient at the Lawrence Memorial hospital following his airplane accident last month. The two chatted merrily. It is understood that they discussed details of Stone's new play, the leading male part of which is to be played by the cowboy humorist, Mr. Stone's daughter will play the stellar feminine role.

THREE RUNAWAY GIRLS ARE FOUND IN NEW HAVEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 13—Three young girls, residents of Norwood, R. I., who ran away from home yesterday and for the return of whom their parents, brothers and sisters have been making a search, were arrested in New Haven tonight. A brother and two sisters of one of the girls, the daughter of a prominent family, left New London at 9 o'clock tonight by automobile for New Haven, where the three girls will be turned over to them and then taken back to Norwood. The father of one of the girls yesterday afternoon notified the local police of the girls having run away from home and said that he anticipated that they were in New London. Last night a brother of one of the girls came to New London and when no trace of the missing girls was found, he continued to New York. This afternoon two sisters of the girl came here by automobile in furtherance of the search and a short time afterwards the brother returned here from New York. Later the father of one of the girls notified the police that he had received information that the girls were in New Haven. The police of that city were communicated with in an effort to intercept the runaways and it was then revealed that the girls had been arrested a few minutes before when they were found loitering at the New Haven railroad station.

New London lodge No. 344, Loyal Order of Moose has voted to participate in the Armistice day celebration and parade scheduled for November 11. It is announced that a picnic will be held by the Moose Sunday at Independent hall, Waterford.

Keen rivalry exists in Groton over the tickets for the town election October 1. At the republican town caucus held last night the following men were re-nominated: First Selectman Charles B. Buckley; board of relief for three years, Edmund G. Chesebro of Mystic; first selectman, Clark B. Whaley; second selectman, Henry J. Latham; agent of the town deposit fund, Louis P. Allyn, Mystic, Irving E. Crouch, Groton and Alden Fish, Noank; auditor, George R. Ather, Groton; tax collector, Irving H. Poppe, Groton; constables, Thomas Fox Groton, Harold E. Chester, Noank; school visitors for three years, Miss Betsy B. Larrabee, of Groton.

But two cases of intoxication are on the blotter at police headquarters tonight. One was arrested on Main street and the other on North Bank street. Both men were arrested by Patrolman Dennis Murphy and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow.

Nathan Peck, whose automobile has been stolen and recovered twice within a month seems to be given constant attention by thieves for this afternoon he reporte dto the police that last night a spare tire was stolen from the car while it was parked in front of his residence, 261 Huntington street.

After the summer vacation members of the John Winthrop club held the first meeting of the fall this week in the club quarters on Brainard street. Every Wednesday there will be a bridge party for members and their guests and a series of contests with prizes has been arranged for the coming social season.

J. F. Goodrich, 47 School street, Hartford, drove his automobile to Bank street Tuesday night and parked it near the corner of Golden street. While he was absent some one stole a black walrus bag from the running board.

Two automobiles were stolen in New London Tuesday night, evidently by young men for a joy ride. A Ford coupe, carrying Connecticut registration N-1921, 1921 model, owned by Mrs. Esther Bliven, 111 Huntington street, was stolen from her residence, and later was found by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin, abandoned. The car owned by Manuel Nunes, 107 Thames street, Groton, was stolen from its parking place on Huntington street, near Washington street. This car also was a Ford, but was a sedan and was found a short distance from where it was taken.

EIGHT CANDIDATES HUSTLING TO GET VOTES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 13—The eight candidates who will seek election as members of the city council at the election to be held the 24th inst., are already conducting a systematic campaign. They realize that the vote 10 days away will not be as heavy as it was Monday when none of the candidates received a majority vote, mandatory because of charter provisions. At the next election the four receiving the highest number of votes will be declared elected and the candidate receiving the highest vote will automatically become mayor. The candidates receiving the highest votes at the last election were: Malcolm M. Scott, Robert B. Chappell, William C. Fox and John F. Murray. Messrs Scott, Chappell and Murray are seeking re-election and Mr. Fox, a former member of the council, is seeking a return to public office.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

"Four Sons," Fox production, is the feature today and tomorrow at the Broadway theatre where it opened last night.

Briefly, it is the simple, intensely human story of a mother and her four sons. The theme is faith—the faith of the mother in humanity. In spite of all the troubles that beset the old lady, her confidence remains unbroken.

The role of the mother is beautifully portrayed by Margaret Mann, the sixty year old extra who achieved everlasting film fame through her remarkable performance in this production. The four sons are no less admirably played by James Hall, Charles Morton, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., and George Meeker.

With all the fanfare and interest of an historical event, the Broadway theatre introduced to the people of Norwich the invention that has revolutionized the motion picture industry and enhanced the entertainment value of the screen, Vitaphone talking pictures.

The very same artists who thrilled a New York audience when Vitaphone made its debut in the center of the theatrical world will be present in the Vitaphone presentation program at the Broadway theatre where the device which has evoked the praises of scientists, editorialists and artists will be displayed for the first time to the motion picture fans of this city.

Vitaphone, with its roster of famous artists such as Al Jolson, Fannie Brice, Gigli, Martinelli, Talley, Carillo, Dolores Costello, Conrad Nagel, Irene Rich, Van and Schenck, Winnie Lightner, Joe E Brown, Lionel Barrymore, Mischa Elman, Rosa Raisa, Willie and Eugene Howard and Elsie Janis will come to the Broadway theatre because the management desires to give local theatre-goers the best that the amusement world affords. A new thrill, never before known to local motion picture audiences, awaits the people of this city when they see and hear Vitaphone talking pictures.

Breed Theatre

What is declared to be Milton Sills' greatest characterization since "The Sea Hawk" is to be seen at the Breed theatre here today and Saturday in "Burning Daylight," the First National Pictures version of Jack London's dramatic and spectacular novel of Alaska.

Sills, as the prospector who is famous all over the northland for his daring, strength and vision, dominates the story with his virile personality. "Burning Daylight" has as its background the frozen north, with the goldrush to Dawson as its particular setting.

During this spectacular period, Jack London visited Alaska and from it he wrote "Burning Daylight," after the nickname of its principal character.

Nowhere in the literature that has been written about the Alaska of those days, could be found a story easily adaptable to motion pictures, and from it First National has made a sweeping, dramatic story.

Doris Kenyon heads the supporting cast in the feminine lead, with such players as Arthur Stone, Jane Winton, Stuart Holmes, Lawford Davidson, Fred Warren, Frank Hagney, "Big Boy" Williams, Jack MacDonald and others in support.

Charles Brabin directed the film.

Palace Theatre

Jack Holt is back again in Zane Grey productions. This news will be greeted by popular acclaim by fans of both author and star. Paramount has brought them back together in "The Vanishing Pioneer" which opened yesterday at the Palace theatre for a three day engagement.

"The Vanishing Pioneer" is the latest Zane Grey production starring Jack Holt. Fans also will be glad to have the opportunity of witnessing a father and son both in the same production. We refer to young Tim Holt, son of the star, and who is 7 years old. For the time he is privileged to act with his illustrious father, he does very well.

The supporting cast is excellent. William Powell, the suave villain, has a leading and important part. Also Fred Kohler, the sneering one, who has brought fame to himself with George Bancroft, does an effective piece of work. Sally Blane, one of the prettiest feminine actresses on the screen plays opposite Jack Holt. Others in the cast are Guy Oliver, Roscoe Karns and Marcia Mannon.

Strand Theatre.

There's a stirring drama of the Russian revolution coming to the Strand Theatre, entitled "The Scarlet Lady." It is produced upon a lavish scale by Columbia Pictures and features Lya de Putti, Don Alvarado and Warner Oland. The plot revolves around a revolutionist and her love for a prince.

The action is tense from the first flash commencing with a meeting of revolutionists in an underground den. The gathering is broken up by the arrival of a guard of Cossacks. Lya, the beautiful peasant girl barely escapes and seeks to elude capture by hiding in the bed of the prince.

When she is discovered Lya makes such a pitiful plea that the prince allows her to remain in the palace. Don Alvarado does some exceptionally fine work as the prince and Lya de Putti is fascinating as the peasant girl. She makes herself obnoxious around the palace and is ordered to leave.

While she is meditating whether to leave or not, Zaneriff, a role assumed by Warner Oland, glides into the palace and pleads with the girl to return to her people. They are discovered by a valet and put to flight by the arrival of the guards. Lya flees to the prince and for several days the two enjoy a prolonged love dream.

N. L. County Fair

These are indeed busy days for all hands engaged in making final arrangements for the big county fair to be held September 27, 28 and 29. L. A. Delorme of Woonsocket, R. I., Canadian government agent, who is in charge of the big exhibit featured by the department of trade and commerce of the Canadian government, has written to the committee advising that he would personally be in charge of the exhibit and be assisted by two other men in his department. The display of farm products, fruits, vegetables and special native products, together with photographs and pictures showing attractive scenery of Canada, will be of deep interest to all who see this beautiful exhibit in the dancing pavillion on the fair ground. Since this feature has been first announced, very many people who saw the exhibit at the large fairs in New England and elsewhere have complimented the committee on securing an attraction of such character.

Tells Dyspeptics What To Eat

Strict Diets Often Unnecessary

Many foods have a strong tendency to produce excessive stomach acidity and consequent indigestion. By omitting from daily meals those foods that experience proves do not agree and limiting the diet to certain tasteless unappetizing foods, stomach troubles may, in many instances, be slowly overcome.

A more popular plan, however, is to eat the foods we like best and follow them with a good safe alkaline that will free the stomach of its excess acidity, thus preventing gas, sourness and all distress and permitting normal, painless digestion.

Thousands of people who used to find meal time a nightmare now eat as they please and keep their stomachs strong, sweet and free from acid and their digestion perfect by using a little Bisurated Magnesia—powder or tablets—after every meal.

Bisurated Magnesia instantly neutralizes excess acid in the stomach, stops sourness, breaks up gas and ends dyspepsia pain. Hearty meals digest as naturally as in the stomach of a healthy child. It must do this for you or any reliable druggist will return its small cost. Make the test today.

NORWICH TOWN

JUDGE LIBBY BUYS LAND NEAR ULMER-COLES SITES

A private sale of five acres of land on Harland Road, took place Thursday morning, when Judge Arthur F. Libby, of Norwich Town, purchased the property from Thomas Smith. This location is almost at the extreme top of the hill on the right, a knoll which has a commanding view. It is rumored that Judge Libby at some future date will build a home on this picturesque spot. Some years ago Mr. Smith purchased a large tract of land on this road. He had a modern house constructed with the intention of occupying it with his family. This was sold some time ago to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hall and family. At present another new home of similar type is nearing completion for Mr. Smith. The sale of land Thursday morning involved his last available house site in that section. Much of the land in question has quite a depth, with just enough frontage to make all three pieces of property attractive.

Besides many other new homes that have been constructed, since this original country road was converted into an excellent state highway, beginning from the Washington street approach, on either side, others are under way.

The frame is already up for a new home for Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Ulmer, of Broadway, and a cellar is being dug for Dr. and Mrs. Frank D. Coles, now of Boswell avenue, above Greeneville, who intend to locate there. A few years ago, Attorney George Houghton Gilman and Francis Gilman, purchased from Dr. R. D. Hill, an immense tract of fine land, much of which has been staked off and sold as desirable building plots, on which houses are to be erected for several owners. The land was originally part of the old Cobb farm, Mr. Ulmer's house being built on one corner of the lane, while Dr. Coles' house will be on the opposite side of the lane, though his land was purchased from the present owners who retains that half of the farm. The lane leads up from the state highway about mid-way of the entire farm as it was originally, years ago. These two homes will have an ideal frontage, on corner lots.

Miss Lucy Abbott, superintendent of Backus hospital, is to be the speaker at the Sunday evening service of the Methodist Young People's C. E. society. The theme will be "The Service of Science to Human Life," Ps. 8: 1-9, will be the Scripture reference. Mrs. William Weaver, chairman of the prayer meeting committee, will have charge of the meeting, which will be open to all interested.

It is expected that the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter and Mrs. Potter (Helen Haviland) will return to Norwich Town at the week end following two weeks' stay at Niantic. Rev. Mr. Potter will resume church activities at Sunday morning worship.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strong, of Colchester, called on Norwich Town friends Thursday afternoon.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Frederick H. Bushnell

Following a serious illness since early spring, having been confined to her bed for about ten days, critically ill with an incurable affliction of the throat, the life of Mrs. Frederick H. Bushnell (Henrietta Rose), 66, came to a peaceful close Thursday evening about 6:25 at her home on Huntington avenue. Born in Bozrah, July 2, 1862, she was the daughter of Reuben Porter and Mary Emily Rose, for many years esteemed resident of Norwich Town. She was united in marriage with Frederick H. Bushnell July 30, 1884, at her home at the Rose farm, Wauwecus Hill, by Rev. Frederick D. Baker, then pastor of Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church.

Besides her husband she is survived by her aged mother, Mrs. Reuben T. Rose, 88, who resided in the same house; a brother, Frank R. Rose of Wauwecus Hill; two nephews, Rev. Francis H. Rose of the Philippines, who at present is in Norwich, and Harold A. Rose of Huntington avenue.

She was a member of the W. C. T. U., of Norwich Town Methodist church, and of the Dorcas Home Missionary society of this church and, for several years served as its president. She sang in the choir of this church for several years, also by request, sang many times at Sheltering Arms services and other places, that she might bring cheer to the sick and shut-ins. She was organist at this church for many years, having begun this service when a young girl.

When only 12 she was converted and at 21 she united with this church, where she has since been a faithful member. Her husband served as superintendent of the Sunday school all through the years, while his wife was so active in the church.

During her illness she has been devotedly cared for by her nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Rose. Rev and Mrs. Francis Rose for several days have been at the Bushnell home to render assistance in every possible way.

Mrs. Bushnell was well known throughout eastern Connecticut in religious circles. For many seasons she was an attendant at Willimantic Camp meeting. A loving wife, daughter and sister, she will be keenly missed. A truly Christian woman, she lived the life she professed and her influence will be a lasting memory with many. Much sympathy has been expressed for the bereaved family in this time of sorrow.

The C. E. society of Norwich Town Congregational church has cancelled its Sunday evening service to enable its members to attend with others in the parish the mass meeting to be held at 7:30 (d. s. t.), at Hanover Congregational church, Rev. Dwight C. Stone, pastor. There will be two interesting speakers, Miss Caroline Smiley of Boston and Miss Sylvina Norton, president of the Congregational Home Missionary union of Connecticut.

Mrs. John Larned of Stafford Springs was the guest Thursday of her mother, Mrs. Rosa Kinney, at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Weaver, of Huntington Green.

NEGRO AND INDIAN GIRL ARE TO MARRY

After residents of the town of Ledyard had complained that a young Negress was being harbored for immoral purposes by several Negroes and White men in a small shack in a deserted section of the town, Sergeant Henry J. Albright and Trooper Peter Busch of the Groton state police barracks raided the shack Wednesday and arrested Albert E. Carpenter, Negro, of 157 West Main street, Norwich, and Frances Geer, 18-year old full blooded Indian girl of 154 West Main street, Norwich. A statutory charge was lodged against the pair and when they pleaded guilty in the justice court at Ledyard Wednesday night each was fined $5 and costs with the understanding that they would get married the next day. Both denied that the house had been frequented by any other Negroes or white men.

It was learned that the Indian girl had run away from her home about two weeks ago, following a disagreement with her father, and since then she had been living with Carpenter in the shack at Ledyard.

MAYOR NOT FREE FROM PAYING TICKET TAX

According to the interpretation of Chief Field Deputy W. Ellery Allyn, of the United States internal revenue department, even a mayor is not exempt from paying the tax due the government on complimentary tickets to fights. If city or state officials are admitted free as spectators, they must pay the tax due on the seats they hold. The interpretation is far reaching and also applied to newspapermen not reporting the actual events and to fight promoters, announcers and employes. Anyone not showing a special duty to perform at these sporting events must pay the tax, it was announced by Deputy Allyn's ruling.

HURRICANE, CURVING EAST, MIGHT SPEND FORCE AT SEA

It is Feared That a Crowded Lane of Shipping Would Be Largely Helpless Before a Storm of Such Intensity—Storm Warnings Are Kept Up at Cuba, the Bahamas and Florida — Director of the Red Cross is Going to Porto Rico to Direct Relief Work—Many Lives Have been Lost and the Damage Will Reach Many Millions of Dollars.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP)—Borne on a hurricane's back desolation and death rode ruthlessly across the sunny palm-decked islands of the Caribbean today, and it was feared that when the dust and debris of the storm's fury settled the spectres of famine and disease would be found stalking in its wake.

The seriousness of the situation was emphasized when the American Red Cross dispatched its national director of disaster relief to Porto Rico, which bore the first brunt of the lashing storm and suffered untold damage and loss of life. Shortly afterward the navy made ready to send several of its ships should a request for help come through.

Across Porto Rico the storm swept, leveling all in its path, upward along the northeast coast of Santo Domingo and on in the general direction of the Bahamas and the southeastern coast of the United States.

Around noon today there seemed to be a tendency toward a curve eastward, the previous storm center direction of west-northwest being variously reported to have altered to northwest and north-northwest. This seemed to promise immunity to Cuba and possibly even the Bahamas and Florida, but storm warnings were kept up and nothing was taken for granted.

If the curve eastward should increase, damage ashore would be enormously lessened, but the menace of wholesale death would probably merely be transferred from land to sea. Should the storm change its path to avoid the Bahamas and Florida it would cut directly across the course of Canal traffic in the open sea, a crowded lane of shipping that would be largely helpless before a storm of such intensity.

There was no assurance, however, hurricanes being the freakish phenomena they are, that the incipient curve would increase or even hold its own. In late afternoon the national observatory at Havana estimated on the basis of the direction obtaining at that time that the storm then sweeping forward at more than 100 miles an hour, would strike the eastern Bahamas by morning and the eastern coast of Florida on Sunday.

The fear that the immediate effects of the storm might not prove to be the only danger was suggested in an appeal for help cabled to the Associated Press by Thomas E. Benner, chancello of the University of Porto Rico, who made a personal survey within a seven-mile radius of San Juan.

He told of hospitals unroofed, of so many homes shattered that 80 per cent of the population was without shelter, of an interrupted water supply, and asserted that the storm-stricken people were threatened with famine and disease.

"The entire island has suffered terribly," he said. "Medical supplies, food and shelter are needed at once."

Even should the hurricane now veer out to sea and dissipate without inflicting further damage the loss already suffered probably, to judge from present reports, would approach the proportions of a major disaster.

Property damage will unquestionably run into many millions of dollars The loss of life cannot as yet be computed or even estimated but there is little hope that it will not be large, and the damage to shipping is certain to total high.

Almost nothing is known of what sort of desolation the storm cast across the eastern coast of Santo Domingo, the Virgin Islands, St. Croix, St. Thomas and Guadaloupe, but it can be guessed with some accuracy by what is known of the fate of Porto Rico.

The sun-baked islands with their luxuriant growth of palms and fruit trees have been strewn with the wreckage of their tropical glory and what has undoubtedly happened everywhere in the storm's path is summarized in one paragraph of Chancellor Benner's cabled report.

"Within the area observed by me," he said, "all cocoanut, coffee and banana plantations and groves of minor fruits have been destroyed. The losses will reach many millions of dollars. Many lives have been lost and further deaths are in prospect from famine and disease unless relief becomes available at once. Immediate action is vitally important."

That the importance of immediate action is fully realized at Washington and that relief will be made available at once was indicated late today when Secretary of the Navy Wilbur ordered a destroyer at Charleston, S. C., to stand by to rush Henry M. Baker, the Red Cross disaster chief, to Porto Rico.

TO SEND SEVERAL RED CROSS OFFICIALS TO PORTO RICO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—Following conferences between President Coolidge and Red Cross authorities here, it was decided today to send an expedition of four or five Red Cross officials to aid in relief work in hurricane-stricken Porto Rico by way of Charleston, S. C.

JAWORSKI INDICTED FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 14—(AP)—An indictment charging first degree murder was returned today by the Cuyahoga county grand jury against Edw. Jaworski, fugitive from justice in at least two states, who yesterday killed one Cleveland policeman and wounded another when they attempted to arrest him for return to Pennsylvania where he is under conviction of murder.

The indictment, charging Jaworski with the death of Patrolman Anthony Wiectorek, was served at the prison ward of the City hospital where Jaworski is believed recovering from wounds received when he fought a pitched battle with officers and then stood off a small army of policemen after he had taken refuge in a house.

The 27-year-old bandit boasted today from his hospital cot that he had killed "25 men or more," during his life of crime. Six murders besides a long string of robberies are charged against him by police. To tell the exact number of his victims Jaworski said, "would require some refreshening of my memory and I can't do that now."

The condition of Patrolman George E. Effinger, shot in the fight yesterday, and Ben Majsterek, a by-stander who was wounded by a stray bullet was serious and hospital authorities said either might die.

One of his victims, Jaworski told Detective Sergt. Emil Ziegler, was a policeman, killed in a Detroit hold-up. The prisoner refused to say, according to Ziegler, whether the Detroit robbery was that of the Detroit News last spring in which a part of the weekly payroll was stolen.

Four employes of the News came to Cleveland late today and visited the prison ward at City hospital but were unable to identify Jaworski as one of the bandits who robbed them

HALDEMAN LANDS HIS PLANE AT LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 14.—(AP)—George Haldeman of Detroit, second of the disqualified finishers in the New York to Los Angeles non stop air attempt, landed his Bellanca plane at Mines field at 1:19 o'clock this afternoon. Art Goebel of Los Angeles had come in first late yesterday only to announce that his flight was broken by a stop at Prescott Ariz., due to faulty action of a carburetor. The other seven race entries landed at various points between New York and the Pacific coast.

Haldeman, who piloted a trans-Atlantic flight plane to a landing in mid-ocean last year, arrived here from Albuquerque, N. M., where late yesterday he ended his non-stop attempt after reporting that he had nearly exhausted his gasoline supply in bucking fierce headwinds. As in the case of Goebel, the elements proved a nemesis.

Trouble with his oil feed also forced his mid-continent landing. Haldeman said upon arriving at the finish of the uncompleted non-stop race.

DEATH OF JAMES J. DUNCAN, VICE PRESIDENT A. F. OF L.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—In the death at Quincy, Mass., today of James J Duncan, first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, the organization lost the second of the triumvirate of leaders—Gompers, Duncan and Morrison—which has pointed its course almost since its inception.

Back in 1894, "Jim," as the popular labor leader and orator was known, was named second vice-president of the federation, and four years later he was elected to the post he held continuously until his death. Only Samuel Gompers, president from 1885 to 1924, exceeded his service as a national officer. Frank Morrison, secretary, has held office since 1897.

President Green and Morrison will be among the mourners at the last rites for the dead leader to be held at Quincy Monday Members of organized labor and particularly the Granite Cutters' International association of which he was president, are expected to be present in large numbers.

"He was a militant trade unionist who believed every organization should stand on its own bottom," Morrison said today. "No man had a greater fund of information on the trade union movement and none was more willing or capable to defend or advance it. He was honest and intense and a splendid personality."

PRODUCERS MUST PREVENT OVERPRODUCTION OF OIL

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Leaders of the world petroleum industry have come to a realization that the future prosperity of the industry depends upon the voluntary co-operation of large and small producers to prevent overproduction. Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, said on his return today from a conference of oil heads in Scotland.

Mr Teagle conferred with Sir Henri Deterding head of the Royal Dutch Shell interests, and Sir John Cadman, head of the Anglo-Persian Oil company. These executives, Mr. Teagle explained, disclosed that they have already been restricting production in their fields and one tangible result of the conference, it appeared, would be the limitation of production in Venezuela, where the fields are practically controlled by the Royal Dutch and Standard of New Jersey interests. The increasing yield from Venezuelan fields has had an important bearing upon the recent breaking down of the crude oil market.

Since his return to Washington the chief executive has received a further telegram from Governor Weeks of Vermont renewing previous invitations to visit his state on an inspection trip. President Coolidge intends that his call to his native state be restricted to this. He has not yet definitely decided upon the date of departure.

RHINELAND EVACUATION OFFER MADE TO GERMANY

GENEVA, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Immediate evacuation of the second occupied zone is understood to be the offer made by the allies to Germany in return for German acceptance of a special commission of conciliation and verification to control the Rhineland.

The allies have further suggested that this commission continue to function during the life of the Rhine pact negotiated at Locarno. In the German view this would extend the commission's life indefinitely. The Germans point out that the Rhile pact remains in force until the league of nations council by a two-thirds majority decides that the league itself insures sufficient protection to the Locarno signatories.

The Germans are said to be absolutely opposed to accepting such a commission beyond 1935 and some of them think that it would be infinitely better to drop all evacuated negotiations than to give their consent to the allied proposals.

The French idea is that the five countries signatory to the Rhine pact —France, Germany, Belgium, Great Britain and Italy—should be represented on the commission. Whether it would sit permanently at Cologne or merely meet when occasion justifies is still under discussion.

Chancellor Herman Mueller today was telegraphing and telephoning Berlin to get the views of President Hindenberg and his cabinet on the negotiations. The policy of the allies is said to be that some troops should be kept in the Rhineland until the reparations problem is definitely settled through new financial negotiations and commercialization of reparation railway and industrial bonds.

CONFESSION OF SLAYER OF DR. HARRY R. DAPPER

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 14—(AP)—County detectives and state police were making a careful check tonight on details of a story which they said had been told by John F. Meckley, 24 year old suspect in a robbery that he had slain Dr. Harry R. Dapper, young physician, on a lonely rural highway near here August 20. Meckley was quoted as having admitted he killed the doctor because he refused to pay Meckley for stolen liquor and drugs delivered at Dr. Dapper's office.

Meckley, according to police, is a former inmate of an institution for the feebleminded and an ex-convict, and before accepting his confession, officers said an effort would be made to corroborate his claim that he sold the doctor's automobile in Detroit following the killing. The slayer escaped in Dr. Dapper's machine. Officers left for the Michigan city tonight to look at the car.

There also was a difference in some details of the story Meckley was quoted as telling and the statement on the killing made by Dr. Dapper's father, Henry Dapper, vice president of the Fort Pitt Brewing company who accompanied his son on the fatal trip and reported that he had been "black jacked" by the killer. Officers were checking these discrepancies.

TREES LOST TO CAPITAL IN WIDENING OF STREETS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—The widening of streets and improvement of alleys have cost Washington in the last year 345 of the fine shade trees which have helped to bring the city recognition as one of the world's most beautiful capitals.

In addition, the annual report of Clifford L. Lanham, superintendent of trees and parkins, discloses that 1,575 other trees were removed during the fiscal year for various reasons, including decay and storm damage, from parks and similar government reservations.

Most of the large trees which were removed from the streets, however, were replaced with new plantings which are expected to restore to them in a few years some of the appearances of shadowed graciousness which they now lack. Altogether, more young trees were planted than were removed, the total amounting to 2836 including 2-381 set out in new suburban sections.

LEE FAMILY PORTRAIT'S AUTHENTICITY DOUBTED

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 14 (AP)—The authenticity of an old oil painting presented to Washington and Lee university as a portrait of Gen Robert E. Lee's mother is questioned by Mrs. Mildred Lee Francis granddaughter of Gen. Lee and U. D. C. custodian of the Lee museum at the university.

The portrait sent to Washington and Lee by the widow of Francis A. MacNutt of Rome is enclosed in a very old gilded frame and is that of a lady in colonial dress wearing a miniature of General Washington. On the miniature is this inscription: "George Washington—To his dear Ann."

"There is no known proof" Mrs. Francis says "that the portrait is that of Ann Carter of Shirley Va. wife of 'Light-Horse Harry' Lee and mother of Gen. Robert E. Lee. Mrs. Lee's children never mentioned any picture of their mother and she certainly did not go to Europe to have it made. Moreover Mrs. Lee had brown eyes and the portrait bears distinctive blue eyes."

Raymond Temporarily Loses Nonchalance

Alleged Murderer Fl[illegible] During Testimony [illegible]ster, Mass., L[illegible] Cart Employe.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 14—The state put on 21 additional witnesses on the stand in the Windham county superior court here today in furthering its task of establishing a clear case of guilt against Roland G. Lalone, 21 and Albert J. Raymond, 20, Worcester, Mass., youths and alleged "ice-box" bandits being tried for the murder of State Policeman Irving H. Nelson in Pomfret on the evening of April 6, last. The state continued to encounter difficulties today in a series of objections by the defense and the ruling out of testimony by Judge Edward M. Yeomans, but succeeded in making good progress in recording a series of events, through a total of 47 witnesses to date of the activities of the killers of the state trooper. From the standpoint of court record, the state suffered a setback today when two of its witnesses became receptive to cross-examination and gave evidence beneficial to the defense These two witnesses were Rene Langevin of Worcester, a truck driver and his assistant, Emil Bernier, 17, of Webster, Mass.

Probably the most effective witness of the day was Michael F. Radzik, employed as short-order cook in the U. and I lunch cart on Main street in Webster, Mass. Radzik possitively identified Lalone and Raymond as two young men who had lunch in the cart on the night of April 6. He was especially sure of Raymond on whom he had waited and when he pointed out the accused in court the latter flushed and appeared nervous for the first time since the trial started.

With the opening of court this morning at 10 o'clock, James Byrnes of Pomfret, witness No. 25, who had testified Thursday afternoon, was recalled for short questioning.

Mrs. Marguerite E. Byrnes, wife of the previous witness said that she was in her husband's store in Pomfret on the evening of April 6, when she heard a commotion on the highway and heard loud reports. She ran out in time to see Officer Nelson fall on the Briggs lawn and she called the Putnam police to notify them.

Kenneth M. Graves, 15, of Pomfret, said that he saw the officer on his motorcycle parked in front of the Dr. Overlock home about 7:15 o'clock. A car came down Pomfret street and the officer gave chase and overhauled it. He heard the reports and later learned of what had taken place.

James Scott, also of Pomfret, was driving toward Pomfret when a Willys-Knight sedan bearing Massachusetts markers passed him at the foot of Pomfret Hill. He followed along at a slower rate of speed and was some 300 yards behind when the car passed the Overlock corner. When he got to the Briggs house he saw the officer on the lawn and helped to put him in Albert Day's car to be taken to the doctor. He did not hear the shooting.

Thadeus E. LaForte of Abington, said that he stopped at the Byrnes' store while out riding. He saw a closed car go by and saw an officer following it to the left and rear. He then heard several shots and saw the officer drop. He ran to the wounded officer and asked if he could be of any help but the officer only groaned. The machine continued on and took the Putnam road at the Green corner.

Patrick J. Donny of Pomfret Center also testified that he was at Byrnes' store. He heard the reports, saw the officer drop and went to help pick him up and place him in a car.

Dr. Seldon B. Overlock of Pomfret, medical examiner, was the next and 31st witness. He told of receiving a call that an officer had been wounded and as he was starting his car to go to the scene the officer was brought into his home, and placed on a couch in the den. When he saw the officer he noted at once that the man had died. After a preliminary examination he ordered the body removed to the Smith-Walker undertaking rooms in Putnam and the next day a further examination was made, followed by an autopsy. He proceeded to give the surgical terms of the wounds which he found. One bullet entered the right chest between the fourth and fifth ribs. A second entered just over the eighth rib and a third entered the right leg just below the knee joint. The wound through the chest was given as the fatal one. Two of the bullets were turned over to Coroner Bill and the third to Lieutenant Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson state police barracks with which Officer Nelson was connected. Dr. Overlock and the previous two witnesses were not cross-examined.

A. J. Chandler, Springfield manufacturer and resident of Terrence street, where the shooting affray between the occupants of the sedan and Officer Raymond P. Gallagher of the Springfield police took place shortly after 5 o'clock of the afternoon of April 6, was

DOUBT IF KIDNAPED BOY WILL BE RETURNED ALIVE

CHICAGO, Sept. 14—(AP)—Doubt that ten year old Billie Ranieri, kidnaped a week ago and held for a reported $60,000 ransom, will be returned to his parents alive was expressed today by one member of the well to do Italian family although others seemed hopeful that the lad would be back with his parents none the worse for his experience within a few hours.

A. Frank Ranieri, Italian contractor, and other members of the family continued their efforts to obtain the boy's release independent of the proffered aid of the police who in turn were conducting their own inquiry.

The father has asked the police to take no hand in the search, declaring that police interference might result in the abductors killing the boy.

The police, however, have made two arrests and are making a vigorous search for the lad whose family has refused to offer any information.

"I'm afraid there is little hope for the boy." Tony Ranieri, his grandfather, told a group of neighbors who have crowded the Ranieri home since he was coming home from schol.

The boy died in a hospital from internal injuries. The driver was arrested and charged with manslaughter.

The other accidental deaths occurred yesterday when three small girls lost their lives by drowning and an infant child was run over by a motor truck.

DEATHS AND DAMAGE BY A TORNADO AT ROCKFORD, ILL.

Incomplete Checkup Shows That 30 Persons Were Killed—More Than 100 Men Were Burned in the Ruins of a Factory—Upwards of 200 Houses and Outbuildings Were Torn Down—Police Believe 200 Persons Have Been Seriously Injured—Hospitals Are Clogged With the Injured—Littered Streets and Tangled Wires Hamper Rescue Work.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 14—(AP)—A violent tornado today struck the southern portion of Rockford, tore down houses and factories and buried 100 men in the ruins of a chair factory of the Rockford Cabinet company. A half dozen persons were reported dead outside this factory and scores of policemen, firemen, and citizens worked frantically for hours to remove the dead and injured from the debris.

The wind twisted the shattered walls in an almost impenetrable mass over the wreckage of the brick foundation and made rescue work slow and difficult. The four story frame building contained 150 men when the storm struck.

Three men on the third floor are known to have escaped. They were hurtled to the basement as the building crashed. They crawled from the ruins, covered with varnish and shellac which had poured over them as they fell.

It was thought that probably fifty in all crawled from the debris, many without serious injuries. But the police said it would take many hours to check up on the men entrapped.

More than 200 houses and outbuildings, according to early reports, were torn away. Streets were littered with debris in which was tangled a mass of fallen wires. It was almost impossible for a time for the rescuers to reach the demolished factory and there were several narrow escapes from high powered wires.

Rescue work was handicapped by the gloom that continued until night fell. Fortunately, fire did not break out and the fire department added its efforts to the work of rescue.

It was not long before all the hospitals were clogged with the injured. How many were severely hurt could not be learned but police believed the total would reach 200.

Several smaller factories were wholly or partially demolished, but in most cases, it was reported, the occupants escaped. More than a score of houses were unroofed in two blocks on Eighteenth avenue and three residences were moved off their bases. One house was carried twenty feet and toppled over.

After a three hour check police announced 26 persons were known to be dead, although they had gone through only part of the wreckage.

In one instance, the occupants of a factory were held indoors after the roof had collapsed, during the height of the storm, and this probably saved many from being hit by flying timber. John Lane of Chicago, blocked the door of the Union Furniture company plant and prevented a panic among employes who tried to dash into the street.

Scores of automobiles, parked along the streets swept by the storm, were bowled over and in some cases light cars were seen flying through the air under the force of the wind.

More than 70 workmen were believed to be still in the wreckage.

An eye witness reported he saw 12 pairs of feet sticking out from under debris of what was left of the third floor, buried under heavy steel beams.

"I don't see how any of those men can be alive, buried under those tons of weight," he declared.

Rescuers working on the third floor scurried for safety when machinery began to slide to one end of what was left of the building. Rescue efforts were hampered by danger of the remains of the building crashing to the ground, because of cracked walls and crumbling foundations.

The southeast end was entirely cut off from all gas, electricity, light and telephone by the storm.

Fire Chief Blake, one of the first to arrive at the scene, dispatched word to the Rockford Gas and Electric company to shut off all power in the devastated area.

A chamber of commerce committee was appointed to raise funds to take care of the victims.

80 PER CENT OF HOUSES IN SAN JUAN UNROOFED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—(AP)—The navy department tonight received a radio message from San Juan, Porto Rico, via its naval radio station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, which described the island's capital with 80 per cent of its houses unroofed and "devastation everywhere."

The message was the first direct word from Porto Rico that the navy has received.

The communication declared that the wind storm was of "extraordinary violence" and lasted from 11 a. m. to 4 p. m. yesterday centering upon San Juan. The message gave no details of the destruction except in regard to damage to electric light, power, telephone service and "all communications" which all were badly disrupted.

"The power company estimated five days without power," it said.

NOMINEE SMITH READY FOR WESTERN CAMPAIGN

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 14.—(AP)—When Governor Smith put on his hat and went home for dinner tonight, he took a parting look at his desk, cleared of papers and told his office assistants that he wouldn't be back for nearly three weeks. He had attended to all pressing state business, he said, and intended to take it easy until he takes to the road Sunday night on his first campaign tour which will keep him out of town until after the first of next month.

Instead of putting in a turn at his office in the capitol tomorrow, the governor plans to get some exercise at a nearby country club with one of his cronies, James J Riordan of New York, as a golfing partner. Riordan had sent word that he would come up to Albany for a game.

Aside from doing some necessary packing of luggage, the democratic standard bearer intends to carry his program of recreation and rest through to the time late Sunday night his 11 car train is scheduled to leave for the west. During a press conference today, someone brought up train schedules, and the governor promptly reminded him that "we won't be traveling on a regular train."

"All we will have to do is to tell the engineer 'step on the gas,'" he added, "and the only thing we'll have to worry about is whether anything is ahead of us."

TROOPS INSTRUCTED TO WATCH OVER JEWISH HOMES

BELGRADE, Sept. 14 — (Jewish Telegraphic Agency)—Strong detachments of police and gendarmerie were dispatched by the Jugoslav district authorities at Osijok to Petrovo Selo in connection with the anti-Jewish agitation which arose there through spreading of ritual murder tales.

The troops were instructed to watch over the Jewish houses in the town day and night.

A number of the rioters were arrested, and were said to have admitted that they intended to murder all Jewish inhabitants of Petrovo Selo.

Marguerite Takatch, 15-year-old servant girl whose temporary disappearance caused the disturbance, regained consciousness, and in her first story to police officials confirmed their opinion that she was the victim of assault.

Dr. Hussey, a daughter of General Ismael Alvarez, of Venezuela, minister of war under General Castro, and a graduate of the Women's Medical college, Philadelphia, made no announcement concerning her plans.

McMAHON REMAINS HEAD OF THE TEXTILE WORKERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP)—The United Textile Workers of America, at their annual convention today, authorized the appointment of a committee representing each industry of the textile field to investigate conditions in the industry and determine what steps may be taken to obtain "fair tariff rates."

The action was taken after a complaint by representatives of a Philadelphia local of upholstery workers, who asserted that upholstery imports have increased 400 per cent in the past five years and that the lower price of imported goods has caused a slump in domestic production, with a consequent slump in employment in American upholstery factories.

The present duty on upholstery imports, they said, is 45 per cent ad valorem, which they declared to be insufficient.

A report of the committee on recommended legislation today urged continued agitation for a shorter working day for women, following the plan in Massachusetts and for more rigid child labor laws, continuation of a campaign to enforce the installation of safety devices on factory machines, improvement of the workman's compensation laws, agitation for the five-day week, and continuation of the fight against the use of the injunction in labor disputes.

At the morning session, Thomas F. McMahon of Providence, R. I., was re-elected president of the union for the next two years. James Starr of Paterson, N. J., was elected secretary-treasurer; Francis J. Gorman of Providence and William Kelly of Philadelphia, vice-presidents.

During the storm of Thursday evening the slippery condition of the highway was responsible for an accident in North Coventry when a 1929 Nash sedan crashed through a fence on the main highway nearly opposite the Pond hill school, turning over on its left side down a five-foot embankment with the front bumper resting against a telephone pole. Occupying the machine at the time of the accident were four women and a child, all residents of Putnam, who were returning from Hartford. All of them escaped injury while the damage to the automobile consisted of bent fender and two broken windows on one side. The car was driven away under its own power after being righted by a wrecker from this city.

Between 60 and 75 stations included on twelve telephone lines were put out of commission temporarily as a result of the storm of Thursday evening, according to an announcement made on Friday morning by the local exchange manager for the Southern New England Telephone company, John C. Frazier. Most of the damage in this territory was in Columbia and Stafford Springs. The storm appeared to spend much of its fury while traveling toward Norwich.

COLUMBIA BOY SEVERELY INJURED IN ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 14—John Noulmic, 13, son of Nicholas Noulmic of Hop River, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon, to be treated for severe injuries received at Hop River when the bicycle he was riding collided with an automobile owned and driven by Albert H. Hobro of Ellington avenue, Rockville.

Noulmic and his two companions came out of a side road onto the main Hartford-Willimantic highway on bicycles. Hobro said that he avoided hitting one boy, who drove out in front of his car, and had brought his machine to practically a full stop when the Noulmic boy ran into the side of it. The boy was treated by Dr. A. J. Girouard. He sustained a fracture of the right femur, a cut tendon on the finger of the left hand and a bruised right eye.

The accident is under investigation by state police.

the next witness. He said that he drove his car into Terrence street from Union street in time to see Officer Gallagher get hastily off his motorcycle and level a revolver at a car proceeding in the general direction of the witness. He took no notice of the car, being concerned with the actions of the officer. In his home a bullet that had shattered the upper pane of a bay window and fractured an interior shutter from which it had deflected, was found on the hearth. He turned this bullet over to Officer Gallagher.

Elton T. Nolan, member of the Danielson state police barracks told of seeing Officer Nelson leave the barracks in the direction of Putnam and Pomfret and of seeing the officer again at 7:30 o'clock after he (Officer Nelson) had expired in the Dr. Overlock home. The next day he took the officer's clothing from the undertaking rooms. This clothing consisting of a shirt, undershirt, uniform coat and trousers was introduced by the state as Exhibit K. The coat, shirt and undershirt showed two bullet holes on the right side in the vicinity of the chest and there was one bullet hole on the right knee of the trousers. The shirt was blood-stained. The equipment carried by the officer, including belt and holster, gun, blackjack and handcuffs were displayed in court but not entered as an exhibit. It was shown that no shots had been fired from the revolver.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson testified that the autopsy was performed April 2. He identified a .38 calibre bullet removed from the body of Officer Nelson and the missile was entered as Exhibit M.

State Policeman Emil Castagna of the Danielson barracks affirmed that the time Officer Nelson left the barracks on a search for an alleged bandit car was at 6:55 p. m. He did not see the officer again until the day of the funeral in New Haven. He had been given a .38-calibre bullet by Coroner Bill and this was also entered under Exhibit M. Sergt. George L. Gardiner of the Danielson barracks reiterated the time and purpose of the departure of Officer Nelson from the barracks.

In building up the links of evidence to show the course of the murder car from Springfield to the scene of the shooting and the point where it was recovered, the state called as its next witness Sergt. George Liard of the Putnam police department. Sergeant Liard said that as the result of a telephone message from the Willimantic police he was on watch for a Massachusetts car. He got to the corner of Front street in the central part of Putnam and saw that the last of a line of three cars was a Willys-Knight sedan bearing the Massachusetts numbers 401,976. A line of traffic in the opposite direction hampered his reaching the sedan and he saw it go beneath the overhead railroad bridge, where it went to the left of a silent policeman at the foot of Front street and then shot up the hill toward School street. A photograph of Front street was marked Exhibit N. Sergeant Liard rushed to the telephone box near the bank and after notifying the Webster and Scituate police, commandeered a car and gave chase as far as the Rhode Island state line but failed to sight the machine being sought.

Fred Bishard, garageman of Put-nam, said that he was driving along School street on the night of April 6, when a Massachusetts car shot between his and a third machine at a rate of speed estimated at between 50 and 60 miles an hour. He saw it was a closed car and there were two occupants in the front seat. The tail light was out. The car took the road to Grosvenordale and Webster.

John Jarosz of Webster testified that he and a friend named Henry Lawida, also of Webster, had taken a ride to Thompson and were returning homeward along the main highway, when a closed car came speeding out of a side road known as the Porter Plains road. The car followed a highway for about one-quarter of a mile and then turned sharp left into the Long Branch road near the Borick home. This road leads to School street, Webster. A photograph of the Porter Plains road was filed as Exhibit O. Jarosz said that he continued to Webster and when he got there he heard of the shooting of a state policeman. He recalled having seen the speeding sedan and returned toward Thompson. On the road he met Captain Jarvis of the Putnam police and other officers and the party, riding in two automobiles, followed the tire tracks of the sedan over the Long Branch road. He recognized the tracks as having been made by Fisk heavy duty balloon tires. Later in the evening while still searching for the car he was driving along West Main street in Webster when he saw a Willys-Knight sedan bearing the numbers 401,976 parked about 25 feet in the Brandon road, one mile from the center of Webster. He notified the officers and the car was removed to Webster. Photographs of roads figuring in the case were entered as Exhibits P, G and R.

Henry Lawida, who was riding with Jarosz, corroborated the latter's testimony in full.

Michael F. Radzik, previously mentioned in this article, said that he was at his work in the U. & L. lunch cart in Webster between 8:30 and 9 o'clock the night of April 6. There were two young men in the cart having lunch. A young truck driver named Rene Langevin who operates on a route between Providence, R. I., and Webster came in and addressing one of the strangers later identified as Albert J. Raymond, said, "What the h—l are you doing here?" Langevin then added, "Did you come down in your Ford?" and Raymond answered "Yes." The two young men left later but, owing to this incident, he said he had no difficulty in identifying Raymond some days later at the Springfield jail. A photograph of the lunch cart was entered as Exhibit S.

Radzik was given a stiff quizzing by Attorney Thayer as to the methods used in the identification of the accused. To Attorney Thayer's question as to whether witness had consulted with Attorney Cohan of Webster in claiming the reward for the capture of the murderers of Officer Nelson, Radzik made a flat denial.

Rene Langevin of 26 Cutler street, Worcester said that he drove a truck between Providence and Webster and that it was his habit to stop at the U and I lunch cart for lunch. When he came into the cart on the night of April 6 about 8:30 o'clock, he saw Raymond and Lalone sitting at the counter. He asked Raymond what he was doing in Webster and if he had come down in his Ford. To the latter question Raymond answered yes. Langevin said that he had known Raymond about eight years, that they resided within 500 feet of each other in Worcester and had attended St. Joseph's school together. He knew that Raymond drove a "collegiate" Ford coupe with red wheels and red stripes. He said that during school days Raymond was known as 'Baby.'" He also knew Lalone but not so intimately.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Moynihan, Langevin said that upon entering the lunch cart he had seen a Ford coupe with red wheels parked near the cart. He was positive that Raymond did not have on a blue or black suit, but one of color, possibly gray or tan. Under question as to how he remembered that it was on Friday, April 6, that he saw Raymond and Lalone in Webster he said that it was Good Friday. The witness wilted under the quizzing and said that he was not sure of the day. He told of being questioned by Lieutenant Fleming of the Worcester detective bureau and later by Lieutenant Urquhart.

Special State's Attorney Harvey again took up the questioning of the witness basing his questions on the affidavit signed by Langevin. He was thwarted by Judge Yeomans, however, who ruled out all such questions. Another question asked was "Did you tell Detective Jackson that you would not be a witness in this case," was excluded by the court and remained unanswered.

Emil Bernier, 17, of Webster, who was employed by Langevin at the time confirmed the testimony given by Langevin.

Joseph J. Richart of 6th Avenue, Dudley, Mass., said that on the evening of April 6, he saw a car drive past his garage which faces West Main street, running out of Webster, and then back up in the driveway of the garage. He went there from his house and saw two men apparently wiping off the machine. They asked if they could park there and he said yes. One man tinkered the dome light in the machine, putting it on and off. Richert said that he approached the car more closely and the two men jumped into the front seat and drove away. Later when he went out to the grocery store he saw the machine parked with lights off on Branden road. He last saw it there about 9:30 o'clock. He described the car as a Willys-Knight sedan and the first three numbers of the Massachusetts registration were 401.

Edward C. Mason of Webster, said that he rode from a service station where he was employed into the center of Webster with a taxi-driver whose name was Frank Spinny. Witness got off at the Y. D. lunch cart, a short distance from the U and I cart, and Spinny went to turn his car around in the street. Two young men, whom he later identified as Raymond and Lalone stepped up to him and said, "Hey, is that taxi taken." Mason replied in the negative and called to Spinny. The men went to the taxi and got in. He did not see in what direction they left. A photograph of the Y. D. lunch cart was marked Exhibit V. Mason was given a severe "memory" test by Attorneys Moynihan and Thayer, the purport of which was to show that Mason was not qualified to identify the accused, as he claimed to have done at the Springfield jail April 12, inasmuch as he had had but a fleeting glimpse of them, especially of Raymond who was said to have remained behind Lalone by the witness.

Frank Spinny, whose real name is Frank Spiewakowski, taximan of Webster, told of the two men coming to his car and getting in. Under their instructions he drove them to a point about 100 feet beyond Brandon road and then turned around and came through Webster and on to Worcester, arriving there about 10 o'clock and discharging his passengers on a street about 150 feet from Main street. Witness said that he did not identify the accused but he described one as being about five feet, ten inches in height and wearing a light top coat and felt hat. The other was about five feet four inches tall and wore a cap and dark suit. These descriptions tallied somewhat with others previously given.

State Policeman Edward L. Fitzgerald of the Massachusetts department, told of being on a search for the murder car when he was notified by John Jarosz that it had been located on Brandon road. He drove the machine to the Buick garage in Webster and noted the various markings by which it has been identified by other witnesses. The registration markers of the car were entered as Exhibit W. Officer Fitzgerald was the 47th and last new witness called since the start of the trial.

Testimony by Commissioner Robert T. Hurley of the Connecticut state police department as to distances between towns from Springfield to Webster, Mass., through Willimantic and Pomfret, Connecticut, concluded the testimony of the day. Commissioner Hurley, who was witness number 13, gave the total distance as 85 miles. He was under cross-examination by Attorney Frank H. Foss when court adjourned at 5 o'clock until next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

WESTERLY

GOVERNOR'S DAY EVENTS AT THE KINGSTON FAIR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 14—Today was Governor's day at the Washington county fair at Kingston, when big and little politicians gathered from far and near to discuss issues and candidates of the presidential year. The discussion was not a public one but was confined to meeting constituents. The republican party of Rhode Island was represented by Congressman Clark Burdick of Newport and Governor Case; both spoke before the grandstand facing the race track. United States Democratic Senator Peter G. Gerry also had a part on the speaking program but political issues were avoided. In the throng of politicians present was Theodore Francis Green, mentioned as democratic nominee for the governorship. The crowds which attended were larger than on Grange day, Thursday. With the arrival of the governor's party aerial bombs were exploded. Throngs then filled the grandstand and lined the race track fence at 11:30 a. m. to witness the grand cavalcade of prize winning animals. The president of the fair association, Henry G. Bailey presided on the speakers stand and introduced Farm Commissioner Harry Lewis, head of the agricultural department of the state, who declared that these agricultural fairs were clocks marking off the progress of the state and county in agricultural lines. He briefly reviewed the newly established Rhode Island bureau of markets with daily reporting on system, grades and costs. He disparaged the "bootlegging of cattle' which he said would require legislation to stop. He touched on the activity in the combating of pests and parasites and declared that the Japanese beetle had already arrived in New London and should it reach here Washington county would suffer untold loss. He summarized the work of his department in three words, education, sympathy and cooperation.

United States Senator Peter G. Gerry briefly dwelt on the activity of the federal department of agriculture in the work of keeping people on the farm.

Representative Clark Burdick from the First Rhode Island Congressional district, was introduced as a man whose grandfather went to school in the town of Hopkinton. He recommended increased agricultural activities.

Governor Norman S. Case spoke on the opportunity for forest cultivation in the state. He said that a Brown classmate of his (James O. Hazard, formerly of Westerly and now forestry commissioner of the state of Virginia, whose father now resides in Anguilla, Conn.) had accompanied him to a Rhode Island state college commencement where the question of planting forests in Rhode Island was thoroughly discussed. Governor Case touched upon the added feaeral assistance given the state college for agricultural experiments.

President Bailey stated that United States Senator Jesse P. Metcalf was prevented from attending the state fair by pressure of federal duties.

At 1 o'clock the entertainment program of music and vaudeville was followed by the horse racing in the 2.25 trot, purse $1,000; 2:17 trot, purse $1,000; and 3 year old trot with $500 purse. Many of the heats had close finishes and the track record was beaten in the second event, 2:25 class when in the second heat the black gelding, Bronx, driven by Harry Brusie stepped the mile in 2:10 1-2.

NOANK

VILLAGE BOXERS MAKE GOOD AT PITTSBURGH

Gus McDonald and his new lightweight fighter, Flash McDonald, left in their sport car for the smoky city of Pittsburgh, where they were to put on exhibition boxing matches for a new club just formed, named the Pastime club. It was the opening night and everything was free. The room was decorated and had noted prizefighters' pictures on the walls, including Gene Tunney, the heavyweight champion of the world. It was 8 o'clock when Owner Billie Dick told the fans (there were 2,000 in the place), that the rib-breaker from Indiana, Gus McDonald, would take on Battling Sam Linder, the pride of the West Side, for eight rounds. The referee was Peter Long. For the first three rounds it was some battle, the men fighting toe to toe. In the fifth round the rib-breaker from the Fishing Village sent a right punch into his left front rib that sent the Smoky City boy to the floor. That set the fans cheering for they thought it was a knock-out. But Linder was game as Heeney was with Tunney, getting up at the count of nine. But he did not know where he was, yet stayed until the round was over. Then what a hand he got from the crowd. The cheers could be heard for a mile. The sixth round came and the pride of the Fishing Village missed a nard left to the face and the battler from the West Side sent the T. N. T. left to Rib-Breaker McDonald's jaw. Down he went for the count; but the bottle of smelling salts brought him to, after working five minutes over him. It was some battle which the fans saw, real action, and Flash McDonald, the lightweight hope of Noank was next on the list for the six rounds, with Dave Murphy, a sure boy from the coal mines with a good aim. Flash wanted to end it quickly but the easy boxer was wise and kept in close, exchanging blows for four rounds. Both men were fast and at it every minute. In the fourth round Flash sent over one of his Manager Gus McDonald haymakers that put the miner down for the count of six. But he got up quickly and gave a short right to the lightweight's bread-line that sank him for a short rest of five. Getting up slowly, he kept away until his wind came back. It was a show. Both boxers smiled and shook hands and went out of the ring happy. Owner Billie Dick gave Manager Gus McDonald a gold watch for his services and bringing along his lightweight hope; he also was given a pair of shoes and a felt hat. It was a good time and the boxers made a big hit with the fans while in the Smoky City.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Cushing have returned to New York.

Big Haul of Mackerel

Boat Alice N had a fine trip while fishing for mackerel along the shores off Newport, and got 75 barrels of mackerel. It took all the engine and three men to haul in the seine, it was so heavy. Engineer Jack Singer said, "Catching mackerel is so good today it reminds me of a fish story told by my grandfather, who came from St. John's, N. S., when he was a young fellow around 18. The fad in that town was to go out after trout with 25 in the party. The trout were so thick they got tired catching them with the line so would go down to the edge of the brook, whistle to them so to tickle them and they would jump right into the basket. That is like our fishing. Never saw them so thick, like kids getting around Babe Ruth after hitting a home run!" The fish were sent to Fulton market by truck.

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Sept. 14 — This morning a Dodge sedan driven by Mrs. Florence R. Burdell of 685 Academy street, N. Y., and a Mack gas truck, driven by Harold McGuire of Mystic came together on the Vargas lawn. The gas tank was making a turn into the Vargas place when the Dodge sedan came around the corner at a high rate of speed. When the driver of the sedan realized she could not clear the truck she drove up on the lawn and tried to cut around in front of the tank. The Dodge was wrecked and Mrs. Burdell and son, Clarence Benedict, were badly cut about the head, face and arms. They were attended by a Stonington physician. DANIELSON

BIG KILLINGLY DELEGATION TO BE AT MASS MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 14—It was indicated this afternoon that Killingly's representation at the monster republican rally in Woodstock this week Saturday afternoon will number several hundred people. Nothing just like this event, politically, has been staged in Windham county in a generation. There are persons hereabouts who will remind you that they went to Woodstock when presidents of the United States graced political gatherings there, but those who are familiar with what happened back in those days are not without gray hair today, and this week end demonstration is something brand new for those who term themselves "we moderns", or some equivalent thereof.

Backed by the tradition herein referred to, enticed by Saturday's elaborate program for presenting notables of nation-wide renown, with incidentals that provide for the appearance of the Governor's Foot Guard band, not seen hereabouts in forty years, a number of other musical organizations, and with parades scheduled and what not, the Saturday affair at Woodstock this week end is going to be just about the peak of political activities in Windham county during this presidential campaign. That it comes early makes little for no difference. It is the Big Show of the season. Risking the possibility of being converted, democrats throughout this section of northeastern Connecticut were vowing today that they would be in attendance, to see what it was all about and to listen to the arguments of the opposition.

Estimates of the prospective attendance at Woodstock Saturday were running today from 20,000 to 30,000 people. That's a crowd in any Windham county town. Being near the top of Connecticut towns in area, Woodstock stands forth and tells the world it will have space for all that come. There may be a jam of motor traffic up there, but, the press is asked to tell the world, there will be an adequate force of officers on duty to see that things move smoothly, that parking space will be found for all who come and that there will be ample provision in the way of interesting events to make it worth while for anyone interested in politics to be on hand.

FUNERAL
Mrs. M. E. Blanchard

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home in Dayville funeral services for Mrs. Myrtice E. Blanchard were conducted by Rev. William Swainson of the Dayville Congregational church assisted by Rev. Charles A. Downs of the Goodyear church. Relatives and many friends, including delegations from McGregor corps, W. R. C., and Killingly grange were in attendance. Burial was in the High street cemetery at Dayville, Rev. Mr. Swainson conducting the committal service. The bearers were Everett Blanchard, J. Newton Blanchard, Byron Blanchard, Richard Drompton. Dr. Harry W. Sharpe and Edward Budlong. The floral remembrances were beautiful. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements. Relatives were in attendance from Putnam, Norwich, Philadelphia, Franklin, Mass., East Greenwich, Providence and other cities.

Prior to taking up his duties as public safety marshal A. P. Woodward said this morning that the first thing he is to do in his new offices, after going on duty the first of the coming month, will be to inspect cellars and backyards, with a view to determining whether they are being kept in such orderly condition as to exclude all unnecessary likelihood of being rated a fire of public health menace. Mr. Woodward prefers to have property owners clear up any condition that is likely to bring an order from him to do so without his having any hand in the matter. He serves notice that the investigations are to be thorough, that no condition such as has been mentioned will be allowed to endure, and that the hopes for the co-operation of the public in making the new office he fills serve the purposes the borough intends that it shall.

Attention of the police has been drawn to the fact that religious phamplets have again been offered for sale in Danielson. In this instance the effort to make a distribution of religious propaganda was in the interest of a denomination other than the one represented by people who were arrested hre on a Sunday several months ago, ordered to appear in the town court, were found guilty and appealed their case to the superior court. In this case the solicitor, disturbing people at rest or at their meals on a Sunday, too, offered the pamphlets he was distributing in exchange for what he termed a contribution in the interest of the cause he represented. Reports of these activities have been seeping into the police during the current week. If there are further visitations at homes here the coming Sunday, the police would be pleased to hear about the matter.

Saturday of this week voters are to be made who will have their first election experience on the first Monday in October at the annual town meeting. In view of the obligations resting on several in political life here, they will remain in town to assist the aspirants for admission to the electroate. As is customary, the voters will be made at the selectmen's office in the town hall building. It was called to the attention of the general public this afternoon that there will be further opportunities to be made voters prior to the national and state election in November. Meanwhile a canvass of the town is being made for those who may wish to be made voters, but who up to this time have never enjoyed that privilege.

Miss Theresa Brearly, a little girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brearly, died today at Attawaugan, her death following that of her little brother the past month.

Another consignment of 100 pheas-ants, furnished by the state, have been released here by members of the Danielson Rod and Gun club. This makes a total of 300 of these birds that have been furnished by the state for distribution in territory within a few miles of Danielson during the current season. All of them will have attained near maturity by the opening of the hunting season in October. It is related by men who hunt each fall that there are many pheasants about these October days, and the promise is for good hunting during the coming fall.

It will be of interest to all who have come to have a liking for the annual fower show at East Killingy to know that it is to be hed this year on Saturday of next week, September 22. Established largely as a local event a few years ago, it has come to hold interest for hundreds of people in this part of eastern Connecticut. The promise is that the floral exhibits this year will be larger and more varied than ever before. It was said today that the exhibits, to be made at the church, will remain over Sunday.

In order to make necessary repairs, the electric current will be shut off from 2.30 p. m. until 4 p. m., on Sunday, September 16, in Danielson, Brooklyn Waurgan, Hampton, Elmville, East Killingly, Attawaugan, Pineville, Ballouville, Dayville and Goodyear. The Eastern Conn. Power Co.—adv.

PROVIDENCE ST. BRIDGE CLOSED TO HEAVY TRAFFIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 14—The first town action taken by the board of selectmen towards removing the existing hasard at the Providence street bridge, which has been adjudged unsafe by city and state engineers, was to close the bridge to traffic and route automobiles over a different path. The bridge was closed by the selectmen this morning after they had received legal advice on the matter from a Putnam attorney. Pedestrians will not be affected by the action as it is believed that no harm will come from the little pedestrian traffic that passes daily over the span.

Selectman William P. Warren said this morning that the bridge is in such a weakened condition that the passing of another heavily laden vehicle might cause it to collapse, and after a conference with the board of selectmen it was decided that action to close the structure to traffic would be taken.

Selectman Warren complied with the statutes and formally informed Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston of the matter, so that some other route would be taken by the fire department in the event they were called to the north end in an emergency.

The selectmen have set Sept. 21, as the night of a special town meeting, to see if the voters will approve the plans submitted for the repair of the Providence street bridge or if they will appropriate the necessary funds for the erection of a new concrete arch bridge which it is estimated will cost nearly $35,000.

The latter plan seems to be receiving the most favor, since the building of a new bridge will eliminate the annual expending of funds to keep the repaired bridge safe.

Bernard Murray was struck down by a hit and run driver this morning at the corner of Front and Main streets, as he was about to cross the street. The driver of the car failed to stop as the elderly man was knocked to the pavement, but sped on down Pomfret street in the direction of Willimantic. Acting Captain of Police Joseph Page was on duty near the scene of the accident, but the car reached a point beyond his vision and he failed to get the numbers. Captain Page and Officer Benoit went to the assistance of Mr. Murray, discovering he was not seriously injured, excepting for his foot where the tire partially passed over and a slight cut on his left hand.

A police alarm was dispatched to Willimantic, where officers held a car until th local officers were notified. The driver of the car told the Thread City officers that he did not recall striking anyone in Putnam and he was released.

This morning's incident was the first encountered in Putnam where a driver struck a person and failed to stop. If the driver of the car is apprehended he will serious charges.

A death in Putnam Thursday was that of Mrs. Sarah Daigle of Walnut street, who died late Thursday evening after an illness of many months. She was 69 years of age. A native of Canada, Mrs. Daigle passed the greater part of her life in this country and has been for many years a resident of Putnam. She is survived by her husband, Pierre Daigle of Walnut street.

The monthly meeting of the town school committee was held last evening and many problems before the board were settled. Superintendent of Schools Leon N. Farrin attended his first meeting last evening. Supt. Farrin sought advice from the committee relative to the crowded conditions existing at the Israel Putnam school. Upon a suggestion from Committeeman Bulger, it was voted to transfer the pupils coming from the rural districts to public service cars to the Smith street schools, since they do not have to walk to school. Mr. Farrin stated that he will investigate the number coming from the rural districts and will report to the board at its next meeting. Several bills were approved and ordered paid.

An electrical storm was experienced in Putnam late Thursday afternoon. The heavy clouds came out of the west and brought several crashes of lightning, a little shower, and with little intensity passed quickly. Shortly after the light shower a beautiful rainbow was seen across the eastern sky. During the evening a follow-up storm threatened as the sky was constantly illuminated with chain flashes of lightning, which did not pass over until late evening.

The sudden heat wave was supplanted today with a temperature which was considerably the opposite of Thursday's.

Miss Jennie Obletz, formerly of Putnam and now of New York, is visiting a few days this week in Putnam with relatives.

Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the republican state central committee, was in Hartford today, attending a meeting of the republican leaders.

Several Putnam people were in Danielson last evening attending the opening of the Orpheum theatre, recently renovated.

The large building on Livery street, formerly occupied by the 43rd division headquarters company, is undergoing repairs, there being a rumor in circulation that the discarded federal building may be made into a modern dance hall.

There will be a special missionary meeting at the Congregational church next Thursday evening when the people of the Congregational churches of this vicinity will hear an address by a missionary team that is touring this section of Connecticut. Miss Sylvia Norton, who is president of the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary union of Connecticut, and Miss Carolyn D. Smiley, a home secretary of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions will be the speakers. This will be one of a series of meetings preparatory for a larger gathering of representatives of all the women of the Congregational churches of Connecticut to be held at the Center church, Hartford, on Oct. 2nd.

An alarm from box 6, was run in late this afternon for a fire in the Montville home on Church street. The alarm was answered by the three companies and the blaze was quickly extinguished with chemicals before any damage was done.

When the alarm was first sounded a mad rush was made by autoists on Main street in an effort to reach the scene of the fire before the fire companies. Several close accidents were avoided on the way due to the cutting-in of the long line of racing automobiles. Box 36 calls for the downtown fire engines to make the trip by going around the city and over the Providence street bridge. As the bridge was closed this morning the firemen were forced to go through Bridge street and up Church street, causing considerable delay before they reached the scene.

FAIR WEATHER PREDICTED FOR MASS MEETING TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 14—A late weather report received this afternoon indicated that fair weather would prevail Saturday, despite the threatening rain clouds that hovered above throughout the afternoon. In the republican circles today, every hope was that fair weather would prevail for the county's largest political gathering that is to be held at Woodstock Common Saturday afternoon, when some of the most notable men in the nation and nearly every leading figure in the state will be at the Hoover-Curtis meeting. At Woodstock Common this afternoon the finishing touches were being applied to the speakers and band stands. The national colors will be the predominating group, tomorrow and the stands will bear large portraits of Hoover and Curtis. Electricians were on the scene making ready to install the amplifying system that will carry the voices of the speaker to the crowd. This apparatus will be installed during Saturday morning, preceding the opening of the meeting which is not scheduled to take place until 2 o'clock, with a band concert by three combined groups of musicians.

Senator Moses and Governor Trumbull will not arrive at Woodstock until noon. They will be accompanied by the other speakers and will go directly to the Clarence W. Bowen home at Bald Hill where they will be the guests at luncheon of Mr. Bowen, passing the remaining hours at Bald Hill. They will then go to the speaker's stand at the common and will be ready for the speeches.

The press of several cities in New England will be represented and reservations have been made to accommodate several newspaper men. The governor and his staff will come directly from Hartford, while Senator Moses, it is thought, will also arrive by automobile. Mr. Bowen was asked this afternoon if he thought Governor Trumbull would come in his customary way, by airplane, and the answer came, "I am not informed, but I wouldn't be surprised."

GALES FERRY

SELECTMEN PURCHASE LOT AS SCHOOLHOUSE SITE

The selectmen of the town of Ledyard, Frederick W. Burton, Monett A. Lawson and Joseph A. Clark, have purchased the lot west of the village cemetery, as a site for the new school house which is to be built by the town at Gales Ferry. The lot, which is on the village street, is in a fine location for the school, and was purchased from a real estate dealer in New London who acquired the property some years ago.

BE MADE A VOTER

For the purpose of making voters the registration board will be in session three days next month, October 16, 17 and 20. Their business will be the consideration of the applications of those who desire to be made voters, and it is to be born in mind that any and all of those who are qualified, or believe they are qualified to become voters must see that their applications are in the hands of the selectmen, town clerk, registrars of voters or their assistants by October 9.

For those who become of age after the dates for making voters and before election day there will be a special session of the board November 5, but all applications must be submitted to the proper authorities by the second Monday in October. That is one of the responsibilities that rests upon the would be voter.

The whole process is simple, but it must be carried out. It will be too late to wake up on the 10th of October and try to do the impossible. It will be too late to wait until a few days before election day and bemoan the fact that it will be impossible to vote simply through personal negligence.

Each and every one who is 21 years of age and a citizen should be desirous of obtaining the right of suffrage. He or she is entitled to the right upon qualifying before the registration board and it is in the interest of good citizenship that there should be a desire for this privilege.

This is the year, the year of the presidential election, when the greatest number of people are desirous of expressing their sentiments at the polls. If that is true of voters it ought also to be true of citizens. Instead of half of the voters voicing their sentiments the percentage should be much larger. This is also true in connection with those who can and should be made voters. It is time they recognized and assumed their duty as citizens. But it must be borne in mind that no citizen can vote unless he becomes a voter and the chance to become a voter this year ceases on the 9th of October if the application to be made a voter is not in the proper hands by that date. By all means be made a voter and then go to the polls and vote at every opportunity.

AID FOR TRAPPED CREWS

Further proof of the efficacy of the "lung" apparatus, by which it is hoped that those caught in a sunken submarine may extricate themselves and come to the surface, is furnished by the tests which divers have made from a diving bell at the depth of 155 feet.

Such a depth is greater than that at which the S-4 or the S-51 was found, and yet, according to the report, the divers came to the surface safely and with no bad effects from any such trouble as the dreaded "bends."

To say the least, this performance must be looked upon as highly gratifying. It is possible to claim that the apparatus is not as yet fully perfected. Changes are expected that will decrease its size and weight though that may have no effect upon the effectiveness of the underwater mask.

With tests which have been made up to the present time highly satisfactory, increased interest is certain to be manifested in the test which has been planned with an actual sunken submarine. There is never any telling what kind of an accident may send a sub to the bottom, or how many may be killed or drowned before they have a chance to think of escaping. Nevertheless those who are caught in such a trap and unable to get out are the ones who must be considered. Thus if it is possible for members of a submarine crew who find themselves at the bottom, whether by design or accident, to get out and to the surface safely it will be a good demonstration of what reliance can be placed in the device.

For such a test the S-4 is to be used within a few weeks and the expectations are that equally good results will be obtained. This indicates the strikes that are being made in the search for solving this problem. If trapped men can be removed in time it will make far less difference how long is required to actually raise a sunken submarine. Distressing cases have accentuated the fact that some effective life saving device cannot be provided too soon, while the successful completion of tests with the new apparatus should mean an early equipment of all underwater boats therewith.

RATIFICATION AND RECOGNITION

Senator Borah has long been interested in bringing about the recognition of the soviet Russian government. He has been having a conference with Secretary Kellogg in regard to the treaty that was recently negotiated at Paris and he is confident that it will be ratified by the United States senate. Such ratification is necessary before it can become effective.

However, the Idaho senator is inclined to think that in connection with such ratification it will be necessary to take up the question of recognizing Russia. Such a point is raised because of the fact that Russia is a signer of the treaty denouncing war just the same as this country is.

While both countries are signers it is not so that this country invited Russia to sign and it doesn't appear that because it has signed that the United States and Russia must become so involved in their relationship that there must be a recognition of the soviet government on the part of this or any other nation which has given its approval to the treaty against war.

Soviet Russia is not ready to meet the requirements which have been set forth by this country before it will be ready to consider recognition. It is gratifying to know where Russia stands and the United States has offered no objection whatever to Russia becoming one of the signers. In fact it was desirous that every nation should be found in the list.

When it comes to the matter of ratification by the United States it will have to be conclusively shown that the question of recognition must be taken up at the same time before any serious support will be given to it. That Senator Borah should seek to advance that matter is not surprising in view of his previous efforts in that same direction, but just because it would please him to see it done doesn't mean that it is necessary or that there is any likelihood of its being brought about. If Russia wants to hasten such a consideration through the acceptance of the requirements put forth by this country it would be another matter.

AIMING FOR SAFETY

Regulations concerning the automobile are undergoing constant changes. Changing conditions and the demand for greater safety make this necessary. The motor vehicle laws of Massachusetts have been recently amended so that when autos approach a pedestrian it is no longer necessary to blow the horn. In its place the driver is expected to reduce his speed and do something himself instead of depending upon the noise of his horn to halt or frighten the pedestrian.

Such a change should bring about a reduction in the noise that is made by automobile horns. That there are plenty of points where such is needed will not be questioned but there will be interest in watching the result to see whether it also reduces the speed or the accidents.

By this change Massachusetts isn't doing quite the same as New Jersey where the pedestrian no longer is entitled to the right of way regardless of anything else, but it is apparently trying to put an end to the bedlam occasioned by horns and at the same time endeavoring to make the auto driver and the pedestrian as well come to a realization of their personal responsibility in using the highways.

The need of this is disclosed every day. Driving blindly with dependence upon a horn to clear the path, or crossing the street blindly under the attitude that the right of way is a one-sided proposition wholly in favor of the pedestrian, prevails in too many instances. Curbing the noise makers and putting greater responsibility upon the acts of the street users is unquestionably much needed. Still there will be occasion for the use of the horn and we have no doubt plenty of accidents will be recorded.

THE OCCUPATIONAL TROOPS

The effort which Germany is making for the evacuation of the Rhineland by the troops of other countries, mostly those of France, arouses particular interest among allied countries. Discussions have brought to light a most interesting situation, the outcome as yet being rather uncertain.

Germany has ever been alert to its own interests. That has been clear throughout all the negotiations that have been carried on since the close of the war. It is only what should be expected. Germany in asking for the evacuation of the Rhineland comes forth in support of its plea with a document which gives its petition a strong backing. It is in fact doing the natural thing, for when it shows that the representatives of France Great Britain and the United States back in 1919, Messrs. Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Woodrow Wilson, aproved the idea of having the occupational troops withdrawn before the end of 15 years provided Germany has given proof of its good will and furnished satisfactory guarantees that its obligations will be met it has a right to claim that this requirement has been met and as a result the troops should be removed.

France has been much pleased by the various ways in which Germany has met requirements. It has had its doubts and it has pursued a guarded course. France has not been disposed to be caught napping, but in view of what has transpired in the past ten years and the way in which Germany met its obligations Germany cannot be blamed if it thinks it is entitled to such modifications as were considered satisfactory directly after the war ended. Germany might feel entitled to maintain such an attitude even if there were no such documents.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Knee-deep in September but not a snow-storm yet!

The Jewish New York of 5689 is now with us. May it be a happy, healthy and prosperous one.

Whether the strawhats go into the discard today depends on the weather of the days that follow.

Pleasant View is to become Misquamicutt, but that cannot affect the pleasant time there or the wonderful view.

Thus far September has done little or nothing to steel the straw hat wearers into a defiant continuance of the season.

The republican rally today at Woodstock should and doubtless will attract a big gathering from all points in eastern Connecticut.

As all fliers were forced down the nonstop flight across country was declared "no race". From the experiences of the men it was "some" race.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Real inhumanity is now so uncommon that when it does appear it stands forth clear-cut and distinct in its hideousness. Within a short time, and not far away, a small boy was hit by an automobile and painfully but not fatally injured. The driver of the car that hit him did all in his power to help the unfortunate lad and a careful examination of all the facts involved completely exonerated him from all blame. But the point is here: While bending over the lad and giving him first aid treatment, he saw a machine approaching and appealed to the driver to take the lad, to the nearest hospital, and the inhuman fellow deliberately turned him down. So also did the driver of the next car approaching, and even a third. Fortunately the lad soon regained consciousness and it was found that haste was not imperative. But no thanks to the heartless wretches "who went on the other side". It is evident that the story of the good Samaritan needs to be kept alive.

Does it ever occur to you, gentle reader, that there is a good deal of useless expense and wasted energy in these presidential notifications? Not more than 15 minutes after the first ballot was cast at each of the two national conventions, the respective candidates were fully aware of the result. If they were "listening in"—as you may bet they were—they knew the result of the voting as soon as it was declared. What, then, is the sense of a troop of officials journeying across the continent with the surprising news that they have been nominated? The speech of acceptance is all right and makes the parties feel good—till after election. Is it not also true that no cut and dried platform can meet the emergencies that every president has to deal with? Are there not times when the chief magistrate has to act quickly and intelligently? Let personality and not platform decide.

Is there any cast iron criterion by which literature can be judged? That question is very hard to answer because there are so many opinions as to what real literature is. A novel, for instance, that some people rave over, others could not be hired to read. Those whose minds are along the line of philosophy and history would find little food in a "best seller" of fiction. One who raves over Sinclair Lewis would get very little out of Plato or Aristotle. No scientist would "burn the midnight oil" in pondering over the sermons of Jonathan Edwards. A contribution is handed to an editor, who just runs his eye over it and then shakes his head, remarking: "My crowd doesn't care a rap for that stuff!" and it may have a real merit. Now the trouble here is that the crowd he caters to has very little merit. It is quite well known that works that have for generations astonished the world, for a time went begging. What is literature?

On the other hand there is no question but what we owe editors and publishers a great debt of gratitude because they act as buffers between the public and worthless trash that would swamp us if it found a way to the printed page. Very likely in their desire to protect the reading public that in their haste they turn down some worthy manuscripts that have some claim to recognition, but they are few compared to the deluge that is swept on to oblivion. It must be discouraging to a man of talent who has "real stuff" to give the public to have it turned down. I have in mind a man who is a writer of the first magnitude whose work was turned down by a leading firm in New York. He was almost penniless, at last he offered it to S. S. McClure, who gave him $25,000 for the serial rights of "Kim", and made money at that. The author was Rudyard Kipling.

I am glad that one prominent man has had the courage to attack that old fallacy that "A rolling stone gathers no moss." That is meant to imply that if a person does not stick to one thing he will be handicapped by poverty. We are ready to admit that element of success is the concentration of effort; that we cannot flit from one thing to another and expect that we will be masterful at any one thing. In other words, "Jack of all trades and master of none." While this is true it cannot be pressed too far. There is certainly another side to the proposition. There is no sense in sticking to one thing when a man finds after a fair trial that he is a failure at it. In speaking to the students of Christ college, Cambridge, this prominent man said: "The real tragedies are the many good men who keep on in the wrong direction until they are too old to get into their right places, because of the moss they have gathered, fail to succeed."

Such exercises as were held last Saturday at the fair grounds have a great influence, and along a certain avenue of our public life that is needed. This is true at a time when the atmosphere is so largely political. I have not a word to say against things that are political, because it is of the utmost importance that they be attended to. But we must never allow ourselves to forget that things purely political are very unsafe if in any way they are divorced from the patriotic. If a man dabbles with politics just for personal gain he is an unsafe man, but if he is in political life from a patriotic motive, because he can render his country real service, that is entirely another matter. The exercises last Saturday at the flag dedication were truly patriotic, from the first word to the last, and all the speakers were helped by the very evident fact that the large crowd was sympathetic.

Does it not give one just a wee bit of thoughtfulness, if not sadness, to see some of the leaves beginning to turn yellow? Does it not just hint to you who are in the seventies that you may just be beginning to reveal a little of the yellowness of age which nobody can stave off? Of course none of us who are in that class are at all proud, but yet we don't like to own that as yet there is anything suggestive of age. But we can't stave off the fact. We may pull off a few stunts that may fool the unobserving, but we can't fool old Father Time! When I saw some of my pole beans the other day I found many yellow leaves, and at first I felt a bit sorrowful because it indicated the beginning of the end, but when I looked again and saw the vines crowded with luscious pods, I forgot their yellowness, and felt like singing, "Well done, thou good and faithful servants!" One has a right to look old and yellow, if he has done something that has justified what he was created for.

Labor day this year was inclement and disappointing. Some patriotic exercises planned for the day had to be omitted because of the rain, but Sept. 3, 1783 was not a very disagreeable day to some people. Probably somewhere in the world it rained on that day, but it didn't in Paris, when on that day the treaty was signed ending the Revolutionary war. Along moral and political lines there have been many days in Paris when the sun was so clear and strong as to send healing rays to a great many nations. It is not too much to believe that the time is coming for celebrating the anniversary of the day when so many nations signed the Kellogg-Briand pact for outlawing war. The tremendous ovation given to Secretary Kellogg in Paris and elsewhere is an index to popular feeling against war.

SENATOR BINGHAM COMPARES AVIATION HERE AND ABROAD.

Hiram Bingham, United States senator from Connecticut, believes the future of transoceanic aviation depends on large rigid dirigibles.

"Every time a rigid dirigible has set out to cross the Atlantic," he says in an interview in the Christian Science Monitor, "it has reached its destination safely."

Mr. Bingham, who has just returned from an extensive study-tour of aviation in Europe admits that, because of subsidies, passenger aviation there is far ahead of that in the United States, but that in every other line the United States excels and is upon a more solid business basis.

The vital requisite for the further development of aviation in the United States he declared to be the establishment of lighted air fields and well-equipped airports. The cities that make provisions along these lines, he said, are going to get the business.

What Dirigibles Have Accomplished.

"Let it be remembered," said Mr. Bingham, speaking of the outlook for rigid dirigibles, "that the Los Angeles flew from Germany to New Jersey without any difficulty, and the British 4-34 made a round trip from London to Long Island and return with not only no loss of life, but in such good condition as to be used for several years afterward for experimental purposes.

"I believe that the future of transoceanic aviation depends on large dirigibles. I saw the two which are under construction in England. Each is planned to carry 100 passengers and go about three times as fast as the fastest ocean liners. A smaller one is nearing completion in Germany. Terminal facilities for these great liners of the air are so expensive that it will be some years before adequate ones are provided.

Germany Active in Air.

"I visited England, France and Italy while in Europe. Commercial aviation has been making great progress in these countries. I did not go to Germany, but I saw the German exhibition in the Aviation Salon in Paris. As the Germans are not allowed to build war aircraft, all her exhibits were of commercial machines.

"There are more airlines and ports in Germany than in the rest of Europe. The Germans patronize their airlines more than do the French, British, or Americans. They are now going in for large flying boats and for very small and light planes for personal use, holding one or two passengers. These machines are of low power. I saw one which had a landing speed of only 20 miles per hour. They do not go very fast, and cannot cover a great distance. Nearly every city in Germany has an airport, and the lines are heavily patronized because the rates are not much higher than first-class railroad fare.

"One sees a great deal more of passenger-carrying in Europe than in the United States. I went out to Le Bourget while in Paris on two different occasions, and saw at least three large planes come in from London with from 14 to 18 passengers, all traveling very comfortably. The machines used for this trip are tri-motored airbuses. That sort of service is increasing in importance all the time. The saving in time traveling between London and Paris is material, which is the principal reason that the traffic in this air route is growing all the while. Another reason, of course, is the channel. This trip, by rail, takes seven hours. By air, with bus trips at each end, it takes but about three hours.

Why Europe Takes to the Air.

"There are three reasons why there are not so many flying buses in this country as there are in Europe.

"One is that our train service is better, and the possibility of saving time is less.

"The second is that European countries give large subsidies for every passenger carried, which brings the cost way down.

"The third is that travel on the continent of the United States is not impeded by passports and customs regulations, as is the case in Europe. If, every time in the United States one went into a state, one had to have one's passports inspected twice, once on entering, and once on leaving, and if one had to have one's baggage examined, there would be many more persons using the air and avoiding a large part of the trouble at regular frontier stations.

"At the present time, the amount of saving which could be effected by flying from New York to Washington is not sufficient to warrant the cost of unsubsidized air transport. It takes 1 1-4 hours to get from the heart of the financial district to the flying field.

"If it were possible to use Governor's Island as a starting point, so that it would take no longer to get to the field than it takes to get to the Grand Central or the Pennsylvania railroad station, the saving in time would be very material. I believe that when arrangements are perfected for combined rail and air transport across the continent, using sleeping cars at night, and flying by day, the amount of time saved will be so great as to warrant the additional expense. I think that system has a great future.

Where United States Excels.

"With the exception of the regular transporting of passengers between big cities, in every other line of aviation, the United States is head of Europe. Our mail is more efficient, covers longer distances and does an immensely greater amount of flying at night. It is natural that without a subsidy the carrying of letters and of valuable packages is far more profitable than the carrying of passengers.

"To send a one ounce letter from New York to Chicago costs 5 cents, which is at the rate of 80 cents per pound, or $120 for a person weighing 150 pounds. Very few people would care to pay $120 to be flown from New York to Chicago. In other forms of commercial aviation, such as aerial photography, crop dusting and the operation of private planes, we are far ahead of Europe.

"During the past two years, since the passage of the air commerce act, which for the first time put air navigation under the department of commerce and gave the same relative position under the supervision of the federal government which ocean navigation has, commercial navigation has made phenomenal progress. There are over 400 privately owned planes in the United States today, and there will probably be twice as many next year.

"Those parts of the country like Texas and the Mississippi Valley, where there are natural landing fields everywhere, will witness this expansion far more than the New England states where natural landing fields are few and far between. It requires a lot of foresight and public spirit for communities to provide landing fields before there is an insistent demand for them. People forget that ocean navigators never frequented places that did not have safe harbors and were not desirable ports. Air navigation is likely to follow the same lines.

Italy Preparing for Future.

"I was greatly impressed in Italy by the forsight which Mussolini is showing in the Rome airport. At present one sees very little flying about Rome and there are not more than two lines using Rome as a base for daily flights. Nevertheless a magnificent airport is being constructed, together with one of the finest hangs in the world.

"The hangar has several new features. It is of two stories in height. On the ground floor is a large storage room where by means of small trucks running on parallel rails, a very large number of planes can be stored, and at the same time any desired plane can be gotten out of the hangar onto the field in three minutes. The second floor is for use of very large transport planes. The broad side of the hangar is open to the field. The doors are in sections, each section on rails leading to a turntable at the corners of the hangar, thus permitting the doors to be rolled out of the way at the side of the hangar when not in use.

"The Roman citizens are encouraged to come out and visit the airport. There is a large open-air restaurant. Loudspeakers are arranged so as to inform the patrons as to what is going on, and in between times, to entertain the crowd with a radio concert. An excellent flying-boat service is also maintained along the Italian coast.

"There is no doubt that the artificial stimulant of government subsidy has been the chief factor in the promotion of commercial aviation in Europe. At the same time I believe our commercial aviation is on a sounder business basis, and that our national policy of providing airways, lighting them, and rendering the same high grade of aid to a navigation which we render to ocean navigation is the wisest policy to pursue.

Cities Must Take Lead

"It is clearly impossible for the federal government to build wharves in every seaport in the United States, even though it may properly dredge the harbors and by means of lighthouses, buoys and charts, reduce the hazards of ocean travel. In the same way the municipalities must provide the hangars and flying fields if they desire to be on the air map in the future.

"Congress is making liberal appropriations each year for the extension and maintenance of lighted airways and for the providing of air navigation facilities. The chief need in the promotion of our commercial aviation in the immediate future is conveniently located municipal airports, and by an airport I mean more than an empty mowing lot. An airport should not only be a safe landing field, but should be provided with adequate facilities for rendering service to visiting planes. It would be difficult to maintain motor transport if there were no service stations anywhere. There is not a city in the country without a well-equipped garage, experienced mechanics, and every requisite for the traveling motorist.

"As yet there are very few cities which have well-equipped hangars, experienced airplane mechanics and adequate air-navigation facilities. The success of commercial aviation depends in very large measure, perhaps to the extent of 90 per cent., on the ground arrangements. An experienced pilot can fly a modern American commercial plane with safety to himself and passengers, provided the proper ground arrangements have been made for their protection.

States Should Control Flying

"For the promotion of air travel, every state ought to adopt laws similar to those passed in Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New York. These laws require the pilots to pass an official examination and the planes to be inspected and registered.

"Flying, like sailing or motoring, will always have its risks, though they need not be any greater than walking across a city street. In Europe, the risks have been so far reduced that insurance rates are no greater for air travel than for land travel, and in some cases are lower, since the risk in sending valuables by air is very much less than sending them by rail or boat.

"Congress should provide a more adequate weather bureau service for aviation than it does at present. Our weather bureau is in the department of agriculture and was based chiefly on needs of agriculturists. Their needs are so different from the needs of aviators that it is doubtful if the present arrangements can continue much longer. Flying, like sailing, depends in a large measure on the weather. Those in charge of weather reports for aviators ought to be trained accordingly."

Sunday Morning Talk

First Things First.

What stress the Master puts on seeking first the kingdom of God. But is He any more insistent upon this than the builder is upon laying first a good foundation? "The tent which is erected in its place tonight, only to be taken down again the next day needs no laying of deep foundation; and which will have to resist again and again the shock of war must have foundations which go deep into the ground and extend broadly beneath the stately walls." I have seen an elegant stone church with a sawed-off steeple not reaching half way to the ridge pole. The steeple was cut short because of poor foundation and the church has always been marred by that poor workmanship. The failure or incompleteness of many a character is because first things were not put first; because the young men and young women did not insist on making first things first in their life.

Abraham was an altar builder. He saw God in every new place and acknowledged God there by the altars he erected. His action agreed with the psalmist's utterance when he said, "I have set the Lord always before me." Abraham's plan is a good one for us and is as good for 1928 as at the time written. What ought these words to mean to us? To think of God as the standard of excellence, the highest, best, divinest life our moral square and plumb line, our spirit level, which we shall daily apply to our characters and conduct as faithfully as any mechanic ever applied such tests to his work. But this is not all. God is not coldly correct but is a sympathetic helper. He is a friend and power to be received into our hearts, giving His daily guidance and help to overcome evil with good and help us to be what God meant us to be which is our very, very best.

At the latest report every civilized nation on earth has signified its desire to sign the pact. The world is moving.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—Arrival here in September of the new Japanese ambassador, Katsuji Debuchi, to assume his duties will make the fourth successive time that the post of vice minister of the Japanese foreign office has been the stepping stone to the embassy in Washington.

Tsuneo Matsudaira, Masanao Hanihara and Kijuro Shidehara, the last three ambassadors to achieve the coveted Washington assignment, all made their way to that preferment via the vice minister job.

The thing has grown almost into a precedent although the Tokyo authorities insist it is merely coincidence. There are even possibilities that a fifth promotion to Washington via the assignment of vice minister might occur in the course of the next year or two, however, in the event of an upset for the Tanaka ministry in Tokyo when the diet meets in December.

Some Washington observers believe such a shift would eventually bring Sadao Saburi, now Japanese charge d'affairs in London, to succeed Debuchi in Washington, via the Tokyo assignment as vice minister.

Debuchi Experienced

Debuchi has been a lot of Washington diplomatic life already. He was secretary of embassy here at one time and also on the Japanese staff of expert on Chinese questions during the Washington conference in 1921-22. He is rated as among the most experienced members of the Japanese career diplomatic service in Chinese matters and will come to his ambassadorial duties here at a time when the policy of Premier Tanaka as to Manchuri is being watched most closely by the Washington government.

Matsudaira is still in Japan and expected to take up his duties in London probably in November, succeeding Baron Matsui as ambassador. The latter has "retired", due largely, rumor has it, to the loss of an autograph exchange copy of the existing Anglo-Japanese navigation treaty, stolen in an English hotel more than a year ago and which was never recovered. It was an unprecedented affair for the Japanese diplomatic service and compelled Premier Tanaka finally to go to the emperor for a second signature to the treaty, although tradition has it in Tokyo that the emperor signs but once.

Petty Theft Cost Job

Exchange copies of treaties are carried by messenger between the capitals involved and the lost treaty, by suggestion of Ambassador Matsui in London, was given to a member of his embassy staff who happened to be in Tokyo when it was ready for delivery to Downing street. It was placed in a special handbag which the messenger kept at his side up to the time he reached a British port when he set the bag down in his hotel room and stepped out a moment. It was not there when he came back and all the detective abilities of Scotland Yard and the British secret service failed to locate it.

The treaty was of no value to any other government and undoubtedly was stolen by a sneak thief for the pennies to be derived from sale of the bag; but its loss cost Ambassador Matsui, as the responsible official, his post in London and sent him into diplomatic oblivion.

Epidemic Septic Sore Throat

By John Lovett Morse, M. D., Boston, Mass., Member Gorgas Memorial

The town of Lee, Mass., has approximately 4,000 inhabitants. Early in July, 1928, about 450 people, young and old alike, became ill, many of them seriously, within three or four days. The epidemic was at first supposed to be one of summer grippe or influenza. The water supply was examined and found to be all right. The true nature of the disease was then recognized and the milk supply investigated. It was found that none of the milk supply was pasteurized. It was also found that all of the original cases occurred among persons who had a common milk supply. An employe of the dealer who supplied this milk had been ill with a sore throat for three days before the general outbreak. He had charge of the production of milk from this dealer and also collected milk from other sources to be retailed by his employer. It was possible for him, therefore, to infect a large portion of the towns' milk supply. All the milk of the town was then pasteurized. The epidemic ceased within 48 hours although a few cases developed for several days as a result of direct contact with those who were ill. There were about 30 deaths. A number of persons in neighboring cities and towns, who had taken meals in Lee at the time of the epidemic, were also infected. At least one of them died.

The story of this epidemic illustrates and verifies a number of well-known medical facts. The diagnosis of summer grippe or influenza is almost always wrong. The water supply should not be suspected unless the epidemic is one of typhoid fever or some diarrhoeal disease. The milk supply is almost always at fault when there is an epidemic of sore throats. In such cases the milk is infected by someone, ill with a sore throat, who handles the milk.

All milk that is not of the certified grade should be boiled or pasteurized. The milk supply of the large cities is safer than that of the small towns and villages, because it is pasteurized. It is not safe for tourists and travelers to drink milk unless they make sure that it is certified, pasteurized or boiled. Epidemics of this sort are not an "act of God" but the result of the carelessness of man. They can be checked at once when the cause is determined and proper health regulations enforced.

Stories That Recall Others

Materialistic

Mrs. J. had become weary of the noise that accompanied the play of her two young sons, especially since there appeared to be indications that a slight quarrel was developing.

"Boys," she cried in desperation, for she had been troubled with a headache all day, "if you do not stop quarreling, mother may get sick and die and then what will you do?"

The boys stopped suddenly to consider the effects of such a tragedy.

"I know what I should do," volunteered Jim. "I should go to Aunt Jane's because she has such good peach preserves."

"I shouldn't," declared Charles, "I should go to Aunt Helen's for I like strawberry jam better."

BINGHAM DEEDS PLOT FOR NEW SALEN LIBRARY BUILDING

The fourteenth annual meeting of the trustees of the Salem library was held last Saturday at the summer home of Senator Bingham in Salem. According to a delightful custom the business meeting was preceded by a lunch over which the senator presided in his inimitably charming manner. Six members were present Senator Bingham of New Haven, Lieutenant-Governor nominate E. E. Rogers, New London, F. C. Rawolle, New York city, Prof. E. W. Brown and Prof. H. W. Foote of Yale university and John A. Young, Bridgeport. James Lane was absent for the first time since the board was organized.

The usual routine matters were quickly disposed of. Balance in the treasury is $261.00. The report of the librarian showed how valuable is the service the library gives to the community. The school circulation, though probably as large as last year, could not be so reported because complete reports from three schools were lacking. Officers for the year 1928-29 were elected as follows:

Chairman, Senator Bingham; secretary and treasurer, John A. Young; librarian, Mrs. Helen Malona; chairman of the library committee, James Lane; members of committee, Mrs. Helen Malona, Mrs. Edward Mitchell, Mrs. Donald Frazer, Miss Harriet Lane, Lawrence Spencer, Prof. E. W. Brown, Mr. John A. Young.

Miss Alice Rix, married recently, has moved from the town and Mrs. George N. Bates was appointed in her place. Miss Rix was always a valuable member of the committee and the community will feel her loss.

The outstanding feature of the afternoon was the generous act of U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham by which he deeded to the Salem library, a tract of four acres of land on which it is planned to erect a new library building. This land faces Salem street and is centrally located, an ideal place for the library. Back of the library there is to be a baseball field together with several tennis courts. It is understood that the work of grading the land for these activities will begin very soon. This gives Salem an athletic field, the need for which was felt for such a long time. Upon motion of Mr. Rogers, who in a few well chosen words, commended this deed as an act of a most generous and valuable citizen of the town, one who has always been deeply interested in the welfare of the people of Salem, the trustees voted to accept the gift. When the people of Salem remember that Senator and Mrs. Bingham have always been among the largest contributors of the library since it was organized in 1915 and then consider this last gift, they must feel as did the trustees how fortunate a town is to number among its citizens one so generous and philanthropic as Senator and Mrs. Bingham.

After voting to accept the grant of land the board proceeded to a discussion of the library building itself. It was agreed that plans for raising funds necessary for meeting the cost of such a building should be made as soon as possible. It was also agreed that the general type of the building should be colonial. Upon the motion of Mr. Rawolle the chairman of the board of trustees was authorized to appoint a building committee of three to carefully consider plans and to secure estimates of the cost of the building fully equipped. The committee was directed to report at the earliest possible time. Mr. Rawolle was appointed chairman of this committee together with Senator Bingham and Mr. Rogers as members.

Before the meeting adjourned contributions for the support of the library for another year were handed to the treasurer amounting to $120.

From these funds and also from generous gifts from the state library committee and various friends the number of volumes in the library has grown to such an extent that shelf room could no longer be found. For this reason Senator Bingham's gift of land for a new building is exceedingly timely and will be all the more appreciated by the patrons of the library.

NOTABLE LEADERS IN METHODISM WILL SPEAK

Announcement is made by Rev. Myron E. Genter, district superintendent, that very unusual meetings will be held at the Methodist church at New London on October 16, 17, in connection with the fall sessions of the Norwich District Ministers' association.

He has arranged with the committee that Dr. E. Stanley Jones, author of "The Christ of the Indian Road," and "Christ at the Round Table", missionary of distinction from India, and just returning from inspirational tour of the large cities of South America will speak at a mass meeting on Tuesday evening and to the ministers at 9:30 o'clock the following morning. He will be accompanied by Dr. R. F. Diffendorfer, general secretary of the board of foreign missions of the denomination and other missionaries. Dr. Jones was recently elected as a bishop of the denomination at Kansas City, but after consideration, frankly stated that he must refuse to be consecrated as such, as God was leading him to continue his work as an evangelist. He is one of the greatest spiritual leaders on the planet today. The general public will be welcome to attend the mass meeting on Tuesday evening, October 16th.

CENTRAL BAPTIST WOMEN OPEN LEAGUE SEASON

The Woman's league of the Central Baptist church held its first meeting of the season Friday evening in the woman's room at the church, opening with the devotional exercises conducted by Miss Eugenie Dean. Mrs H. H. Pettis, vice-president of the league, presided at the business meeting at which the resignation of Mrs. George A. Ashbey as president was presented and was accepted with regret.

The following were elected to fill vacancies: Mrs. H. H. Pettis as president, Mrs. Gilbert S. Raymond as vice-president and Mrs. Henry Jatkowski as treasurer.

It was voted to pay the expenses of one delegate to the World Wide guild house party at Woodmont.

Miss Signe Seaberg, who is beginning her work as director of religious education at the church, was presented by Mrs. Pettis and spoke briefly of her pleasure in coming to the church for the work of the department of religious education.

The topic, "What Came Out of a Hat" was in charge of "A" Circle, and proved to be the story of the birth and growth of the American Baptist Publication society. The part of Rev. Samuel Cornelius, who stored leaflets and tracts in his high beaver hat, thus suggesting the idea of having a general tract distributing center, was most ably carried out by Miss Roos, Mrs. William Whiteman relating the story. Then followed ten members of "A" Circle, each giving ten years' work of the organization.

A con, "Hats of Other Days," was given by several of the women attired with appropriate headgear, and was most thoroughly enjoyed. The soloists were Miss Amy March, Mrs. Lee Coles and Mrs. Luther Packer, assisted by Mrs. Charles Chapman, Miss Dorothy Gildersleeve, Miss Unabelle Harbeck, Miss Marion Royce, Miss Crystal Whitney, Miss Harriet Williams, Mrs. Elsie Wigley and Mrs. Anna Woods.

A contest of paper hat making followed under the leadership of Mrs. Joseph S. Adams, chairman of social activities.

Tea was served in the young people's assembly hall by the domestic committee, Mrs. Henrietta Tefft, chairman. An extremely interesting exhibit of hats of other days, dating from grandma's modest bonnet to the present period, was on display.

The other speaker is Miss Alice Mooney of Waterbury, vice chairman of the state democratic committee, who will tell many interesting things pertaining to the democratic party. This is the first meeting to be held by the league this year, but many more inspiring sessions are expected to follow. Miss Alif Stevens is president of the league.

SECRETARY PILCHER SPOKE ON PROGRESS EXPOSITION

"The Why and How of Progress Expositions," was the subject of a most interesting talk delivered Friday afternoon by Walter H Pilcher, secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, before the New England's Secretarial conference, at Newport, R. I. Secretary Pilcher was one of the principal speakers listed on the program.

In his talk, Secretary Pilcher said in part:

Why a progress exposition? One of the primary functions of the modern chamber of commerce is an act of salesmanship in selling the city. There are a multitude of ways in which this can be accomplished, but one of the most effective and perhaps the most beneficial so far as its lasting effects on the community and members of the chamber of commerce, is to raise its general civic spirit and pride in the community to a point where its citizens are boosters instead of knockers.

Thousands of dollars in community advertising and publicity can be made practically a useless investment by the prospective manufacturer or home seeker finding a less fair attitude on the part of citizens about their home town. The greatest trouble with the majority of New England cities is a state of mind. You come to town a stranger, walk down Main street, meet one of the merchants and he says: "How do you like our town so far?" and then offers you a sheepish grin.

Now this attitude of mind is the thing that we should strive as chambers to correct. We must bring our local constituency to the realization that New England has had and now has and will continue to have some of the greatest outstanding advantages of any section of the United States.

Less than three per cent. of the population makes up a chamber of commerce. A fraction of these three per cent. attend its meetings and are familiar with its work. Its the 97 per cent. remaining, who through inertia or indifference, toward the chamber and its work, hampers the progress of the city.

What is a Progress Exposition

A progress exposition is a representative exhibit of the commercial enterprises and resources of a city, balanced with exhibits of its social and civic work, and enlivened by features which are typical of the city's normal wholesome amusements. It shows, in a striking way, what the city is and has and does. The exhibitors are the merchants, the manufacturers, the wholesalers, the automobile dealers, the banks, the clubs, the civic and social agencies.

Advertising Feature

In the last analysis, I presume an exposition is an advertising feature and that it offers unlimited possibilities for advertising (1) the city as a whole, (2) the business house making the exhibit and (3) the commercial organization sponsoring the movement.

An exposition affecting as it does so many of your industries and mercantile establishments, and at the same time such a large number of your residents, will cause the press to go the limit. Carefully prepared press notices to papers in neighboring cities will bring a gratifying response in giving publicity and of a nature that must reflect upon your organization.

A good attendance on the opening night has a good psychological effect on the rest of the show.

Organization Set Up

It is a much mooted question as to whether outside help should be called in. This may be dependent upon local conditions. Personally I am of the opinion that an experienced exposition manager is a valuable asset. Caution must be exercised, however, in selecting outside help. Be sure that whoever you call on is equipped, both by experience and financially to conserve your interests. Under the plan which we followed, the management had full charge of the show. We were not involved in any phase of the exposition, excepting that it was held under the auspices of the chamber and we cooperated in every way. No financial risk was involved.

The particular contract which we had in Norwich provided that the manager assume complete charge of the project under the supervision of the publicity committee and the secretary. He handled all of the foregoing details, sold the booths and handled all funds. Our one and only part in the picture was taking 100 per cent. of the gate receipts. For this work we used one of the girls in the office to sell tickets and we had a committee on gate receipts to handle the funds. The policeman at the door was the only paid officer.

In this way the chamber netted a total of $862.50. Naturally we lent a great deal of cooperation and support toward helping the manager and his staff put the project over successfully.

Budget Control

The finance committee are the ones who prepare a budget in accordance with experience in other cities and according to the plan which the local organization intends to follow and depending somewhat upon the amount the advertising committee and the exhibit think the work of this committee is very important. I am a thorough believer in financial safety through budget control.

Naturally the ultimate budget adopted is somewhat dependent upon the number of booths sold and the price of the booths. In many expositions the price of $100 per booth is charged. This can perhaps be done in larger cities. In fact it is being done in smaller cities. We had plenty of work on our hands reserve—the site far out from the city.

The most pronounced and unreconcilable factors which affect the income are weather and site location. The maximum of gate receipts has been obtained where the exposition of the city, and the weather favorable; site was close to the business center the minimum, where conditions were reverse—the site far our from the city and the weather bad.

Under entertainment features we placed a great deal of emphasis, believing that unless attractive entertainment was provided the crowd of 2,400 people, who were there largely on account of the fact that Graham McNamee was to appear in person. Other special features were also on the program.

Another committee is the advertising committee, who approve all copy sent to the newspaper and schedule all outdoor and other paid advertising. Also special stunts used in getting widespread publicity.

Following Mr. Pilcher's talk, which took about half an hour, the other half hour was given over to discussion on the subject of Expositions. The local chamber of commerce secretary was given a rising vote of thanks for his most interesting and helpful speech.

"Do, Re, Mi"

What is the origin of these syllables, Do, Re, Mi, Fa So, La, Si, as names for the seven notes of the musical scale? In histories of music their invention or discovery is attributed to Guido d'Arezzo or Aretinus, a Benedictine monk who lived near Ravenna, Italy, in the first half of the eleventh century. As a music teacher, of his fellows in the Pomposa monastery he was credited with the production of a teaching of music which gave immediate results in singing that before him could scarcely be attained in 10 years.

Guido went to Rome to teach Pope John to sing and he met with complete success by means of his new syllables; after but one lesson the Pope was able to find the tone of an antiphon and to sing it. Guido called his system solmination; it consisted in part of the use of the now well known syllables. In the refectory of the monastery at Avellana is a portrait of Guido which is thus inscribed: Beatus Guido inventor musicae."

But a deeper search into the history of these syllables or kindred ones discloses that they were used by the Hindus long before. The earliest mention of the musical scale (the seven notes) occurs in the Vedangas, the Changas and the Siksha. This early notation, preceding the Christian religion, passed from the Hindus to the Persians, from these to the Arabs and finally, in the time of the Crusades, to Europe. There is no doubt that Guido d'Arezzo did not invent them, but his is the honor to introducing them into European music.

Customes of Seaweed

It may be that the time is not far distant when tailors will offer for sale suits of seaweed, which is already put to various uses. The man of Labrador uses it for fertilizing, for a form of food in times of famine, and even for summer clothing. The seaweed, which is now being considered for the manufacture of cloth, however, is of a different kind and comes from Australia. It has rather different fibers from common seaweed. It is taken from the bottom of the sea and had doubtless been subjected for possible ages to certain chemical action in submerged depths, being in some sort the refuse of geological forests sunk below the sea before the solid land of continents was formed.

This material has been used experimentally in English factories as a substitute for manufactured cloth, and although the goods do not show up yet as especially "fine," it is hoped that some way may be found to subject the material to bleaching and refining. Nothing is yet known of its chemical possibilities, except that it takes certain colors in dye. It is expected that, under any circumstances, it will make an economical innovation in the dry goods line.

Consider the Wasp

Perhaps the greatest cruelty in nature was described by Prof. Wheeler on the life habits of the wasp.

Of the Lowell institute, in his lecture The lady Sphex-wasp is lazy, it seems, and will not feed her young when they are born. But she takes care of them nevertheless. After the mating season, she goes forth to find the green caterpillar of the Sphinx-moth, that fat, green, hairless thing with a horn on its head one sees in sandy country. By some instinct, Mrs. Sphex knows that caterpillar's anatomy, and is able to puncture it with her poisonous sting just where those nerves center which control the muscles of motion. She paralyzes the caterpillar for life without killing it. Then she drags it into a hole she has burrowed in the sand, and lays her larvae there to feed on the living fresh meat of the caterpillar until they are able to take care of themselves.

Mrs. Sphex doesn't live on caterpillar flesh herself, but she takes a first peck out of every paralyzed worm, just as a marketing woman will snatch a grape from a counter in passing. The worm may live for months, unable to move in its underground prison, while the little Sphex larvae eat placidly at its flesh.

A year before he retired from active farming when 94 years old, Harvey Mount, civil war veteran and early settler near Obert, Neb., decided he would discard ox teams and horses for travel, and bought a motor car. So at 93 he learned to drive a car and has been his own chauffeur since, and he will be 96 in July.

TAFTVILLE-J. B. MARTIN SERIES SUNDAY WITH DOUBLE HEADER

Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin grounds a double attraction will be featured. Starting at 1.15 p. m. the American Legion club of Taftville junior champions of the city league will cross bats with the fast Holy Name team of Jewett City. Little need to be said about these two clubs as both are very fast teams in their class and only last Sunday these two clubs battled to a 1 to 0 score at Ashland park the Holy Name club nosing out on the winning end in the ninth inning. The manager of the J. B. Martin club wishes to state that on Sunday the admission will be raised slightly this being due because a percentage of the gate receipts will be turned over to the Taftville American Legion post, No. 104.

Starting at 3.15 p. m. the J. B. Martin grounds will be the scene of the first game of the little world series of Taftville, when Taftville A. A. representing the upper end of the town clash with the Velvetmen who represent the lower part. This will be a game that is purely of local interest and as always will no doubt prove one of the most interesting games of season. The rivalry of these two baseball organizations is always at fever pitch and it is bound to be a fight from start to finish. Manager Eribeck realizes that the Taftville A. A. club will bring down the strongest team that is possible for them to round up. J. B. Martin has secured the services of King of Crompton & Knowles, formerly with the Albany club in the Eastern league will do the backstop work. Campbell, another star of Worcester, noted for his fast fielding and hard hitting will be seen covering second. Smith and Ryan will again be seen in the outfield for Sunday's encounter.

One of the stars for Taftville is Faber of the New York-Pennsylvania league who will be seen covering short for Taftville A. A. A record crowd is expected at the game Sunday afternoon and police protection has been provided. The field will be roped and will be in the best of condition for the battle. There will be plenty of parking space and it is also an ideal place to spend the afternoon. Both complete lineups are:

GIANTS SET RECORD BY WINNING 4 DOUBLE HEADERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP)—New York's Giants finished their happy Boston pilgrimage 100 per cent successful by winning both ends of today's double header from the Braves, and so cleaning up their eight-game series which was run off in four twin engagements. The scores this afternoon were 6 to 2 and 5 to 1, with the second game called after the eighth inning on account of darkness.

This remarkable run not only created a new major league record for victories in consecutive double headers but also hauled the Giants up to within one game of the pace-setting Cardinals, despite the St. Louis success over Philadelphia today. And these eight games were the ones which it was said would "wreck John McGraw's pennant chance."

Fred Fitzsimmons pitched the first game and held the Braves to six hits, while the Giants were routing both Bob Smith and Foster Edwards in the very first inning. After the damage had been done, Kent Greenfield and Bill Clarkson held the visitors very well in hand.

Jack Scott held the home club to six hits in the abbreviated night cap and won easily. Bob Smith started this contest, but gave way to Cooney.

The double victory gave the Giants a record of 16 victories and only six defeats in competition against Boston for the season.

SMITH-SILVIA BOUT TOPS NEXT NEW LONDON CARD

Steve Smith, the fashy Bridgeport lightweight, has been signed to meet Tiger Silvia of Fall River in the ten-round main bout at the New London arena on next Thursday night. Smith has been going strong during the summer and only recently took a decision from Frankie LaFay of Troy and he won on a foul from Marty Silvers. Smith had led Silvers all the way and the foul was a disappointing ending.

The supporting cast for the main go is well balanced, Young DeForest, the Danielson bantamweight meeting Al Gillett in eight rounds while Spike Moreno of New Haven and Joey Duggan hook up in the other semi final.

Geno Pecheeni, rugged little West Side battler, is slated to clash with Rene Lubear of New Haven, conqueror of Tommy McCarthy at the last show. This bout is for six rounds and holds the interest of the Norwich contingent. In the opener Joey Thomas of New London is matched with Max Maravetch of Meriden, a member of Kid Kaplan's stable.

BOSTON, Sept. 14—(AP)— Purchase of two players from the Mobile club of the Southern association, was announced tonight by the Boston Red Sox. The players are Otto Dumas, outfielder, and E. F. Durham, pitcher. They will report to the Red Sox next spring.

CARDS HAVE EASY TIME BEATING THE PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, pace-setters in the National league, started down the stretch this afternoon with an easy victory over the tail-end Phillies, 13 to 6, but nevertheless saw the stampeding Giants rush up to within one full game of the top by winning a fourth consecutive double-header at Boston. Willie Sherdel was in the box for St. Louis.

Wildness of Jimmy Ring and Bob McGraw in the fifth inning sealed the Cardinal victory. Ring passed four men in succession and McGraw two more before Hafey's sacrifice fly and Harper's double off Ed Baecht completed the rout. St. Louis scored six runs and coasted home.

Sherdel was shaky in the early stages, but pitched as well as he had to, and always tightened up in the pinches. He gave the Phillies a dozen hits, but they consistently fell back when it seemed as if they had a chance to drive him from the mound.

Chick Hafey with two singles and a double set the pace for St. Louis hitters, while Frank Hurst's three singles and a pass constituted the best record of any Philadelphian.

The Cards play two games here tomorrow, and have a chance to gain over the Giants, who meet the Robins in one contest.

PIRATES STRENGTHEN HOLD BY BEATING THE REDS

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 14—(AP)—Pittsburgh tightened its hold on fourth place in the National league race today by defeating Cincinnati, 4 to 1.

Burleigh Grimes won his 24th victory of the season but was hit freely, particularly in the last three innings. He pitched almost air-tight ball in the pinches, however, and the Reds had thirteen men stranded on the bags.

Rixey started for Cincinnati but was driven from the box in the fifth, Kolp finishing.

ALL GREENEVILLE CLASHES WITH THAMES A. C. SUNDAY

The All-Greeneville team will clash with the Thames A. C. outfit Sunday afternoon at Hollyhock Island in the first game of their series. A fast contest looms as both teams are out for blood.

The lineup for Greeneville Sunday will be Burns, catch, Nevins pitch, Arico at first, Morin at second, Cummings at third and Gibbs at short, Fitzgerald in left field, McGowan in center and Couture in right field. The lineup for Thames A. C. is undecided. The game starts at 3.15 o'clock.

HOUSE OF DAVID TEAM PLAYS TAFTVILLE A. A. THIS AFTERNOON

One of the most novel as well as interesting of all the games is going to be played at Taftville this afternoon when the Taftville A. A. will go up against the long-haired members of the famous House of David. Novel because of the unique laws of their circle which decrees that no hair shall be cut and no shave should be had. Thus the flowing beards and wavey hair. It will be interesting, because they can play ball and don't doubt it. The energy that they would use in shaving is being used on the ball field.

The description is for those who have never sene the outfit. It is needless to explain to the real, old, dyed-in-the-wool fans that never miss a game. It is they who traveled up to Moosup last season and watched them trim Moosup, which is no mean achievement that know the kind of ball played. It is these fans that will come again today, and they will bring along all their friends and acquaintances not only to see the members of the sect, but to watch them go hammer and tongs against Taftville.

Fans will remember what a whale of a player the David's first sacker was and the short and third basemen, each of whom has turned down offers from the big leagues due to his religion.

The Troland outfit is certainly not going into the game with the idea of getting trimmed and by that token mean to inject every bit of their knowledge and energy into the contest. Joe Faber, just home from a most successful season with the York Penn team of the New York Penn league will add greatly to the strength of Taftville. It is undecided whether Jarvis or Dugas will do the mound work, but it is a safe bet that either boy will be at his best.

Whiskers will predominate this afternoon and the fans should come early to reserve their standing room. The game will start at three fifteen sharp, and those who miss it will be in for a big disappointment. Taftville's lineup will be: Eccleston c, Jarvis or Dugas p, Dabrowski 2b, Christy 3b, Faber ss, Mills lf, Lamorey rf, Yerrington cf.

McGRAW AND HORNSBY DENY BETTING ON "FIXED" RACES

CHICAGO, Sept. 14—(AP)—Two leaders of the baseball world, John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, and Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Boston Braves, made emphatic and complete denials today of charges they had participated in betting on "fixed" horse races at the Arlington Park track through information alleged to have been supplied them by C. E. Allen, one of the leading jockeys of the west.

McGraw and Hornsby telegraphed to Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner, that neither had violated the rules against baseball players wagering on horse races. Each denied knowing Jockey Allen or having communicated with him.

Commissioner Landis said he must necessarily make an investigation, but that he was inclined to believe both McGraw and Hornsby.

The charge, which the baseball managers deny and which Allen said he could disprove, is that the jockey rented an apartment in the exclusive Lincoln Park district and there used the long distance telephone to convey tips to McGraw and Hornsby among others, whose names were not mentioned, running up a telephone bill of $559.07. The charge became known through publication of a telephone collection letter to Allen naming McGraw and Hornsby among the persons telephoned.

Charles Bidwell, secretary of the Illinois Turf association, said he believed the charge against Allen was false and that the jockey had been "framed by a tout," an illicit tipster.

Struyvesant Peabody, president of the Turf association, said the association had no evidence implicating Allen in any wrong doing and that it was quite common for someone else to represent himself as a jockey to sell so-called tips.

"The management of the hotel, where the phone calls were said to have been made, said there was no resemblance between the "Allen" registered at the hotel and Jockey Allen," Peabody said.

A telephone company's collection official said the calls were made by a "Mrs. C. E. Allen," known as the jockey's wife.

O. L. Foster, a horse owner who holds Allen's contract, said Allen was not married and that he had been living with him since the start of the Chicago racing season last June.

Private detectives were engaged by the Turf association to search for the man and woman, implicating Allen, McGraw and Hornsby in the scandal.

"It's all a joke," said Allen, "nothing to it. I'm not married, I never rented a flat and I never ran up phone bills calling Boston or New York."

COCHET CONTINUES HIS BRILLIANT TENNIS PLAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 14—(AP)—Henri Cochet has yet to be stopped. The marvelous little French shotmaker, lone surviving foreign threat for the United States National tennis championship, coasted to victory over a young American opponent this afternoon and stands tonight in the semi-final round, together with three Americans.

Francis T. Hunter, George Lott and Frank Shields remain to bar Cochet's way to the title and if possible to prevent it from making another voyage to France.

That this will be a difficult task was indicated by the easy manner in which the acrobatic little French stylist defeated Gregory Mangin in a match begun yesterday and completed this afternoon, by scores of 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2 before rain caused a postponement.

In similar ready fashion, Hunter drove ahead to victory over Jack Crawford of Australia by scores of 7-5, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Hunter had his work two-thirds done yesterday, and his superior steadiness speedily overcame the cool young Ansac in the only set required to complete the match.

Except for another of those exhibitions of feminine against masculine tennis in which Helen Wills, woman champion of three nations, was beaten 6-2, 6-4 by Herbert L. Bowman of New York, this was the entire tennis fare dished out for the entertainment of some 7,000 fans this afternoon.

Most of them had come to see the gallant fight of the 20-year-old Mangin against Cochet, but the Jersey boy this time was far from the steady and often flashy player who carried that one set so brilliantly early last evening. Mangin was more cautious, less daring and much less successful in these closing sets.

The first of tomorrow afternoon's semi-final tilts, scheduled for 2:30 o'clock with the other an hour later is a "natural" between Lott and Hunter, in which neither can be called an outstanding favorite. The big international set-to sends Cochet against Shields who put out Jacques Brugnon of France in straight sets yesterday.

JONES AND PERKINS IN AMATEUR FINALS TODAY

Brae Burn Country Club, NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 14—(AP)—For the first time in the thirty two years history of the tournament the kings of American and British amateur golf will fight it out for the championship of the United States. Bobby Jones, titleholder three times in the past four years, will oppose Thomas Phillip Perkins, the British champion, tomorrow in the 36 hole final match over Brae Burn's rugged links.

Jones continued his snail march to the finals by swamping 20-year-old Phillips Finlay, Harvard, sophomore, 13 and 12, in the first 36 hole semi-final today. Perkins, with a brand of golf that was close to as brilliant as that of the great Georgian, routed George Voight, of New York, the medalist, 6 and 4, in the final stages of a match that was otherwise sensationally hard fought.

Thus the man he trounced exactly two weeks ago at Chicago by 14 and 12 is the last human barrier between Jones and a fourth American championship that, if his will tie the record of Jerome Travers. Triumph for King Bobby would give him a better mark, as a matter of fact, for it would be his fourth in five years, whereas Travers won four times over a seven year span.

Jones will quite naturally be the favorite to win, especially after the way he has ruthlessly crushed his last two opponents, bowling over John Beck, of England yesterday by 14 and 13 and Finlay today by 13 and 12, with golf that has demolished old man par as well as his rivals. But Perkins, also quite evidently, is playing much better golf and playing it much more confidently than when he met the American champion in the Walker cup matches recently.

The records, past performances and the "dope" all favor Jones but Perkins, by the way he has fought his way past sturdy and at times brilliant opposition to reach the finals, has established himself as a real contender. He is the first British star to reach the American finals since 1911, when Harold H. Hilton, then the British champion, beat Fred Herreshoff and took the title trophy on its only overseas journey.

The records of two finalists on their way to the deciding round of the national amateur golf championship:

Phil Perkins:
Qualified with 76-79—155.
Defeated Don Moe, Portland, Ore., 1 up, 22 holes.
Defeated Arthur Yates, Rochester, N. Y., 2 and 1.
Defeated John Dawson, Chicago, 3 and 1.

Bobby Jones:
Qualified with 77-74—151.
Defeated J. W. Brown, Spring Lake, N. J., 4 and 3.
Defeated Ray Gorton, Boston, 1 up, 19 holes.
Defeated John Beck, Great Britain, 14 and 13.
Defeated Phillips Finlay, Boston, 13 and 12.

CLOSE RACING FEATURES KINGSTON FAIR PROGRAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

KINGSTON, R. I., Sept. 14—The best racing of the Kingston Fair was seen on the track at the grounds today. The racing of the first two days was of the straight heat variety but today's events found the fields closely bunch and close finishes predominating especially in the first two events. The three year old event was a spirited affair between Helen Gray Tidy and Merrie McGregor. In the 2:25 trot Rickshaw, Bronx and Leonard Hale battled for the three heats, with Rickshaw taking the event. Lena Sunshine took the 2:17 trot in straight heats.

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—(AP)—Thomas Donohue, president of the National Boxing association, today received a $2,500 forfeit posted by Dave Lumiansky, manager of Al Brown, New York contender for the vacated bantamweight crown. Brown won a decisive decision over Kid Francis in New York last night.

The boxing head said that a like amount will be requested for forfeit from Bushey Graham, Utica, N. Y., to clinch the match between the pair for the bantamweight championship of the world.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Cubby Tries to Get It.

Who to his anger giveth way
Will find that it will seldom pay.
—Old Mother Nature.

For a week nothing happened at the sugar-house where Whitefoot the Wood Mouse, Mrs. Whitefoot and Trader the Wood Rat were living in comfort and security. It really was an ideal home they had there. Inside that little sugar-house they felt secure from every one expecting Shadow the Weasel. But as they never felt secure anywhere from Shadow the Weasel they didn't think much about it. They came and went freely and they spent more and more time outside the sugar-house. Not since the visit of Yowler the Bobcat had an enemy appeared.

One night just about dusk when Whitefoot and Mrs. Whitefoot were getting ready to go out, Trader the Wood Rat came in in a great hurry. He certainly did come in in a great hurry.

Every time he sniffed three little people inside shivered.

"What is it?" asked Whitefoot anxiously.

"Sh-h-h-!" said Trader, putting a hand on his lips.

Whitefoot and Mrs. Whitefoot listened anxiously. Presently they heard a sniffing and a snuffing and a blowing. "Bear!" whispered Mrs. Whitefoot.

Whitefoot nodded. "It's one of those young Bears," said he, also in a whisper.

They were right. It was Cubby Bear. Cubby had caught a glimpse of Trader. He had seen where Trader had disappeared at a certain corner of the old sugar-house. He found a hole there. He sniffed and he snuffed. Then he began to dig. You know, a Bear is a very good digger for a very short time. Cubby made the dirt fly. But presently he reached the timber that he couldn't dig under. It discouraged him. He quit digging and began investigating to see if there were not some other way of getting in. He went all around the sugar-house and at every crack he sniffed. Every time he sniffed three little people inside shivered. He tried hooking his claws into some of the cracks and pulling, but this did him no good. Finally he climbed up on the roof.

Now, as you know, there was a piece of stovepipe coming up through the roof to serve as a chimney. That stovepipe interested Cubby from the start. He tried to look down it, but he couldn't see anything. He took a long sniff with the result that he drew a lot of soot up his nose, which was most unpleasant and made him cough badly. This made him lose his temper. He struck at that stovepipe and he struck hard. Now, this chimney was held in place by wires, so the first blow that Cubby gave it merely dented it. He cuffed it again and he cuffed hard. This time one of the wires broke. Again Cubby struck and another wire broke. By this time that piece of stovepipe was all battered up. Finally, it came apart and rolled down the roof, hanging by one wire. All that was left was what looked like a hole in the roof. Cubby stopped to investigate this, but he couldn't see anything. You see, another length of that pipe continued on down inside.

Cubby sniffed as he had sniffed before and the same thing happened. He coughed and he sneezed and wanted to fight something, but there wasn't anything to fight. He jumped at the piece of stovepipe still hanging by a wire and down to the ground they went together, so, of course, the wire broke. There Cubby cuffed the piece of stovepipe to his heart's content and the piece of stovepipe didn't hit back once. (Copyright, 1928, by T. W. Burgess)

DUWELLS TO SPONSOR MOTOR BOAT RACE

The Duwell A. A. sponsors of practically every branch of sport from checkers to boxing, will enter a new field of endeavor on the afternoon of Saturday, September 22, when it stages an outboard motor boat race on the Thames river. At a meeting of the organization last night it was voted to accept the recommendations of a number of New London and Norwich boat owners and take a shot at the new and popular sport.

As a result, the Duwells will stage a 30 mile race from Norwich to Southwest light off New London and return for boats with class B and C motors. An effort will be made to have the local merchants contribute a number of loving cups in addition to those that the local club will offer for prizes.

The race will be open to all comers who may signify their intention of entering by communicating with "Sports" Duwell A. A., Norwich. Prospective contestants must specify size and make of motor and dimensions of boat. Entry blanks for the event will be ready today and may be had upon application to the Duwell A. A.

Outboard races of such a length furnish a sporting chance for every boat, as engine trouble and rough going often put the logical winners out before the finish. On a choppy day a slow, sturdy craft would be an advantage over a light racing hull.

The first race of this kind ever staged in this vicinity was run between Eastern Point and Norwich under the sponsorship of the Shenecosett Yacht club a week ago and proved real interesting both from the spectators and contestants standpoint. When the boats arrived in the local harbor on the first leg of the journey there were several hundred people on hand to greet the racers. With Norwich the base of operations this time it

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week Norwich was responding to appeals for financial aid for the yellow fever victims in the south. The Greeneville Caledonian society held a benefit entertainment and several organizations contributed money towards the fund. Little out of the ordinary occurred in Norwich that week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of September 1878 are as follows:

Monday, Sept. 9, 1878—The Greeneville Caledonian society is got behind in the charitable work of assisting the sufferers of the south. On Tuesday evening the members will give a concert and promenade at Greeneville grove, the proceeds to be devoted to the yellow fever fund. The price of admission is small but let it be remembered that "many hands make light work" and so it will be with the many who attend and contribute to this worthy cause. Good music and Gurdon Cady should draw an immense crowd.

A large barn belonging to Mr. Horace Whitaker, in the hollow below Sunnyside on Laurel Hill was entirely destroyed by fire between 10 and 11 o'clock Saturday night. A horse and wagon in the lower part of the structure were saved. The loss is about $2,000 which is partially covered by insurance.

The law regarding woodcock, quail and partridge will not be off till October 1st. The fine for shooting, snaring or attempting to kill any of the above birds before October 1st is $25 each on every bird taken.

The steamer Ella makes her last trip to Block Island today and her friends will have the benefit of reduced fares. Passengers for Watch Hill will be transferred at Stonington.

Tuesday, Sept. 10, 1878—Breed hall was well filled last evening by an audience who gathered to listen to temperance addresses by various speakers. Mr. Clarence Frost spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with attention. He gave brief accounts of his experiences in carrying on the temperance work in New York state and illustrated his discourse with stories and anecdotes of his own acquaintances who had sunk into the slavery of intemperance.

The ballot box in the postoffice has been emptied again and shows a collection of $159 for the southern sufferers. It is sincerely desired that the postoffice fund alone may be swelled to at least $200.

Of the several railroads centering at Worcester, the Norwich and Worcester carried the largest number of passengers to the New England fair, according to the coupons taken up, which were over 1,600.

Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1878—The Kelsey runs to Watch Hill, touching at Peninsula house, today. Passengers by this boat receive the same attention as others. Money buys the dinner. One man's scrip is just as good as another's.

Between 60 and 70 members of the Sedgwick Post, G. A. R. went to New London last night by steamer, to take part in reorganizing the Grand Army post in that city.

The temperance meeting at Breed hall continues to be fully attended and many speakers testify nightly to the good fruits that have rewarded their emancipation from the thraldom of rum. Last night many persons signed the pledge at the close of the meeting.

The Hook and Ladder boys at a meeting last evening voted to contribute $50 in response to the appeal of the fire department of New Orleans for aid for the yellow fever sufferers. Let the good work go on.

Thursday, Sept. 12, 1878—There was a social gathering of the children and adults of the Park church, in their chapel, yesterday afternoon and evening, held largely with a view to promoting an acquaintance with their new pastor, the Rev. Leonard W. Bacon.

The New London County Agricultural society hold their 24th annual fair next week. The attractions are varied and numerous. The season has been so productive that in promological, cereal and vegetable products there has seldom been an opportunity to make so large an exhibition. It is to be hoped that New London county will hold their best fair this year.

A street accordeon man opened fire on the town last night. Where are the police? Some of the streets of Norwich are narrow and we can't afford to relay our pavements every day. Nothing short of a boulevard would accommodate some of the notes of doom that got wedged in between the buildings on postoffice hill.

Friday, Sept. 13, 1878—Mr. William N. Andrew, grand representative of the Grand lodge of the United States, I. O. O. F., leaves town today to attend the session of the grand lodge, which meets in Baltimore on Monday next. The convention will probably continue through the week.

Columbian Commandery of Knights Templar of this city have forwarded to the Hon. J. L. Parsons, grand recorder, of Jackson, Miss., a draft on New York for $155 as their contribution to the fund for yellow fever sufferers. This is a most commendable act on the part of the Templars.

Mr. David Hall, (colored) one of our best known and most stylish young men, was married to Miss Zora Evans in the Central M. E. church, at a quarter before eight o'clock last night. A large congregation of friends graced the occasion and the bridal couple received a host of congratulations at the close of the ceremony.

We learn that Miss Crary's school starts the present term with a full compliment of pupils.

Saturday, Sept. 14, 1878—An intoxicated man who was driving recklessly through the streets yesterday, was arrested and taken to the police headquarters by two police officers. It appears that there is a firm attachment between horse and driver and the latter, determined not to desert his master, followed him up the walk and thrust his nose in the hall way. As there was not room and conveniences in the lock-up for horses, he was persuaded to accept lodging elsewhere.

The road between Mystic and Stonington seems to be infested by highwaymen. A few days ago, a young man, riding by night, was set upon but escaped by putting the whip to his horse. A shower of missles were sent at him, one of which struck him in the head and rendered him insensible for a time.

In consequence of the work of repairing that is being done on the trestle across Yantic cove, the passenger train due at Norwich and Worcester railroad depot at 11.25 yesterday forenoon, did not cross and the passengers were transferred in omnibuses.

TRUE HAPPINESS RENDERS MEN KIND AND SENSIBLE

ANSWERS AND INJUIRIES

KITTY LOU: Letters sent as requested.

CANTERBURY BELL: Many thanks.

AMILY: Your name has been added to the Social Corner list.

WHAT I HAVE FOUND OUT

Dear Corner Members: In making soup you never should boil it. Just let it simmer. You know when it boils, the liquid evaporates and the best of the flavor is lost.

To clean ivory: I have found to make a paste of sawdust, moistened with equal parts of lemon juice and water. Spread the paste on the ivory and let dry. Brush off with a dry brush. Dampen a soft cloth and dip it in salt. That will clean plain ivory.

You must not put fruit cake in a hot oven, if you do your fruit will go to the bottom; dredging fruit in flour also helps to keep it from sinking.

I found when I have egg white left over I can conserve them by leaving on a plate until thoroughly dry, then storing them in a glass jar.

One tablespoon of the dried egg white dissolved in two tablespoons of water will equal one egg white and will beat up stiffly and well.

A teaspoon of vinegar put in the water you boil your fish in will make white and firm.

When separating eggs, if you haven't an egg separator try separating them over a small funnel. The whites will pass through, leaving the yolk in the funnel.

Adding pitted prunes to gingerbread batter improves the gingerbread.

I keep three dishcloths on hand all the time. I make them of cheese cloth. Every time I wash dishes I rinse these out and dry two, the next time the other two. I find this a much wiser plan than using the same ones every time.

IMOGENE.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I must send a few words in to thank you all for the help you gave the 29th to make the picnic a success, especially those sisters who so willingly endured the heat of the kitchen. Old Sol surely did his duty that day. Never mind, it didn't rain. As usual, I find it very natural to forget. Some sister bought a basket of peaches and went home without them. She didn't give her name. Now if she will just let us know who she is we will gladly refund the price she paid for them.

I found a dinner plate and a square tin pan, also a napkin marked "Far East Garden."

U. C. E.: I have your pan. Isn't there some way for you to send for it? I find it's a good idea to put your name on a piece of adhesive tape and stick it on the dishes, then if forgotten, one can easily tell whom they belong to.

I'm afraid it won't be convenient for me to attend any of the club gatherings for a while on account of sickness in the family where constant watching is needed.

Monday morning and must get busy. As ever,

PLEASANT TIME AT MEETING.

Dear Editor and Corner Friends: Now that the summer has gone and the vacation season nearly over, we have begun with some of our fall and winter activities. The first of Club No. 2's meetings was held Sept. 11th in the Buckingham memorial with an attendance of 45, which is small, but the first meeting is never very large. We had a very pleasant time as usual and a fine dinner. We missed a great many who usually come. Some were away and others were busy with canning. Hope to see them all at the October meeting which will be the 9th. We were very sorry that Auntie No. 1 and Sister Ready were detained by sickness. Hope the sick one is better.

Aries: I heard you had a fall. Hope it was not serious and that you will be able to meet with us soon. Now that the cool weather is here one has more ambition.

U. C. E.: Did you find Bumble's patient better when you got home. I would have gone to Willimantic and helped celebrate Lavendar's birthday, the 12th, but was prevented. I know she had a pleasant day with the Cornerites and wish she may enjoy many more. With kind regards from SCOTTIE.

GOOD RECIPES.

Social Corner Sisters: I think these recipes may fill the wants of many.

Banana Fritters: One cup flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon powdered sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1-4 cup milk, 1 tablespoon of lime juice and 3 bananas. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add others in order. Force banana through sieve before adding, beat thoroughly. Drop by spoonfuls in hot fat.

Rice Omelet: Beat egg yolks as usual; add 1-2 cup of cooked rice, season, fold in egg white beaten stiff and cook as usual.

Baked Halibut with Stuffing: Clean the medium sized halibut and brush the inside with salt. Make a stuffing of equal amount of rolled crackers and bread crumbs, and one-half of this amount of butter and hot water. Season with salt, pepper, onion juice and a few sprigs of parsley (chopped). Stuff fish and sew with twine. Place in a baking pan and pour around it tomato sauce made from 2 cups of tomatoes, 1 cup hot water, 1 slice of minced onion, 1-2 tablespoon sugar, 3 tablespoons melted butter blended with 3 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons melted butter, blended with 3 tablespoons of flour, 3-4 teaspoon salt, one-third teaspoon pepper and 3 cloves. Place a strip of bacon lengthwise over the top and bake 35 minutes. To serve pour the sauce on the fish.

GUESS WHO?

WHAT CHANGEABLE WEATHER.

Dear Social Corner Friends: What very changeable weather we do have. Sort of bean porridge hot, bean porridge cold weather, but I guess we will all have to be satisfied with whatever kind of weather the good Lord sends us.

Joan: Was sorry to hear that you have not been so well.

Crimson Rambler: My turn now to say "Congratualtions."

Well Kitty Lou is coming into her own at last, and rightfully, too. She certainly spends a great amount of time and thought on her letters. She may be well called the "Old Faithful of the Social Corner.

Now Kitty Lou, don't you let all praise and poetry turn your head. Ha, Ha. But I know that you know that Susie is only joking, eh.

Well, I haven't much time and really not much to say but A Reader asked me a question so I thought I must write a few words. You ask me, why do so many employers look upon their help as a dumb lot and not worthy of consideration? Is that the way you put it? I may have it wrong, but anyway that is a rather testy question for me to answer for in the first place I have never had the pleasure of being an employer and second, it has been my pleasure to work for some of the finest employers that ever walked in shoe leather. Gentlemen in every sense of the word, and always kind and considerate, for which I was always thankful.

But I imagine the kind that do not think of their employes as human beings are so self-centered and arrogant that they think of themselves as the perfect human being and we all know that there is no such thing. But it takes all kinds to make a world.

Maple Leaf: A little bird told me they were talking to you down town one day.

Tatting: Hope you are feeling better. Did you get my letter?

E. L. M.—No, Susie did not go to the Strand this summer. Annette went but I was busy elsewhere.

Cosmos: Don't worry, truth will prevail.

Well I hope to be able to go to some of the meetings soon.

Many thanks Mr. Editor, for my yellow slip.

My sympathy to all the sick and those who are in trouble.

BLACK EYED SUSIE.

HOME.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sister: I think we are to cherish all those things that guard the home. There is something that can't be found anywhere else no matter how poor, how inadequate, how faulty, how narrow. There is sanctuary.

No matter how desolate the place, made so by tragedy or wrong, it is always home.

It is hard to enlarge upon that word, it means so much, peace, comfort, smiling naturally with one's folks free from the artificial and defensive attitude toward all the outside world, mother, father, sisters, brothers; where old friends come, where there are old books, old furniture, old home.

How many times I have thought I would like to get up and see everything new, yet when I come right down to the bare facts, I would miss my old furniture. I wouldn't care for new faces. No, I am satisfied with what we have.

Sometimes you know boys and girls would run away from that home and mother. There are times when it seems a bare necessity and a convenience and the outside world holds so much glamour and opportunity. But young men and women never close the door of the house against yourselves. Only those who have gone from it know the sweetness of it, yes of going back to it. Whatever your plans or ambitions, let none be more determined or higher than those who make a home for it and guard it.

If no one has given you a home make one for yourself. It is the beginning and end of all things in life. Boys and girls growing up, build all your ideals around it. Hold dear the home you were in while you were little and cherish the ones you will find for yourself when you go out alone.

Life changes from day to day—we change. Children you cannot see beyond the end of your noses. When you make a mistake the universe is not going to fall about your ear.

You know John Blake says, If you regret the past you have ample time, even if you are an elderly person to make some amends for it.

If you have wasted half your life there is still an unwasted half which can be used as it ought to be used. It is much harder to make up for a misspent youth than to live as it should be lived. But it can be done.

Looking forward to the future with dread is like looking out at a thunder storm with dread.

You may be felled by a circumstance as you may be felled by lightning, but being frightened in advance is no benefit.

John Blake never spoke truer words in his life, than the above.

If we can clear today of past regrets and future fears, by some means more effective and less habit forming than the wine cup, we have really done something worth while.

ETHELYN.

THREE CHARMS.

—Dear Editor and Members: The lucky horse-shoe is something I have known of all my life, also the Blarney stone, and the rabbit's foot. I have just heard of their supposed history lately, so thought you may be interested, too.

Lucky Horse-shoe: Most of the houses in the west end of London were protected against witches and evil spirits in the 17th century, by having horse-shoes fastened to them in various ways. It was the belief that then no witch or evil genius could cross the threshold which was protected by the shoe. The custom of nailing horse-shoes, for luck, to all kinds of sailing craft is still, to a certain extent, in vogue, and we all know how fortunate it is considered for anyone to find a horseshoe, the good luck being increased by the number of nails that are attached to the shoe when it is picked up. This superstition can be traced back to the 17th century, and then it seems to be lost in the obcurity of the ages.

The Blarney Stone: Blarney is a village in Ireland, in the county of Cork, about five miles from the farfamed city of that name. It is chiefly celebrated as giving the name to a peculiar kind of eloquence which is said to be characteristic of the lighthearted natives of the Emerald Isle. The old castle at Blarney contains the identical stone, the kissing of which is believed to give the person peculiar skill in speech. It is one of those superstitions which can be traced back until the mind of man runneth not to the contrary.

Rabbit's Foot: The legends of "Br'er Rabbit" among the believers, his clever devices in outwitting his natural enemies—the dog, fox, and wolf—and thwarting every scheme designed for his own punishment, are almost without number. From these legends of the preternatural sagacity of the living rabbit came the idea that the dead rabbit had certain magic powers. So they believe to carry a rabbit's foot in the pocket is not only a talisman for good luck, but is a specific for diseases. The left hind foot of the rabbit is believed to have the most efficacy, and if it be taken from a rabbit that runs in a graveyard, its supernatural properties are believed to be quite irresistible.

BELLA DEE.

REMINDED OF POEM

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I must write a little bit so I will not be forgotten. The last gathering was at East Killingly, only three miles from home, and I not there. I wanted to go once more this year, and it is worth a trip there to gaze on the scenery. But I enjoy the letters, especially of the different trips and have forgotten my disappointment. Now I will tell you what I do when there is a hard shower, which I do not enjoy. I close the windows and doors, so there will be no draft, for a current of air is a conductor of lightnings, and sit in the middle of the room with my feet in another chair. It is careless to sit near the wall or chimney.

Aries: Many thanks for your kind letter. I enjoyed the poem too. Have laid it away with my treasures. Hope you are better of your injury.

Kentucky Wonder: I use "Hood's Dyspepsiets" for indigestion, in fact they have about cured me. Try them and I hope you will be better.

Silent Partner: Please have the poem "Ellen Adair" printed.

Jennie: Reading of yours and Theoda's trip to Plymouth, I was reminded of a poem of which I learned the last verse. It is:

The Pilgrim spirit has not fled,
It walks in noon's broad light:
And it watches the bed of the glorious dead
With the holy stars by night;
It watches the bed of the brave who have bled,
And shall guard this ice bound shore
Till the waves of the bay where the Mayflower lay
Shall foam and freeze no more.

LORETTA (Club 4).

HOME.

Dear Editor and Corner Members: Some years ago, we had hanging in our home a canvas motto "Home Sweet Home" resting in a black walnut frame, which was greatly admired by my mother. Often have heard people remark, when they have been away visiting friends upon returning they were glad to get home, even if it be ever so humble.

How many it seems today do appreciate a home. I have always noticed whenever Joan has written me, her letters were always headed "Home" or "Home Sweet Home," and you can tell she really appreciates "Home" so I will try and give you a brief view of a home.

Home should be a heaven of rest and peace.

But some fail to always find it so. To some it is a palace, luxurious in all its furnishings. To others it is but little more than a hut. But many times you will find peace and contentment to those who dwell within those walls.

We learn it is entirely natural instinct. You will notice in springtime the birds are busy building their homes and different species of animals desire their own homes, where they are supposed to find comfort and pleasing onent. All this should finally culminate in home building.

Every human being is entitled to the happiness that comes in home building. Many times you will hear young people remark, When I am so and so, I'll have a home of my own.

Some only get as far as their dream carries them. Many others reach that joyous delight, and obtain that glorious motto "Home Sweet Home," which they fully deserve the love they crave.

We all want to control our own lives. No one likes to be continuously under orders from others, if we are lonely and alone, we must do our part by searching for a soul mate that is attuned in harmony with our own, so we may have a heaven of rest and peace, and place up a banner of some kind that will read "Home Sweet Home."

Home does not have to be a stately mansion with gilded walls, and stately grounds. It can even be made of two rooms in an apartment, or a cottage, or a camp. Where the good man comes home from either office, shop or any place where he obtains an honest living, to find upon entering that the surroundings of the interior of his abode, represent and speel out the "motto" of Home Sweet Home.

Balsam Fir: While writing the above in camp a card from you, showing a camping scene in the woods of Maine, which fitted in nicely with the above article. Sorry you miss my chatty letters. I have not lost interest in writing. You know it is advisable to refrain once in a while, and give others this valuable space.

Nonesopretty: I learn that you also joined the crowd, and attended the fiddlers' convention at Clayville on Sunday.

Peggy Alder: So you are home once more, only hope you will keep on improving.

Best wishes to all the club members. As ever, KOCHIA.

RIGHT IMPRESSIONS

Dear Social Corner Friends: Vacations are over and the year's work in school has begun and everyone is interested in new methods and better ways for bringing the much desired good results for every child.

We were interested in one idea in Cosmos' good letter on "Truth". She writes, "My mother taught me to tell the truth."

No doubt the majority of parents would say: I taught my child to tell the truth. But did they?

A child learns mostly from what he sees and hears; and how many homes always teach truth by their actions and words?

Mother has to be polite and hospitable and how many times the child hears mother express her consternation and regret at the arrival of uninvited and undesired guests and is surprised to hear her welcome them cordially and say: "I am so glad you came."

The child can only draw the inference that mother does not speak the truth and that he does not need to either.

It does not take the child long to find out father does not tell the truth, as he hears him relate with glee, getting the best in his business dealings with others.

Now there was nothing wrong or unusual about father's deal, but father had retained his childhood habit of always making himself the hero of whatever he did.

Mother was very fond of those friends but that particular day was an inconvenient one for her to have guests; and she had never broken herself of her infant habit of expressing aloud her dislike of anything that crossed her for the moment.

Both should have learned to think what impression will my child get from what I say and do?

But the best of us are still very much in the primitive, the wild, the uncultured stage.

But this condition will not go well with this advanced mechanical age.

Very different mental training must be given to every child now, and not only father and mother, but the school must wake up to the fact that character and responsibility, fairness and respect for the welfare and rights of others must be developed in every child from the beginning until it is his instinctive automatic and only way of thinking and doing.

Now when everything we can have and do is so linked in with the efforts of others we are dependent for our comfort and pleasure and safety upon the good will and ability and care of others.

If we are to be safe and comfortable and happy, others must learn to be reasonable and careful, too.

If we realized how much harm we are doing the child we would be on our guard and make sure the child is getting the right impression from what he sees and hears.

Each child must not only be taught to speak the truth and do right, but someone must see that he is learning to do this.

Nothing we can do for the child will be more helpful to him than to see that he learns to understand values and to instinctively do right.

ATTENDS FIDDLERS' CONVENTION

Dear Editor and Friends: Well Sunday was a beautiful September day: I attended the fiddlers' convention with my cousins at Clayville. It was fine until that old drum came in then I was ready to go home. For if there is anything I do hate, it is an old bass drum. Well we started at last and got near the Chopmist road, when a car came up and a man shouted, "Mister, your wheel is warbling." So we got out and looked. Sure enough there she was going in all shapes, but the right one. Well the kind man in the other car helped to right it up. It came very near an accident, but as the old saying is, a miss is as good as a mile. Well we went on through Chepachett, West Glouchester and East Putnam and home. It was a fine drive and I enjoyed it very much.

Kochia: How did you Ma arrive home? All right I hope. Here is a question for you to answer and others who care to: Now if a man marries a widow with three children and her name is Lizzie, what has he got?

Pete: I was very glad to meet you. Hope we may meet again.

Comfort: Hope you are well.

I hope Aries and her daughter and L. T. H. and Skipper are also well.

I was glad to see letters from Butterfly and 1492. Write again.

Rural Delivery: Where, oh where are you?

Pussy Friend: Where are you?

Winter Robin: Give us one of your jolly letters. I think you have lost your pen, but please find it once more.

I extend my sympathy to all sick or in trouble. May God be with you all. The heart's best wish of

ANSWERS WRITER'S QUERY

Dear Cornerites: I have been asked if in making cake from any recipe, should you always use level measurements? Also should you sift your flour before measuring? And last of all should you use the milk called for or add more if needed and how stiff should cake mixture be?

I don't blame the writer for wanting to make good home-made cake, as almost everyone prefers it. Mable Dulon tells a story how the Atlanta fleet lay at anchor in the Hudson river. A middy on shore leave was asked by a benevolent lady what she could do to make his visit in New York happy for him, thinking perhaps to furnish a visit to a show or a trip around the big city. "Gee, mam, do you mean it?" the middy turned and asked, while his fingers worked convulsively. "Then give me a piece of home-made cake," he said. "Just one of those wedged-shaped slabs. It's all I want. It's been three years since I've been home."

And before the bugle called, a cake of the largest size and the longed-for kind found its way across the water to the great battleship and one more boy was given the courage to go on.

From a purely dietitian standpoint cake is not one of our necessary foods, and many of us no doubt, particularly children, would be better off with less than more of it. Yet there are times when the right kind of home-made cake can have a value above gold and its baking is an art that should not be despised nor can we afford to forget it.

Cake of good flavor that is light and of fine mixture is neither a matter of chance or knack. Perfect and uniform results are possible for us all.

So many write they are discouraged in their cooking, spoiling their cake etc. You will do better next time. Of course, you get discouraged. We all do, and realize afterward how very foolish we were. But cheer up, the good Lord has no favorites, and all of us get our portion of the sweets and of the bitter.

It's fun to accept the sweet, but when the bitter is handed out and the doses handed to us, don't we stand on tiptoe and point our noses to high heaven and howl and we admit there is no escape. We make it "taste worse", by swallowing it slowly bit by bit, stopping often to howl some more and more, and weep tears of self pity. It doesn't do. After a while when you learn to make light of bitter things, you will grow wiser somehow and accept them with a smile, and then we find they are not as bitter as we made ourselves believe. We forget and dwell so much upon the unpleasant features of our troubles and we make ourselves unhappy.

Level measurements are essential in cooking, as they are more accurate.

Flour should always be sifted before measuring; flour, sugar, confectioners, granulated, powdered sugar and soda should always be measured before using.

A cup of unsifted flour measures about two tablespoons more than the sifted. There are 16 level tablespoons of flour to a cup.

The general rule in cake-making is to allow one cup of liquid to two cups of flour. A plain cake mixture should be easily poured; a moderate oven should be used when making cake, approximately 300-325 degrees F. Too hot an oven will make your raisins fall to the bottom.

Always follow your recipe for mixing. A reliable recipe, all with first class ingredients, will be no good if you don't follow it with accuracy, and also careless baking, you will not get desired results. It is impossible to produce good results with carelessness in any form.

A TRIP TO BLOCK ISLAND

Dear Editor and Sisters: It doesn't seem possible, does it, that summer is over and cold weather will soon be here. The days are growing shorter so rapidly it makes me wish we had electric lights.

I had a trip to Block Island the last week in August that might be of interest.

A friend, knowing I had Tuesday to do as I pleased, came over around ten o'clock and suggested we go somewhere. We couldn't seem to decide on any place (she had a car) so we went over to see Milky Way and ask her opinion. She said why not Block Island and we wondered why it hadn't occurred to us. We drove to Stonington and left the car in Beer's yard. She wanted to know why we hadn't let her know we were going so she could have gone too, and I rather think Pyrethrum would have liked to if we had only known before the last minute.

The boat, "Elizabeth Ann", (my name by the way) left at 11:30, so we didn't have much time to spare. It was rather foggy but soon cleared after we started and the sun was shining before we reached the island. As we passed out between the breakwaters we couldn't help but wonder at the immense amount of labor and money it must have taken to build them. As I do not know starboard from larboard I don't know which side the boat we sat on but anyway we saw Fisher's Island quite plainly and we passed several bell-buoys that rang with the motion of the water. Then we passed the masts of a boat sticking up out of the water. Someone told us it was a boat that went aground on a reef and sank during the war. There were several fishing boats in the distance but we passed fairly near a coast guard boat that was practically still. About 1:30 we landed at the island. It is semi-circular in shape and very hilly with very few trees. At one end there was a large flock of sheep. The ends seem to be mostly farm land while the town is in the center. Nearly everyone was going in one direction so we followed the crowd and soon came to the other side of the island. We passed a small pond dotted with pond lilies that filled the air with fragrance. I wonder how long they would have lasted had that pond been as close to some of our roads.

The main part of the town was over here. Shops and restaurants lined the streets while the hotels were on the hills that overlook the old harbor.

We stopped at the Blue Dory tea room for lunch. It is a very attractive place, the walls being decorated with blue dorys moored in very realistic water. The furniture is painted blue and white. For dessert we had Blue Dory cake which is solid chocolate cake, three layers with fudge filling and White mountain cream icing. The fishing boats are tied up at the wharfs here and the Mount Hope and mail boats from Providence dock here too. The harbor is made by breakwaters built of enormous blocks of granite and two of them are made of red stone blocks about six by four feet by six inches thick. We watched the fishing boats come up and unload. People were going and coming all the time along the dock to the Mount Hope. The automobile traffic reminded us of Dixon square on a busy morning and I don't think I ever saw so many taxis in one place before. We stayed until 3:15 and saw the Providence boats go out, then started back to the "Elizabeth Ann". As the walking would be decidedly wet if we got left, we hailed a taxi (a "Lizzie" by the way) and rode back in state, arriving in time to see the Norwich and New London boat, "Nelseco II" take on her passengers and sail away. We left at 4 and while it was a bit rougher than the trip over it wasn't bad and no one was sea-sick. We sat on the same side of the boat and so had a different view than going over. When we came in sight of Atlantic beach and Weekapaug the houses looked like cars parked along the beach. We came in nearer and when off Watch Hill had a very good view of Naptree Point and the Folly. The Folly is said to be the boundary mark of three states, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York. The buoys we saw coming back were huge iron tanks painted red and black and as they worked up and down with the action of the waves we could see they were covered with a marine growth below the water line. There were several fishing boats, some coming to Stonington and others going father on that we left bobbing up and down in the wash we made. It was a few minutes past 6 when we landed and Beers insisted we have a cup of tea before we went any further. It was certainly appreciated as we felt rather empty by that time. Another stop for some candy for the kiddies and then home. We had had a fine trip and an inexpensive one at that as we spent about $3 piece and that included our round trip ticket. I hope to go again some time. Club No. 6 is to meet in Wequetequock again the last Tuesday in October. No meeting in September.

REMINISCENCES OF HAMPTON.

Dear Social Corner Friends: Continuing my itinerary in Hampton: From the Mason Fuller place we come to Herbert Hughes' house. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes' daughter, Louise, married Andrew Ringe. She was his second wife. Mrs. Hughes was a sister of Mrs. Cyril Whitaker.

The next house was occupied by Herbert Hughes' brother, Dr. Dyer Hughes, his wife and sister, Mrs. Newton and her son, Edgar, who was postmaster in Hampton several years. Dr. Hughes used to get 50c a visit to patients. He covered a large field, riding in an open wagon until he was quite ill himself. Then his physician advised him to get a carriage. His first wife, much younger than he, used to go with him and assist in some cases. It was said that sometimes while he was in to see his patient she remained outside and played with the children, if any in the family. Even that was helpful. They had one daughter who died young. For his second wife he married Ann Lyon. This union caused the governor to exclaim Ann has done well.

A Mrs. Stayman and son, John, Mrs. Avery and daughter were at Dr. Hughes much; being sisters of his and I'm inclined to think occupied part of Herbert Hughes' house.

At the next place we find the Tweedles, John, Philo, Henrietta and Dwight, son of John and Hannah Snow, who did housework. Such nice looking cows as they kept and everything in good condition about their place. Before going to Hampton to live (I remained with my grandparents after my parents moved to the hill) I rode with Waterman Brown of Westminster to visit them and stopped at Silas Tiffany's store. I sat in the wagon while Mr. Brown went in the store. Soon a tall boy came up to the wagon and gave me two or three cents. He asked me if I would like to have him get some candy for me. I gave him the pennies and he bought maple sugar, little cakes. I never saw or ate any before. I had no idea who the boy was then, but attended school together afterwards. He was much older than I. I have often though how easily I gave up the money. In those days children, or at least I, did not have pennies at my command, when I really made grandma understand I'd like some candy, she gave me two or three eggs which I carried to Mr. Imer's store near the school and received a stick of candy. Eggs then were 12c per dozen.

Mr. and Mrs. William Clark came next in line. They used to take boarders. Henry Bingham who worked in George Brown's store, boarded there. He came from Scotland and married Eliza Dorrance of the same town. When Worthington Button's family came for two months in the summer they used to board there.

A man who could tell people what they were good for came to the town hall. Many people went there. Mr. Clark was curious—and was informed that he liked to hoe corn, but liked the short rows best causing much laughter. Mrs. Clark outlived her husband and died where she had boarded for some time with Mrs. John Cockings. Mrs. Mason Cleveland, a widow, who lived in the next house, had three sons, Edward, Perkins and George. Mrs. Cleveland was a sister of Milton Perkins. Her husband was a brother of Gov. Cleveland as I've been told.

William Fuller occupied the cottage on the corner as you go up the west road. It was removed or taken down several years ago. Mrs. Fuller used to be kind to the school children as we passed by their house daily. They had two children, Andrew and Delia. The former worked in George Brown's store for a little while when red shoelacings were in style for black shoes. Delia married John Tweedy. She was quite a singer. One piece she sang in church was "Who are these in bright array?" Much emphasis on bright.

I recently found a cousin of hers living in Norwich, well advanced in years, and having Delia's picture gave it to her. At first she thought it herself—close resemblance. Mrs. Hutchins asked me if I knew what became of Andrew? Replied, I did not. CRETIA.

WHAT HER HUSBAND SAYS.

Dear Social Corner Folks: The questions asked by A Reader were a subject on which to ponder and reply. good idea to keep our writers with a I notice one question is directed to any one of the members, as follows: "Why do many wives get on the injured martyred look or air in place of telling their husband just what they want or think?"

That idea of telling 'em just what we want, is all right in theory, but when we do tell them, ten to one the husband says "You go straight to hades." Mine does. And if one ventures to say what one thinks, alas! He announces that we are a fit subject for Brewster's Neck, also to "shut up." Some husbands like to head us off before we get started. They imagine they save cash and a barrel of argument besides. God bless 'em! What would this world be like without 'em?

Glad to note we have an Optimist in our family who does not frown on "a little nonsense now and then."

At High Point, North Carolina (The Industrial City) they boast of a bureau of information. The building containing this office is built to represent a huge bureau. This bureau is 25 feet high, not including the mirror which is 10 feet more, making the complete office 25 feet by 20 feet, by 20 feet. The front of this building imitates a costly bureau drawers, handles and fancy designs. Windows are at the ends and back and the door is at the rear also. Rather unique.

Aries: Here's another—

A maiden decidely freckled
One evening her steady beau heckled
She called him a fish
Whereupon he said, "Pish!"
What are you but a trout that is speckled?"

There's an animal better of note
Who butts better by far than a shoat:
And gosh but he's proud
When he bla-bla's aloud:
"I'm a he-Billy-butting old goat."

There was a young man, Thomas Pine,
Put his head on the New Haven line,
But he died of ennue,
For the 4.53
Didn't come tell a quarter past nine.

As a beauty I am not a star,
There are others more handsome by far,
But my face—I don't mind it,
For I am behind it,
It's the people in front get the jar.
Ha, ha. BRICK-TOP.

TWO WEEKS IN THE "LAND OF THE SKY"

Mr. Editor and Social Corner Readers: While a boarder in the family of J. C. Luttrell in Knoxville, Tenn., in the summer of 1884, two gentlemen from the north, one from Rhode Island and the other from Connecticut, visited Knoxville with a purpose of taking a trip through the Chilhowee and Great Smoky mountains. They wished to make Knoxville their headquarters for most of the time, while taking in the wild mountain scenery.

They desired a private family rather than a hotel. Mr. Luttrell, having ample room took them as guests. As I was to have two weeks' vacation, they suggested that I join the company. Not having had the opportunity to visit the wild mountain scenery, I improved the opportunity.

The first few days was spent in a horse back ride through the Chilhowees, the near range to Knoxville, whose peaks range from 2000 to 4000 feet high.

Returning to our boarding place one night after spending two days in the mountains, we told Mr. Luttrell of the wild beauty of the Chilhowees. He said, "You haven't begun to see the wonders and beauty of the Tennessee mountains and won't until you make a survey of the 'Great Smokies.'"

I was born in this mountain region and can give you directions and suggestions to follow where the grandeur of the mountains will be a memory to you.

"To make the survey will take the greater part of two weeks, so make provision and arrange with the stable keeper for the use of horses that are safe as mountain climbers. Equip yourselves with such articles as you will need, such as cigars and tobaccos, (as I can see you use them) besides a large pair of saddle bags, as you may pick up souvenirs that would interest your friends at home.

"Your guide (as you will need one) will supply rubber and wool blankets for each of you, besides a tent that will accomodate all comfortably, as you will be obliged to spend some of the nights in the mountains some distance from any habitation. In some cases you will find a mountaineer where you can be accomodated for the night, or during a storm should you be caught in one, for at this time of the year they are wild and furious in the mountains, unless you happen to be above the storm clouds.

"You will find the natives very hospitable in most cases. Their fare is not like hotel fare, but is substantial and satisfying. Some you will meet, may be suspicious of your appearance in that wild section, but once assured of your honesty of purpose, they will give you their warm side and hospitality. I will suggest that if you wear anything on your clothes like a pencil holder or any badge of an order to which you may belong, keep it from sight, for they may suspicion you as being revenuer looking after moonshiners.

"I will give you a letter of introduction to one James Trew, who is an old guide; he will take you through the devious ways where you won't miss any part of the wild and grand scenery of the mountain region. A stranger would get lost before he had penetrated the mountain wilderness, an hour. He is thoroughly reliable and is known to all of the mountaineers on your line of travel. As he is your guide, they will know that you are not hunting them, to destroy their stills, and cite them to federal court at Knoxville for moonshining.

The letter to Trew read as follows:

Mr. Jame Trew,
Montvale Springs, Tenn.,

Dear friend Jim: This will introduce you to Mr. Collottof Rhode Island, Mr. Blakeslee of Connecticut and Mr. Dumont of Knoxville, who are here to visit our mountain region. It is my desire that you act as their guide through the most wild and interesting section of the Great Smokies." They are gentlemen of high order and character: any courtesy shown them will be greatly appreciated. Should you not be able to guide them, please turn this letter over to any trusted and safe guide

Yours truly,
J. C. Luttrell

We were on our way early next morning, arriving at Maryville, 18 miles away, for dinner, after which we followed a well traveled road 16 miles further to Montvale Springs, passing through the gap of the Unaku mountains, where the little Tennessee river flows through at an elevation of nearly 2,000 feet above the sea. We arrived at Montvale at 1:30 p. m. where we made inquiry at the hotel for James Trew. With his hands to his mouth one of the number of bystanders who heard our inquiry, called loudly, "Jim Trew." At the same time some one said, "That he air," pointing to a lean, lank, long-haired individual, sitting on his haunchebes with a 6 inch blade of a knife, whittling, just whittling.

"What air the trouble?"

"Strangers hyar to see yee, I reckon."

Throwing down the pine stick, he walked up to us, looking at us from head to foot, and said, "I air Jim Trew." Handing him the letter, he hesitatingly read it aloud and said, "I reckon you-uns all want me to help you-uns to view the mountains."

"Yes, to act as our guide and show us the grand and wild scenery of the Great Smokies."

"Just as soon as old Fury eats a few nubbins er corn, and I pack my kit I air ready. How long do yee kakalate to employ me to holp yee in the mountains?"

"O,a week, and perhaps longer. What will you charge per day?"

"My price air two dollars a day, rain or shine. With old Fury, and all we can eat and sleep as best we kin."

"We agree to your terms, Mr. Trew."

"Wall I reckon hit air a trade, Old Fury has got threw munchin by this er time, and I hev my kit packed; weel soon be off."

He leads out a well-shaped and fat horse, saddled and bridled, and a pair of large saddle bags, well filled, are thrown over the horse just in front of the saddle. Protruding from the bags is the neck of a jug. Asking him what it contained, the answer was, "The fust runnin from the wrom, fur bites aw the rattler. They air only jist mean; natin' you know."

Hooked to the pommel of the saddle is a long muzzle-loading rifle; behind is a large pack, containing two rubber and two wool blankets for each of us, and a small tent large enough for the four. As he mounts, we see two bright 38 caliber pistols dangling from his belt, and in a pocket on the belt is his mountain barometer. "Why so many shooting irons?" was asked.

"Whar we-uns air goin, the mountings air full of beasts; bars, wolfs, panthers an sich, an cold led air good fur em. Now, fall in an weel be threw the gap into Cades Cove afore the sun drops back er the Chilhowees an weel stop fur the nite at Ed Kidd's I reckon."

Just as the shadows of the Chilhowees began to lengthen over the cove we reined up before a substantial and roomy log cabin.

"Hello Ed! I reckon you can put us fur the nite. Me an these three fellers. They air from the north, an air hyar to view the Great Smokies. They ain't revenuers. Jim Luttrell uv Knoxville sent em along fur me tew show 'em our mountings. I know Jim Luttrell. He were born nein Eskaqua cove. Heed send nobody to you-uns that want squar. Light, an hitch an set awhile."

Dismounting and hitching the horses to a substantial rail, we seated ourselves on a long bench, made from a large log split in half, with legs.

Trew introducing us in this manner: "This gentleman air Mr. Colt, an this air Mr. Blakeslee an this air Mr. Dumont from Knoxville. This aig Ed Kidd, gentlemen."

"Glad to know you Mr. Kidd," said we three.

"Glad tew meet yu-uns. So yu-uns air from the north, an came to view our mountings."

"Yes, we were never in a mountainous country before and we think a trip through the southern mountains will interest us very much."

Kidd's boy lead two of the horses to the stable, and the guide took the other two in hand.

"If yu-uns want tew wash afore we sup, you'll find a bucket down thar by the spring house, an soap I reckon.

"Say Miranda, air thar a cloth fur wipin down to the spring?"

"Yes, paw, I tuck one thar afore shortly, as I reckon they might want to wash afore they et," said a buxom rosy cheeked miss of 18 summers, the daughter of Mr. Kidd.

Soon supper was announced. We were seated at a long table, neatly covered with a white cloth. The table was loaded down with a most savory article of food; a loin of a young bear, well roasted, with vegetables and corn pone. Have a slo of peach and honey afore ye eat? Hit air harmless, but mighty warmin' to the stumak. Hit air more than 8 years since it run from the still. I keep hit fur company."

We each took a light drink, as it was a drink foreign to us, but easily to get acquainted with, for it was very tasty and seductive.

After saying grace we were asked to have some of the bar meat, and other things along with it. Our plates were well loaded with a meat never before tasted, but it was very tasty, and we enjoyed it greatly, and asked for another serving. After supper, and the horses were fed and cared for, we seated outside of the cabin, where we were plied with questions as to what part of the north we came from, and how far it was away, and how long we expected to be in the south.

Mr Kidd was told that Mr. Blakeslee was from Hartford, Conn.; Mr. Colt from Providence, R. I. and Mr. Dumont was formerly from Connecticut but was now a resident of Knoxville.

"General Burnside cum frum Rhode Island; did ye know him?"

"Yes, I knew him well."

"Give me your hand; glad tew know as how yew know the biggest general that ever lived, except Old Hickory." I fit with him, Burnside, at Knoxville. I war a sargent in his army. He and I helped to lick Jim Longstrete at Fort Sanders. I tell yee mighty, how we-uns slaughtered them air rebels; the dead ones jest laid in piles, an the ditch were full off arms and legs scattered all around. You'd lafted, hed you seen them wounded rebels; some with legs off and arms, squirmin' an flutterin' on the ground, like a pasel of chickens with their heds chopped off. I tell yee when them air brass Napoleons barked, loaded with shot an shell, it meant death to them, as dared to face hit. Morn a thousand was killed and wounded, in less than a hour."

All day in the saddle was tiresome and we retired quite early, after spending a pleasant evening with the family.

The next day if favorable we were to make a trip, and explore the wildness of "Gregory Bald," a mountain 5860 feet high.

In my next article I will tell the readers of the wild and wonderful scenery of the Great Smokies, also of the peculiarities of other natives.

I am using as best I can the dialect of the native mountaineers learning it from hearing it spoken while living several years in Knoxville and doing business with them.

TWO WIVES OF JOHN T. HOYT APPEAL TO NEW LONDON POLICE TO FIND HIM

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—John T. Hoyt, who supposedly lives on the Niantic river near this city, will be in hot water if found by the police and if accusations of two women are proven to be true. The department this morning received a request of two wives of the man to locate him. Mrs. Mel T. Hoyt of Shelby, O., represents herself as wife number one, while M. E. Wylie of Portsmouth, N. H., claims to be the second spouse of the erring husband. Each requested local police to notify her in case he is located.

In observance of Rosh HaaHanah, all stores conducted by members of the Jewish race will be closed tomorrow, with one or two exceptions. Local synagogues are preparing special services for the day.

FRESHMAN ENROLLMENT AT BULKELEY IS 465

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—Four hundred and sixty-five students have enrolled in the freshman class of the Bulkeley school and more are expected to seek admission. This is the largest enrollment in the history of the school and is looked upon as gratifying by the faculty and trustees.

News reached this city today that Capt. George Gross, for years a resident of this city, had died in Alexandria, Ontario. For a considerable period he was skipper of the ferryboat plying between here and Groton and is well remembered by many local citizens.

The Friday Evening Bridge club was entertained by Mrs. Louis A. Round of Montauk avenue on the steamer Elizabeth Ann, the captain of which is her son, Louis A. Round, Jr. After a luncheon on the boat, the party went ashore at Block Island.

Members of the Ladies' Aid society of the First Baptist church were entertained yesterday afternoon by Mrs. E. N. Keeney of Ocean avenue. A social time was enjoyed, following which refreshments were served.

Miss Madeline Gorman of Ocean avenue has resigned with the Connecticut Power Co. She is to enter Riker college in Trenton, N. J., where she will take a course in higher accountancy. Associate employes presented the young lady a beautiful wrist watch.

The Woman's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian-Universalist church held a supper last night in the parish hall of the church. An attractive and entertaining program of instrumental music and songs was enjoyed.

PATROLMEN TREATED SAILORS ONLY AS THEY MERITED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—Patrolmen Albert Iverson and Thomas Lyden need have no further fear of charges brought by the United States navy of mistreating two sailors who were accused of throwing bullets on the hot dog griddle at Jack's place, Ocean Beach. After a thorough investigation of the affair by City Manager Holt and the officials of the police department it was decided that there was no evidence to show that the officers had acted outside of their authority. A letter to this effect was forwarded today to Admiral Brumby by City Manager Holt. The two sailors, particularly Katilus, when charged with the offense pleaded guilty and when asked if he had anything to say in his defense, Katilus stated that he did not. All the facts were reviewed in the letter to Admiral Brumby in order that he might thoroughly understand the case.

ALEXANDER MAKES HIM COUGH UP $4,700 TAXES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—The sale of the property of Leiberman Sharaf of 72 Faire Harbour place, as ordered by Tax Collector Hibbard N. Alexander, will not be held. Mr. Sharaf has paid the entire amount of the back taxes which he owed the city. They amounted, with interest, to $4,700.

The police have been unable to obtain a single clue that would tend to substantiate the allegation of Theodore Goodrich, East Lyme milkman, that he was held up at the point of a revolver by one of two Negro bandits, on Fitch avenue early Wednesday morning. Goodrich declared that he frustrated an attempt of one of the crooks to shoot him by raising the bandit's hand which clutched the revolver and then sending at least one, if not two bullets into the body of the crook, who was assisted by his confederate to a waiting automobile which both escaped in. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, who went to the state laboratory, Hartford, yesterday, with a handkerchief found in the highway and which Goodrich declared the man he had shot wore as a mask, for the purpose of obtaining an analysis of stains on it to determine whether the stains were blood from the body of a human being or an animal, returned to New London last night without the analysis being made, for the laboratory was without chemists qualified to make such an analysis. The handkerchief was today turned over to physicians in a local hospital where an endeavor will be made to make the analysis and this will be also done at a New Haven hospital. The police continue to doubt the story of Goodrich that he was held up and if the analysis is returned by revealing that the stains on the handkerchief are not of blood from the body of a human being the investigation will be dropped.

Aaron Goldstein, well known Hebrew resident and for many years proprietor of a dry goods store on Bank street, died at a local hospital early today while being operated upon for hernia. He was of advanced years and is survived by his wife and several children. GEORGE GILMORE STRUCK BY LEVINSON AUTOMOBILE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 14—An automobile owned and driven by Edward C. Levinson, 429 Montauk avenue, tonight struck and injured George Gilmore, of Hope street. Gilmore is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering from painful bruises and a possible fractured leg. Gilmore, who is employed by the city, had been walking on Division street and at the corner of Bank street attempted to cross the latter street. As he stepped from the curb he walked against the side of the rear of the car and was knocked down. He was assisted to the automobile by Patrolman Braxton Hill and taken to the hospital where by tomorrow the extent of his injuries will have been determined. Gilmore until two years ago was with thes F. H. & A. H. Chappell company, in whose employ he had been for a score or more years.

Members of Jared R. Avery camp, Veterans of the Civil war, resumed their fall and winter activities last night at a meeting held in their quarters. One application for membership was received at the meeting.

Robert Prentis, 36, a resident of Virginia, until recently employed by the Merritt-Chapman-Scott company, was in the police court today charged with intoxication; because of his having been before the court a week ago on the same charge and following his threat to end his life by sending a bullet into his brain, he was today committed to the workhouse for 10 days. Yesterday Prentis was on Main street where he was arrested by Sergeant Samuel Hick and Patrolman Frank Philopena. A week ago after drinking bay rum, diluted, he went to the union station and made a nuisance of himself by engaging in conversation with passengers to whom he related his real or imaginative intention of taking his life. He was arrested but at that time was given suspension of judgment.

One other case of intoxication resulted in a fine of $20 and costs being imposed. In another instance the accused failed to appear and his bond of $25 was forfeited.

Joseph F. Joseph, 43 Bank street, was charged on two counts of violation of the city and state automobile laws, parking in restricted area on Green street and driving without a license. Judgment was suspended upon the accused paying the costs of the court.

Miss Elizabeth Roath, assistant city clerk, is having her vacation, the greater part of which will be spent in the White Mountains.

Drunks were the only occupants of cells at the police station tonight awaiting a hearing in the police court tomorrow. There are three of them and were arrested on North Bank and Main street.

The September meeting of the Boys' Work committee of the New London Y. M. C. A. was held at the Y Wednesday afternoon. Announcement was made of the completion of plans for the use of buttons by members of the boys' division for admission to the building during the coming season. A button containing the red triangle with the words "Boys' Division, New London Y. M. C. A." will be furnished every member of the division, and each will contain a serial number. The background of the button will be one of six colors, the color distinguishing the classes to which the wearer is eligble, dividing between juniors, intermediates, etc. The resignation of Rev. Arthur F. Wagner as a member of this committee was received and accepted with deep regret. During the few months Mr. Wagner had been on the committee he had made his personality felt by all, and his understanding of the needs of boys had added much to his usefulness to the committee. Mr. Wagner is leaving New London to resume studies at for a higher degree.

E. Stanley Taylor was re-appointed the member of the boys' work committee on the physical education committee of the association.

Plans for the annual "Kick Off," the opening night for the boys' division were accepted as presented by Herbert W. Hicks, associate secretary in charge of boys' work. Invitations will this year be printed on cards of three different colors. The color of the card will decide to which of three events going on in the building simultaneously the boy will be admitted. It is planned that one form of entertainment will be carried on in the boys' rooms while another will be going on in the banquet rooms on the second floor and a third in the gymnasium. At the end of the first half-hour each group will transfer to the next place in order, where the entertainment will be repeated. Again at the end of a half-hour the change will be made and the entertainments repeated for the third time. Thus all will see the entire porgram while the separate groups will be smaller and consequently easier to handle. It was voted that no refreshments should be passed this year, but that the investment in this item of the past should go into entertainment. Present at the meeting were Ralph W. Matteson, William D. Harris, E. Stanley Taylor, Fred L. Newton, Clyde Williamson and Herbert W. Hick

DRIVE AGAINST AMUSEMENT STOCKS UNSETTLED THE MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—(AP)—A "bear" drive against the amusement stocks, several of which dropped 3 to 19 points, unsettled today's stock market after an early outburst of strength had carried two score issues up 2 to 15 points to new high records. Final quotations were decidedly irregular, heavy week-end profit-taking accounting for many of the declines. Trading was again in large volume with the ticker 54 minutes late in recording the final quotation. Total sales approximated 4,598,100 shares.

The market started upward at a brisk pace soon after the opening, disregarding the increase of $95,000,000 in federal reserve brokers' loans. Wall street apparently was more interested in the resumption of gold shipments from Great Britain, and the increased federal reserve bank holdings of government securities and bills bought in the open market. Call money renewed at 7 per cent as against 7 1-2 yesterday and held steady at that figure all day, although loans in the "outside market" were reported at 6 3-4 and 6 1-2. Owing to the heavy treasury overdraft at the Federal Reserve bank, easier call money rates are looked for early next week. There was no change in time money and commercial paper.

One of the most interesting developments of the day was the announcement by Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey on his return from Europe, that a "better understanding of the world oil problem is in prospect." This tended to confirm persistent Wall street reports that leaders of the industry throughout the world were giving serious attention to a curtailment program. Oil shares were heavily traded in today on buying influenced by the increase in Pennsylvania crude prices, Barnsdall A, Mid-continent, Texas corporation and White Eagle all touching new high records for the year.

The break in amusement shares generally was regarded as a natural correction of a top-heavy speculative position created in the wild trading in those issues in conection with merger rumors. Warner Bros. common dropped from an early high of 117 1-4 to 96 and the A from 119 7-8 to 97, each rallying only slightly from their lows and closing at net declines of 19 and 18 points, respectively. Stanley Co. of America dropped 6 points, Fox Film A 4 and Shubert Theatres 3 1-8, Keith Albee 2 3-4.

Coty was the spectacular individual feature in today's market, soaring 18 points to 222 and then easing to 219 3-4. Motor Products rallied 14 points and lost 4 and Adams Express retained all but 1 point of a 11 1-2 point gain. Brooklyn Union Gas, Case Threshing, Cerro de Pasco, Continental Baking A, Electric Auto Lite, Freeport Texas, Johns Manville, Ludlum Steel, Pressed Steel Car preferred, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and Warren Bros. All closed 4 to 8 points higher, several of them touching new peak prices.

U. S. Steel common touched another new high at 159 7-8 and Republic Steel at 91 7-8, but both fell back on realizing. General Motors advanced to 209 1-2, or within a fraction of the year's high, and then fell back to 205 1-2. American Encaustic Tiling was bid up to a new high at 78 3-8 on reports of a new and cheaper process in the manufacture of tile. Chrysler, Packard and Studebaker also reached new high ground.

Commodity prices showed few important changes. Wheat advanced fractionally and most of the active cotton futures closed a shade lower. Coffee and sugar futures also were easier.

A jump of nearly 25 points in Japanese yen to 45.73 cents and a slight advance in sterling cables to $4.85 1-16 dividend interest in the foreign exchange market.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich Grange No. 172, met Wednesday evening in Steiner hall, with Worthy Master Albert M. Lillibridge presiding. It was voted to hold a fair on the next meeting night and to invite the public. Every granger is to bring articles for the different booths. Grangers are urged by the committee to try and make this a success by coming and bringing fancy work, vegetables, fruit, flowers, candy, cakes, pies, etc.

An interesting program was put on by the visiting neighbors from Preston City, North Stonington and Canterbury as follows:

Solo, Mrs. Harold Muttart, and encore: solo, Miss Alice Abrahamson, and encore, from Preston City; pantomime, Miss Helen Kinney and Mrs. Lillie Frink; solo, Mrs. Appley from Canterbury Grange; The Dancing Dolls, North Stonington, under direction of Worthy Lecturer Albert B. Crofts. There was an attendance of 75 from Norwich Grange with 27 visiting grangers. Remarks from Worthy Master Harold Muttart, of Preston City Grange and Worthy Master Curtis D. Kinne were very much enjoyed. Elizabeth W. Murray, lecturer of Norwich Grange read her report on the New England conference of lecturers held at Burlington, Vt., and it was very interesting. Refreshments were served by Di , C. Mrs. Eliza Walker, chairman, consisting of banana salad, rolls, cake and lemonade.

Norwich Grange is invited to neighbor with Pachaug Sept. 20th (Thursday night) and the lecturer to furnish two numbers. On Oct. 5th the grange is to neighbor with Ledyard grange and the lecturer is to furnish the program.

Mr. Fred Armstrong was the speaker on the New London county fair and hoped all would boost the fair and try to make it a success.

In presenting her report on the New England conference of lecturers, which was held Aug. 20-22, at Burlington, Vt., Mrs. Elizabeth Murray spoke as follows:

Reaching Burlington at 5 p. m., Sunday, after a most delightful trip through Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont and seeing some of the devastation of the flood districts, my party of four registered and received instructions where to find their rooming place. At that time 159 had registered from Connecticut. Too tired to take in the organ recital at Ira Allen chapel, we lunched and retired early. At 9 o'clock Monday morning we attended the sessions in gymnasium hall. The Balanced Grange by Massachusetts. Great stress was laid on lack of hospitality by some granges but I do not think Norwich comes under this head. The state secretary of Maine thought each grange should have a committee of three appointed to greet all members and guests at every meeting. Lecturers to put on programs to instruct and entertain. On the point of attendance. Lack of attendance in New England. Lack of co-operation with the lecturer. We should strengthen the ritualistic work. The time to start is the part of getting the candidate and the right kind, the him or her read their part of the degree work and know what it means to be a full-fledged granger. An officer to talk on the rules of the grange so they will understand why they are joining. Not all for fun but something much deeper. Lack of beginning on time. Question, Is the business or the lecturer's program the most important? A good granger is as much interested in the business as the lecturer's hour. A good granger will come any way. Mrs. Hassell of Mayflower grange says the officers are not to blame. The members should respect the officers more.

Animation, co-operation, memorizing the work essential. Never elect an officer you do not feel competent to fill an office. No grange to have a nominating committee. We are not living up to our fraternity. We waste too much time. A little more praise and less criticism would help all lecturers. Speak good words of the grange even if down. All lecturers should have a gavel and use it.

At 10:30 a. m., Mrs. Rodman of Rhode Island opened the session of special nights and offered some very good suggestions; poultry night, juvenile night, the church Boy Scouts and town committee for community night, charter member night, birthday night, guest night, garden, volunteer, stunt, Indian pow wow, dairy night and many others. Weeds in three parts—Weeds of the garden, weeds of the mind and weeds of the fields. Brother Hopkins of Rhode Island spoke on Dramatics. Monday afternoon, Dr. Hill, dean of agriculture, extended greetings and welcomed the delegates in behalf of the state of Vermont. A summary of the morning sessions was given. Advertising is the life of trade, so publicity is advertising the grange. A majority vote for printed programs was taken. Fraternity. Brotherhood is co-operation. Bring back some of the old ideas. We are living too much for ourselves. In the evening we all met in Gymnasium hall for the reception which took the form of a stunt night, each state doing its part. Connecticut made a fine showing with 216 all wearing light blue caps. We filed up the stairs to the running track surrounding the gymnasium and there gave our special songs and cheers. After each state had done its bit the floor was cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed until midnight.

Tuesday was Connecticut session in the Old Chapel with our state and national lecturers presiding. Opening with the song Smile, Smile, Smile, put everyone in good humor. Music is the most important part in the lecturer's hour. A song leader should be chosen, one who understands music. There are five things a song leader must have: First, a good speaking voice; second, vitality and pep; third, sense of rythm; fourth, an unfailing sense of patience; fifth, sincere love of the world. Choose a song that all know, low songs instead of high. Group singing, rounds and four-part songs were enjoyed. It adds spice, popularity and creates a fraternal spirit to entertain neighbors. Sister Holton, Pomona state officer, gave two solos. The House by the Side of the Road, and Come to the Fair. Mildred Coffer, Pomona lecturer of Mountain county, No. 4, gave a talk on instrumental music. Music was likened to a good layer cake. The creamy, rich chocolate filling the music. State Master Ives gave a short talk but said he had no ear for music and how much he missed it in his work. The attendance at this session was 200. At 7:30 p. m., we all went to the new municipal building to hear addresses by Governor Weeks of Vermont, James C. Farmer, national lecturer, and Louis J. Taber, national master, who by the way was quite ill and against doctor's orders journeyed to Vermont to greet us.

Wednesday at 9 o'clock p. m.—Interesting the Young People. Program pointers and question box by Rhode Island. Mrs. Rodman had charge of this session and we all must have gleaned some wonderful ideas from this inspiring session. At 10:30 a. m., in Gymnasium hall, Mrs. Curtis Slate, lecturer of Connecticut, presided over the session under dramatics and I feel sure that all lecturers who attended must have some wonderful ideas for putting on plays in their own grange. Our degree work, improve it and make it dramatic. Our new members get their first impression from the degree work. Let us make it mean more by memorizing the work and giving expression hen recited. Floor work is essential for the grange tableaux. The one who arranges for these deserves much credit and comes under dramatic ability. Grange plays are not what they might be. It is not a simple thing of having a good time but of raising a dramatic standing of putting on something worth while, not giving the impression that grangers are hicks and rubes. It is a wrong interpretation of rural life. Asked how many there got their living from the farm, only 84 replied. Question, What can we do to get the men to joint the grange? In one grange of a membership of 245 only 45 are men. To answer:

A wrong step on conducting the business. Elect a master who is capable of conducting. Pledge to see that the business does not drag out and have a lot of men sitting on the side listening to a discussion of spending a small sum until the business meeting lags so they get weary of coming.

A lecturer should be allowed her time on the program. She should have a gavel to conduct her part of the meeting. Wednesday, 224 Connecticut grangers had registered.

1:30 p. m., Wednesday—General conference on the morning sessions. We all started for a trip sight-seeing after meeting at our destination, Mallett's Bay. In following the crowd, I was nearing Montreal, so turned back after a drive of about 30 miles and finally saw the sign, Mallett's Bay. My party had the pleasure of seeing this beauty spot of Vermont. We also took a trip to Fort Ethan Allen, one of the largest military posts in the country. Summer training is given the Vermont National Guard, the Reserve corps, Civilian Military camps. The fort is provided with an artillery range by the national government. The drill was wonderful. Wednesday evening a moonlight sail was planned, but alas, there was no moon. A wet night but everyone who went came back with a smile, voting it a wonderful sail. Thursday morning I started on my homeward course, crossing Lake Champlain to Port Kent, where we took in Ausable Chasm one of the grandeurs of the world. I quite agree with a Vermonter who said that you have not seen America until you have seen Ausable Chasm in the heart of the Adirondacks. We toured down New York state, staying one night at Schroon lake. A beautiful lake, nine miles long. On to Saratoga Springs and Albany, where we spent some time at the state house; down to Kingston and spent the night. Over the Storm King highway, Bear Mountain bridge, through Danbury, Waterbury, Meriden, Middletown and arriving home Saturday evening at 7:30, tired but all voting it a wonderful trip, covering 855 miles.

MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA

The camps of Modern Woodmen of America from Norwich, Montville and New London held their annual outing last Sunday at Oxoboxo Lake with a large attendance. State Deputy J. R. Hughes and Mrs. Hughes of Hartford were present, also a large delegation from Mystic and Westerly camps. John Lynch of Montville was master of ceremonies. John also cooked the chowder and the members pronounced it the best yet. Everybody did justice to the dinner and voted John Lynch a good fellow.

In the afternoon, Walter H. Fenner, chairman of the committee of athletic sports, called everybody across the road to the ballground for the big games. First came the running races. Free-for-all, 200 yards, won by Clifford Martin, Montville; Arthur Paradis, second. Sack race, 100 yards, Theodore Allen, Montville, first; Peter Fiskey, second. Men over 40 years, running race, 50 yards, first, Ralph Dufault, Montville. Running jump, Arthur Paradis, Montville, first. Standing jump, Arthur Paradis, first; J. Estey, second. Tug-of-war between Montville and New London, won by Montville; tug-of-war between Norwich and Montville, won by Norwich.

The ball game between Norwich Yankees and Montville Athletics, umpired by John Lynch, went to Montville after a hard struggle, score 7 to 9.

The prizes to the winners of the different games were distributed by the chairman of sports, Walter Fenner of Mystic, and a tired but happy crowd started for home, all proclaiming the outing a grand success.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS

Buckingham council, No. 14, held its regular meeting at Eagles' hall, Cliff street, on Wednesday evening, Councilor W. O. Gates presiding. It was voted to take one dollar out of the treasury each week as a prize for attendance at the meetings. A membership drive is now in process between the Norwich, New London, Noank and Stonington councils. The loser is to banquet the three winning councils. Any man of American birth and white between the ages of 16 and 60 is eligible to join and anyone who wishes to become a member may do so by seeing any member of the council ,and signing an application blank. Next Wednesday evening the council promises an interesting meeting and all brothers are expected to attend.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, met at the Buckingham Memorial Friday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Inez Hill presiding. The regular reports were read and approved. Several sick members were reported to be gaining. It was voted to hold a card party and food sale soon. At a recent meeting of the common council three members of the corps presented the mayor a flag for the council rooms. The corps closed with the salute to the flag.

FORESTERS OF AMERICA

With activities for the fall season of fraternal work about to begin, Chief Ranger Elroy J. Bolduc presided at the regular meeting of Court City of Norwich, No. 63, and the large attendance of the members who took active part in the business of the meeting speaks well for the success of the various undertakings that are under consideration.

A communication from the grand court relative to an increased membership was referred to the deputy lecturer and grand trustee and a committee to have charge of same.

The 40th anniversary committee reported that a vast amount of interest is being shown by the members relative to this important event and that the committee have ben informed that Grand Chief Ranger Frank J. Barrett of Hartford and Grand Sub Chief Ranger P. J. Cook of Bristol would visit Court City of Norwich on Sept. 29 when the first work of the anniversary committee will culminate with the awarding of two trips to the world's series and an oyster chowder, and it is expected a large percentage of the members will be on hand to meet the state officers.

SHEPHERDS OF BETHLEHEM

The Shepherds of Bethlehem held their regular meeting Monday evening at the Buckingham Memorial, with the president, Mrs. Ethel Hoelck, presiding. Mrs. Charlotte Denison was appointed vice commander by unanimous consent and Mrs. Denison and Mrs. Watters were appointed publicity committee. The entertainment committee, of which Mrs. Denison is chairman, has been appointed as follows: Mrs. Herbert Rich, Mrs. Mary Lavalle, Miss Charlotte Fowler, Mrs. Marion Fowler, Mrs. Eliza Walker, Mrs. Faith Ryan, Mrs. Susie Lillibridge, and Gus Hoelck, Mr. Duggan, Mr. Richette, Leonard Staubley, Frederick Mehrhoiz, and James E. Wood.

It was voted to hold a food sale in the Boston store basement and it was voted to accept an invitation for the day with a basket lunch to Camp Wanita at Gardner Lake, in the near future.

Last Tuesday Mrs. Ethel Hoelck made arrangements for a basket lunch picnic at Atlantic beach which was well attended by the Shepherds of Bethlehem members and proved an especially enjoyable day.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

Mercier assembly observed its usual custom of holding no meetings during the months of July and August, nevertheless it was not entirely possible to suspend activities. During July there was an officers' meeting at which the plans for the first half of the year were reviewed and the plans for the future meetings outlined.

At the first meeting held in September many maters of importance were discussed and the usual routine business disposed of. The September social will be held this coming Tuesday evening and Miss Lucy Murphy who is the honorary president, and also a state director has charge of the arrangements for the evening. Miss Murphy has planned an evening which will be greatly enjoyed, as a speaker who is well known to all the members has been secured for the evening and will talk on a subject which should be of interest to every member of the assembly. Every member is urged to make an effort to attend as the business session preceding the social meeting will require the attendance of every member. Plans are not entirely complete as yet for Tuesday evening but as usual refreshments will be served by the committee in charge.

AMERICAN LEGION

What it is hoped will be the greatest air demonstration and concentration in the history of the country will be one of the features of the American Legion national convention at San Antonio in October, according to Philip B. Stapp, general convention director.

Plans are being pushed forward rapidly by the Legion convention bureau in co-operation with the San Antonio chapter of the National Aeronautics association, whose local vice-president, E. A. Feille, is chairman of the convention aeronautics committee.

One thousand planes flying in a single formation over the city, seat of the army's new "West Point of the Air," is the committee's goal.

Cities all over Texas are being marked to guide the aviators who will fly to San Antonio. Emergency fields at San Antonio are being added and adequate servicing of planes will be provided at these and regular fields. Every available gas truck in the city is being requisitioned. Six hundred airplane mechanics, army and civilian, will be on hand. Blue prints of all fields at San Antonio will be mailed to every pilot.

ODD FELLOWS

The eighth annual field day of the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of eastern Connecticut will take place Saturday afternoon, Sept. 15, at Charter Oak park.

The athletic events will start the day's program and handsome prizes will be awarded the winners in all contests. The quoit contest will start at 2:30 p. m. The Rebekahs' competitive drills will be held at 6 o'clock and will be presented in three sections, with the Hartford Turnerbund gymnastic exhibitions intervening. Accommodations have been secured to seat everyone in the hall during the drills and exhibition and the committee has planned to handle an attendance of over 10,000.

Palace Theatre

Apples, serpents, fig leaves and Paradise are only symbolically present in this "Garden of Eden,"—for it is a modern clothes version of the oldest story in the world. It is at the Hotel Eden, outside Monte Carlo, that many humorous and romantic adventures befall Toni LeBrun, French shop-girl off on a lark with her friend, the Baroness Rosa de Garcer. The startling climax to those adventures is a wedding which ends in a riot.

Rudolph Bernauer and Rudolph Oesterreicher, two Austrians, wrote the stage play, "T'h's "Garden of Eden," which has been continuously on the boards in Germany for three years. In England Tallulah Bankhead played the stage Toni; in New York, Sylvia Field. Corinne Griffith and Walter Morosco (Corinne is Mrs. Morosco in private life) were in Germany last year and there they saw "The Garden of Eden,"—cabling Joseph M. Schenck promptly that they would like that play purchased, to be Miss Griffith's first United Artists vehicle. Hence it was that while the stage play was being acted in London, and even before it was shown in New York, Corinne was well into porduction on her film.

"Playing in 'Hot Heels,' " said Tryon, "was like living in the past."

"In 'Hot Heels' I play the role of a small-towner who buys one of these troupes and takes it to Havana, Cuba. Even I humbling admit that it is funny—and credit for that goes to Director William Craft and the scenario writer, Harry O. Hoyt."

"The President's Own," which will appear here in concert on Tuesday, Oct. 2, at the Palace theatre under the auspices of the Norwich Rotary club, is 130 years old, having been organized under an act of congress during the Adams administration. This time-seasoned musical organization has participated in our national triumphs, has contributed to the enjoyment of White House incumbents and has mourned at the bier of martyred presidents.

Numbers are but skeletons—harsh symbols, signifying only the chronological passing of time. It is through participation in life and its stirring events, and the achievement of distinction through struggle and merit that the soul grows. Reviewed in this light the United States Marine band is a fountain of inspiration. Through its gifts and their perpetuation it has increased public happiness and culture. It presents a musical program whose standard of execution and selection has been on an increasingly high standard. Every man, woman and child in the city should give themselves the pleasure and benefit of hearing this historic and national institution when it appears in our midst.

Broadway Theatre

"Four Sons" is the feature picture at the Broadway theatre today and tomorrow. This is a Fox picture, directed by John Ford, who made the successful "Mother Machree" and the "Iron Horse." The large cast includes Margaret Mann, the lovely old lady whose portrayal of the mother role in this picture has been acclaimed throughout the country as one of the most penetrating and human characterizations ever seen upon the screen. It is a characterization rich in sympathy and sentiment.

Around this character, "Grandma Bernle," revolves the story of the four sons, thre of whom march off to fight for the motherland—many of the scenes take place in Bavaria—while the fourth son, in America, sails to fight for the stars and stripes. The powerful conflict, the touching pathos, the swift succession of dramatic highlights—all are combined with telling effect.

The feature picture is supplemented by three very fine Vitaphone presentations which includes "The Lash," a great dramatic sketch with Hal Crane. Abe Lyman and his band score successfully playing popular music. The Howard Bros., famous vaudeville artists, produce a comedy sketch that will keep you laughing continuously. Also movietone news—the talking newsreel. A marvelous bill of talking pictures.

Breed Theatre

John Fox, Jr.'s romantic story of the Kentucky mountains during the Civil War, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," has been brought to the screen with all its charm and its thrilling drama by First National Pictures.

It comes to the Breed theatre tomorrow night with Richard Barthelmess starred and with a marvelous supporting cast. The screen version deals entirely with the lives of the Kentucky mountaineers, and the aristocrats of the Blue Grass regions.

As "Chad," the barefoot boy of the mountains, Barthelmess has one of the finest roles of his entire career—one comparable to his immortal "Tol'able David." The picture is an Alfred Santell production.

An outstanding performance, in addition to that of the star, is given by Molly O'day, the clever seventeen-year-old girl who plays opposite Barthelmess. It was this same Molly, who, in her first important screen part in "The Patent Leather Kid," became a screen sensation overnight.

Zenith Automatic Week

Today marks the climax of "Zenith Automatic Week", in Norwich, with Zenith automatic tuning the popular topic of discussion whenever radio is mentioned.

O'Neil Electric Co. have for the past week held daily public demonstrations of Zenith automatic tuning in their salesroom, introducing the new sensational radio feature incorporated exclusively on the new 1929 Zenith automatic radio receivers.

O'Neil Electric Co. declare that the enthusiasm manifested by the public in Zenith automatic tuning has eclipsed all previous radio developments and indications from the record amount of sales, it is predicted a banner year will be accorded Zenith who scooped the radio field with push button radio.

Zenith set the entire radio universe agape last spring with the startling announcment of the perfection of "automatic tuning", an undreamed of possibility in radio reception at that time. Since then, the radio public anxiously waited for the appearance of automatic tuning on Zenith receivers. Today Zenith ends that anxiety with the presentation of its new 1929 automatic models, featuring the sensation of the year—automatic tuning. Sole patent rights enable Zenith to offer this new achievement exclusively, further establishing more firmly, Zenith's recognized supremacy in high grade radio construction.

With "Zenith Automatic Week" in Norwich coming to a memorable close tonight, a record crowd of radio fans are anticipated to see demonstrated and to inspect the new Zenith automatic models.

An imposing array of these models will be on future display at O'Neil Electric Co., offering the radio buyer of the future, a choice selection of the utmost in present day radio reception, comprising matchless Zenith performance, unsurpassed tone quality, unchallenged distance reception and the most beautiful in cabinet designs.

TAFTVILLE

During Thursday evening's storm, a bolt of lightning entered the house of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pilling at Riverside grove, and did considerable damage before making its way out. The Pilling children were seated around a table in the living room when the bolt entered the house, presumbably by way of an electric wire. It then dashed about the room, knocking out practically every pane of glass in the windows of the first floor, and ripping off the curtains and draperies. Some of the children were cut by flying glass and were temporarily shocked. It is believed to have been the same bolt which struck a Mrs. Blanchard who was sitting on her porch at her residence at Riverside grove, completely paralyzing her. She was attended by Dr. E. A. Marcotte. The lightning also struck the electric wires outside the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benker of Occum road, treating the occupants of the house to a display of fireworks in all the primary colors.

MANY GIFTS TO MOHEGAN PARK INCREASE MENAGERIE EXHIBITS

During the summer now closing an unusually large number of swimmers, both male and female, have enjoyed the swimming privileges at Mohegan park lake. Paul McNamara has completed his second season as life guard at the swimming place and there have been no accidents during the season.

A large number of picnic parties have used the privileges of the park this season. The parties have come from not only Norwich but from many of the surrounding towns and the same groups come year after year.

The work of reconstructing the inclosure for small animals and birds has been completed by Supt. Krohn and his men. There are eleven pens made of heavy woven wire supported by iron posts set in concrete foundation. All of these pens are occupied by small animals or birds.

Recent gifts to the park have been as follows: Kirkner Casper Balley of Norwich, pair of rabbits; R. R. Brooks of Fishers Island, an alligator; J. A. Irving of Poquonnoc Bridge, a hawk-like bird; J. Hazelton of Norwich, a white Muscovy duck; C. V. Pendleton of Norwich, an owl; Mrs. DeGray of Baltic, two West India monkeys; Mrs. Powers of Norwich, a checker, giant rabbit; E. W. Moore of Norwich, a large horned owl which was caught by O. Hattin; Mrs. William A. Card of Norwich, eight cavies in variety; R. Pendleton of Norwich, a pair of rabbits; Clark's Pet Shop of Norwich, two small white owls; G. D. Green of Norwich, white, mottled black Polish rooster; Charles J. Rowland of Norwich, a broad-winged hawk and Miss Ruth A. Norton of Norwich, a red fox.

The deer herd has increased from year to year so that it has been necessary to reduce the number by exchanging some of them for other animals or birds. Of the six deer born this season one is a curiosity as it is partly white. This is very unusual and the newcomer attracts much attention.

HUNTINGTONS OF NORWICH NOTED IN REVOLUTION

The recent gift to the state library of an old Huntington family Bible, by Senator Huntington Phelps Meech, of West Hartford, recalls many interesting historical facts and stories connected with the nearly days of national and state affairs in which this family played an active and prominent part, writes Miss Mabel Cassine Holman of Old Saybrook in the Hartford Times.

The Bible was printed by M. L. S. W. A. Davis of New York in 1801. On the fly-leaf is written, Charles P. Huntington, Bible. A present from his renowned father, Andrew Huntington, Norwich, Connecticut, January 21, 1802. The family chronicle contains not only the usual records of marriages, births, christenings and deaths of the family, but an account is carefully kept of the dates when the children had the measles, whooping cough, chicken pox, varioloid and the mumps, and if on one side or both.

Pasted in the front and back of the Bible are articles and poems of interest, and in turning the pages one's thoughts go back to a solitary vessel coming to anchor at the mouth of the Connecticut river in 1633, two years before the fort was built at Saybrook, as a settlement there, only a barren waste, and of the desolate burial of Simon Huntington, who died on shipboard on his way with his family from Norwich, Eng., to Roxbury, Mass. In the records of the ancient Roxbury church, in the handwriting of John Elliot, the apostle to the Indians, pastor of the church, is an allusion to this event: "Margaret Huntington, widow, came in 1633, her husband died by the way of small pox. She brought children with her."

Margaret Baret Huntington, who was a daughter of the mayor of Norwich, Eng., was thus left alone in a strange country with three small children. In later years, two of these children, Simon and Christopher, joined the early settlers at Saybrook, perhaps drawn there from the fact of it being near the burial place of their father. In 1660 when 33 of the first prominent settlers removed to a tract of land near the head of the Thames river, founded what is now the city of Norwich, the Huntington boys were of the party. In the ancient burying-ground in Norwich town, a small head-stone with the following lines marks the grave of Christopher's son: "Here lyes interd ye remains of Deacon Christopher Huntington of Norwich, Nov. 1, 1660, and ye first born of males in ye town. Died April ye 24th, 1735, in ye 75th yr. of his age. Memento Mole."

Grant's Ancestors

Dr. Wheeler, the first president of Dartmouth college, was a grandson of the above Christopher Huntington, and his niece, Martha Huntington, was the ancestor of President U. S. Grant. In the years preceding the Revolutionary war, Norwich had become a thriving town, and the town square was daily a scene of great activity. Among the 40 or 50 merchant ships sailing from the port, were 28 belonging to Gen. Jabez Huntington, a lineal descendant of Simeon Huntington, who lived in the old mansion still owned by the family, built in 1719. Themention of his name recalls the scene when Governor Fitch in 1765 presented to his council the Stamp Act, and proceeded to administer the oath, as the law required for the exaction of the obnoxious measure, but Jabez Huntington "voted to do no such thing," and indignantly left the room with his cousin Hezekiah.

Ardent Patriots

From the first, General Huntington had been an ardent patriot, and early in the beginning of the Revolutionary period he called his children together and told them he and their mother had made up their minds to risk their fortune and comfort for the cause of liberty, and asked them to stand by their country. To this they all agreed and how well they kept their word history tells us. He was an active member of the council of safety, constantly with Washington and Lafayette, giving largely of his fortune to help the cause, becoming major-general of the militia, and in 1777 upon the death of General Wooster, he was promoted to the office of major-general over the whole militia of the state. In 1778, when the people of Norwich were preparing to send the army groceries and fuel, together with large quantities of clothing, and the good women of the town sat up all night to knit stockings and "day mittens," word was received ammunition was low. The general promptly had the leaden weights of which his windows were hung, cast into bullets.

Had Fine Chaise.

In spite of the fact Jabez Huntington was a stern warrior, he was rather fond of the so-called pomps and vanities of those days, being the first person to own a chaise in Norwich, although he was not presented at court for riding to meeting in it as was his neighbor, Sam Brown, but he did have it studded with brass nails that had both square and flat heads, and it had a top which could be thrown back, the first in town.

He sent his two daughters to school in Boston with 12 silk dresses apiece, and upon a reception planned for her scholars, the principal of the school wrote the general she would like his eldest daughter to have a special gown for the occasion, he at once sent abroad for the finest and most costly material to be btained.

Noon the Sabbath his large number of guests at dinner were always served with ::an enormous Indian meal pudding dressed with molasses.

The first paper printed in the town in 1773, called The Norwich Packet, and Connecticut. Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire Weekly Advertiser, the following marriage notice appeared: "John Chester, Esq., of Wethersfield, to the amiable Miss Elizabeth Huntington, dau'r of General Jabez Huntington." John Chester was later a colonel in the Revolutionary war.

Son Was Soldier.

General Huntington's son, Jedediah, who was graduated from Harvard in 1763, when he delivered the first English oration at that university, was no less ardent patriot than his father. He was made brigadier general in 1777, and served with honor all through the Revolutionary war, was on Charles Lee's court-martial and the court which examined Andre and assisted in drafting the constitution of the Society of Cincinati.

It was at his home, which is still standing on East Town street, Norwich, many notable people were entertained during these years.

Entertained Washington.

Here Washington was a guest, and it was here also that Lafayette, on a hot July day, when passing with great speed accompanied only by his aids and a small body guard, through Norwich on his way to Newport, drew rein, stopped for refreshment "at the home of his friend," where he had been entertained previously at the time the unfortunate Duke de Lauzuns regiment was quartered for a short time in Lebanon, the general gave a sumptuous banquet in his great dining room for the duke and his officers. The splendid appearance this company made when riding into Norwich upon their spirited horses with gay trappings, has never been forgotten, especially the Dilons' brothers who during the French revolution were both guillotined. Following the dinner all gathered under the old trees in the front yard and gave ringing cheers for liberty, calling on the crowd which had gathered on the street to obtain a view of the foreigners, "to live free or die for liberty." The mistress of this hospitable home was Faith Trumbull, a daughter of Governor Jonathan Trumbull, a sensitive, delicate woman. Upon her return from Boston, where she had been sent to complete her education, "with skill in embroidery and painting," the general had fallen in love with her.

ISSUES TIMELY WARNING AGAINST CHIMNEY FIRES

Chief Howard L. Stanton of the local fire department on Friday sounded a warning against chimney fires. With the arrival of cooler weather Chief Stanton requests the people of the city to inspect their heaters, smoke pipes and chimneys to see that they are clear of soot before the fires are started. In the case of chimneys where there are no cleaning bricks it is advised that a few bricks be removed so as not to prevent the proper use of cleaning tools.

WOMEN VOTERS URGE ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS

The Connecticut League of Women Voters will present to all parties offering a state ticket this fall the following planks:

Law enforcement: Obedience to laws is a fundamental requisite of orderly government, and only by enforcement of existing laws can the nation command the respect of its citizens. Obedience to the constitution and the written law of the land is the duty of every man and woman in the United States. Therefore we favor an administration which will use to the fullest extent the power conferred upon it for the effective enforcement of prohibition.

Jury service for women: Inasmuch as women now exercise all the privileges and duties of citizenship, with the exception of jury duty, and as they are now in the court room for every other capacity, we believe that women should be made eligible for jury service on the same terms as men with suitable exemptions.

Women in industry: We believe that the conditions under which women are employed are necessarily a concern of the state and must be safeguarded in order to protect the vitality of the race.

We urge the adoption of a shorter working day for women in industrial and mercantile establishments, and adequate provision for the enforcement of labor laws.

Prevertive methods in public welfare: We believe that in safeguarding the welfare of the state special attention should be given to constructive treatment of dependents, defectives and delinquents.

We therefore support the development of a comprehensive preventive program with increased appropriations for the state departments and institutions responsible for carrying out such a program of public welfare.

Taxation: We urge the creation of a tax commission to investigate the entire system of taxation in the state and especially to compare the relative weight of taxes upon differing forms of capital, and to report, with recommendations, to the legislature of 1931.

State Efficiency: We urge continued effort to determine what consolidation of the executive departments of the state will secure greater economy and efficiency.

Education: We favor such re-distribution of state aid as shall secure more equitable oportunities of education for all children in Connecticut. We also urge as part of a constructive programme of public welfare, state aid for special classes and increased support for the division of special education and standards.

Talks on Electric Service

WHY THE PROPOSED CHANGE IN RATES?

The proposed electric rate does not mean an increase in the revenue of the Lighting Department.

For every penny of increase in the bill of any customer, a corresponding decrease will be made in the bill of some other customer.

The natural question for you to ask is:

"Why does the Department want a new rate if does not mean more money?"

The answer is in the future development of the business. Low priced electricity is necessary in order to enable every customer to make use of this product for all of the new purposes now being developed. The new rate change is in order to encourage additional use.

The net earnings of the Department will not increase one cent unless more service is rendered to the community and more electricity is used by the customers.

OLD RATE
10c per Kilowatt hour.
NEW RATE
3c per Kilowatt hour, plus the initial charge.

POETRY

Silkweed

Lighter than dandelion down,
Or feathers from the white moth's wing,
Out of the gates of bramble-tow
The silkweed goes a-gypsying.

Too fair to fly in autumn's rout,
All winter in the sheath it lay;
But now, when spring is pushing out,
The zephyr calls, "Away! Away!"

Through mullein bramble, brake and fern,
Up from their cradle-spring they fly
Beyond the boundary wall to turn
And voyage through the friendly sky.

Softly, as if instinct with thought,
They float and drift, daisy and turn.
And one avoids and one is caught
Between an oak leaf and a fern.

And one holds by an airy line
The spider drew from tree to tree;
And if the web is light and fine,
'Tis not so light and fine as he!

And one goes questioning up the wall
As if to find a door; and then,
As if he did not care at all,
Goes over, and adown the glen.

And all in airiest fashion fare
Adventuring, as if, indeed,
It were not so grave a thing to bear
The burden of a seed!

—Philip Henry Savage.

Cape Cod Blues

When August comes, with its faint blue haze,
Far down the Cape I long to be,
A wide dome arching above the bays,
And white sails mirrored in azure sea,
A tide that ebbs with the westering sun
To carry me out where the blue fish run

I'd choose a cottage with blinds of blue,
And wide old boards for its kitchen floor,
And hand-wrought shingles a bit a-skew,
And larkspur growing about its door
A gate-leg table, and four-post beds,
Of maple, the browns that are almost reds.

I'd eat my fill of blueberry pies,
And dine off a chipped blue willow-ware plate,
While a blue bird sang all the sweet old lies,
From his perch on the neat little white-washed gate,
And a grandfather clock at the foot of the stair
Would tell the time to a Staffordshire pair.

Would stretch on a hooked rug, faded and dim,
Perhaps Priscilla the pattern wove
With heart afire 'neath her kerchief prim,
The wind in the pines, just a wordless tune,
Is drawing me back—in some blue moon.

—Kate B. Burton, in Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

GALE IS NOW LASHING THE EAST COAST OF FLORIDA; 1,000 DEAD IN PORTO RICO

Miami Was Temporarily Cut Off From Communication at 3.30 P. M. Yesterday by Winds Ranging From 50 to 70 Miles an Hour—The Storm is Sweeping Across the Peninsula of Florida—Damage to Property in Porto Rico is Estimated at $100,000,000—Half of the 2,000,000 Population Are Homeless—There is Intense Suffering in the Rural Districts and the Smaller Cities.

(By the Associated Press)

After leaving a trail of destruction in the West Indies and shrouding the Bahama Islands in ominous silence, a tropical hurricane last night blew into the east coast of Florida somewhere between Jupiter and Ft. Lauderdale.

Communications rapidly were broken and few details of the severity of the storm were available. Terrific winds hit the area nearest the storm's center. It was not known whether any one was injured and reports of property damage were meager.

West Palm Beach and the millionaire resort on Palm Beach, across Lake Worth were isolated. Weather bureau officials at Miami believed the worst storm struck in the vicinity of Palm Beach. They had reports that buildings had been unroofed there but were unable to verify.

By a strange coicidence the storm struck on the second anniversary of the disastrous hurricane that ravaged Miami. Miami last night was in the edge of the terrific blow, reported winds as high as seventy miles in gusts. Some damage had been done to frail buildings.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, democratic nominee for vice president, was in Miami for a speaking engagement on Monday. He abandoned his immediate political campaign to aid in relief work in the stricken area.

A Red Cross unit was being mobilized at Jacksonville for any emergency. Railway companies were ready to speed relief into the district.

Meanwhile the storm apparently was striking deeper into the lower peninsula and weather bureau observers warned the inhabitants of the west coast that unless the course of the disturbance changes, the storm probably will reach the Gulf coast near Tampa today.

STORM SWEEPING THROUGH FLA. NORTH OF MIAMI

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 16—(AP)—The tropical storm which visited Porto Rico last Thursday, drew in from the Bahamas today and tonight was lashing the east coast of Florida.

Described by the weather bureau as "still of great intensity" the storm apparently was taking a course inland between Jupiter, 20 miles north of West Palm Beach and Miami, an approximately 90 mile strip of the coast.

Few details as to the severity of the blow were available. Telephone and telegraph communication into the area was disrupted.

The tropical radio also was unable to raise any other point in the lengthy island tier of the Bahamas and grave fears were felt for the safety of the inhabitants of island known to have been in the path of the storm.

In Florida, telephone wires were reported down to all coastal points south of Fort Pierce to a distance below Miami, but the Western Union had a wire into Miami by a circuitous route and radio communication from that place was maintained by the tropical radio despite the fact two of its aerials were down.

A dispatch from Miami stated that weather bureau officials believed the storm center struck the coast between West Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale. They believed the worst storm was near Palm Beach where they had a report that roofs had been blown from several buildings. Verification of the report was impossible as there was no communication with either West Palm Beach or the island resort across Lake Worth.

An unconfirmed report also was received here that the storm had struck either at or near Jupiter about 80 miles north up the coast. There was no way of confirming or disproving the report as all telephone and telegraph wires up the east coast shore had been out of commission for hours.

The weather bureau reported a wind of 100 miles an hour velocity at Palm Beach and a barometer reading there of 28.15. Shortly after this information was received communication was lost. A wind of 75 miles was reported at Fort Lauderdale but little damage was reported. The barometer in that city was said to have registered slightly above that at Palm Beach. Forecaster Gray at the weather bureau said that the barometer reports indicated that the storm center had been nearer Palm Beach than Fort Lauderdale. He said it was impossible to give any definite prediction as to just what point or hour the storm probably had struck.

1,000 DEAD AND $100,000,000 DAMAGE IN PORTO RICO

SAN JUAN, Porto, Rico, Sept. 16—(AP)—A steadily mounting death list today stood at more than 200, with estimates that communications, when restored, will find 1,000 dead as the human toll of the hurricane which swept over the entire island on Thursday and continued on to the northwest.

Gov. Horace M. Towner estimated that half of the population of nearly 2,000,000 was homeless, and from witnesses who fought their way to the capital over almost obliterated roads it was learned that many faced famine.

While it was impossible to form an accurate estimate of property damage, it is feared that it will exceed $100,000,000. Manager Krug of the hydro-electric plant, which supplies San Juan and most of the north part of the island, said that the loss to his company alone would be at least $3,000,000.

The authorities have acted swiftly to check the profiteering rise in prices of necessities, which already have doubled for some commodities. Governor Towner has ordered out national guardsmen to augment the police force of the capital to protect the scattered property from possible looters.

While the property damage in San Juan was immense, the city suffered a relatively small number of casualties as compared with smaller settlements. Arecibo, on the north coast, was visited by flood as well as by hurricane. Attorney R. Acosta Valarde, who reached San Juan last night, said that ten bodies had been recovered there and that the search was not complete when he left.

Sixty persons were reported killed at Guayama, on the south side of the island, by a man who reached San Juan on foot after walking the entire distance.

He reported the hospital at Guayama as well as 100 private residences were unroofed, some being destroyed.

A resident of Cayey also reached the capital and reported that 30 persons were killed in his town.

An American salesman, who required 36 hours to cover the 55 miles from Arecibo, said that hundreds of homes at that point had been carried away.

San Juan today had limited power and water for the first time since Thursday. An emergency water line six miles long was completed last night. The newspapers will be given first rights to the limited electric power. The city is still largely without ice and milk, prices of which have increased. The plant at Comerio, which normally provides the electric current, was demolished, but a local steam plant was placed in operation to give a limited supply of power.

Governor Towner has indicated that he may urge President Coolidge to issue a proclamation outlining the urgent needs of the island. With half of the homes, even those of thatch, destroyed or damaged beyond repair, and with most of the food crops destroyed, he believes that the needs will be great and will continue for an indefinite period.

Probably the most seriously situated are the "jivaros," the poor country folk, who have absolutely no reserve resources. Their numbers are estimated at nearly 1,000,000.

Tales of their suffering already have reached the capital. Joaquin Villanueva, a university instructor, who walked most of the 25 miles from Vega Baja with his family yesterday, said that the country people were coming into town by hundreds, begging for food, which the hard-pressed merchants gave as they were able.

Paul Maloney, who motored back from Naguabo on the east coast, said that 20 homeless and hungry persons at Naguabo Playa had literally mobbed a man who had a bag of rice, a bag of beans and side of pork.

With essential services partly restored in the city and with hundreds of men clearing the debris-encumbered roads, both the government and the local Red Cross were hastening relief measures. No complete picture of the task they faced was possible since there was no centralized point for information and up to today relief efforts were unco-ordinated.

Asserting that the island had suffered from the worst hurricane ever recorded in the West Indies and that facts "are worse than have been reported" Governor Towner today urged the secretary of war to send immediate funds in whatever amount available and more when possible.

He also urged presidential approval for a general appeal for aid through the American Red Cross and asked that a Red Cross rehabilitation unit be sent to Porto Rico.

He added that estimates on the total loss of life were as yet impossible but that it was undoubtedly greater than had been indicated at first.

NO HEAVY DAMAGE BY THE WIND IN MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 16—(AP)—The Tropical radio late today announced that the wireless station at Jupiter said the tropical storm struck inland at 4 p. m. The Jupiter station did not give any report except to say it was experiencing hurricane winds.

The weather bureau here said that Miami's lowest barometer reading was 28.98 at 4 p. m., when it began rising slowly and at 5 p. m. was 29 even. The highest official wind velocity was 61 miles from the northwest at 4:05 p. m., afterwards decreasing to 36 miles as it swung into the west and subsequently into the southwest.

The Florida Light & Power Co. station west of Fort Lauderdale reported the highest velocity in this section, which it estimated at 100 miles an hour around 4 p. m.

Miami damage was confined to blown down signs, a few broken plate glass windows and some wrecking of frail buildings.

Many refugees packed into the Federal building.

Water and shrubbery were the two largest items of storm damage here.

Red Cross opened headquarters this afternoon in City hall but requests for aid were not numerous.

At the Miami Jockey club some frame buildings were reported destroyed. Shipping appeared safe in the harbor here and the Tropical radio says no distress calls have been received.

HALF THE POPULATION OF PORTO RICO HOMELESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Half the population of Porto Rico is homeless and the extent of the damage resulting from last week's hurricane was increased in reports received today by the federal government. Governor Towner of the island cabled the information to the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, pleading for food and clothing for the sufferers.

Food and clothing in the island, the cablegram said, will be exhausted and the governor asked immediate shipments.

He asked that the Red Cross be informed great help was needed and said that Camp Henry was reported totally destroyed while the army post in San Juan was damaged but had

Typhoon Raged Along The Coast Of China

Scores of Chinese Have Been Drowned and Many Houses Destroyed.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 16—(AP)—The typhoon that has been raging for two days along the China coast has caused enormous damage here. Communications have been completely disrupted, many scores of Chinese drowned and many houses destroyed.

The typhoon was followed by torrential rains in consequence of which Shanghai is experiencing its worst flood since 1906. The United States marine camp is flooded with knee-deep water. All trams ceased running this afternoon.

Seven and one-half inches of rain has fallen in the past 24 hours.

SIX NATIONS TO STUDY THE REPARATIONS PROBLEM

GENEVA, Sept. 16—(AP)—Europe decided today that the time had arrived for complete and definite settlement of the reparations problem. To that end the statesmen of the "big six"—Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and Belgium, decided to constitute a commission of experts to study the matter.

No agreement was reached concerning the German request for total evacuation of the Rhineland but an accord in principle was achieved whereby both this subject and the question of replacing the allied troops by a special commission of control will be handled by special official negotiations.

Germany accepted the allied idea of instituting what is called a commission of "verification and conciliation." The big six who met today were split, however, on the question of how long this control commission should function.

According to German circles, France formally declined today the German request for total evacuation, saying that it was impossible for the moment at least. Chancellor Herman Mueller immediately voiced his "deep disappointment" who also claim that Lord Cushdon said that England would share the German disappointment.

It was further asserted in German circles, that Lord Cushendon had announced that Great Britain would reserve her liberty of action in connection with the presence of British troops in the Rhineland. British circles admitted that Cushendon had labored strenuously to advance evacuation but denied that he had entered any reservations.

There was a general feeling in Geneva tonight that a big step forward had been made.

STORY OF THE BUTCHERY OF THREE BOYS IS TRUE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16—(AP)—Police Detective J. J. Jones today announced that the officers had obtained "information that convinces us that the story of the butchery of three boys and a Mexican youth on a Riverside, Calif., farm as related by 15 year old Sanford Clark, is true."

"The matter is so serious, however," the detective continued, "and of such vital importance to the solution of the murders that we will not make it public until it is presented to the Riverside grand jury.

In a statement given to police investigators late this afternoon, George Cyrus Northcott, father of the young man accused by Clark, is said by detectives to have given information which may aid in clearing up the mystery surrounding the case.

A WOMAN AND THREE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 16—(AP)—The bodies of a woman and three children, burned to death when fire swept their home in Brittania, an Ottawa suburb, last night, were recovered from the ruins of the dwelling today.

The victims were Miss Jean Agnes Lenihan, 22, of Syracuse, N. Y., Mary Walter 9, Austin Walters, 7 and Gordon Walters, 4, children of Bernard Walters, owner of the house.

Miss Lenihan, who was visiting the Walters family, was alone with the children when the fire started.

The position in which the bodies were found indicated that the victims had suffocated in their sleep. When the parents reached the burning home, police and firemen restrained them from dashing into the blaze. Both collapsed when the bodies were recovered.

STORRS FACULTY TO ENTERTAIN FRESHMEN

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 16—(AP)—An innovation will be tried out by members of the teaching faculty of Connecticut Agricultural college, when they entertain students of the freshman class next Sunday at their homes. The first Sunday of the college year for the incoming class in the past has always been one of the unpleasant memories and the purpose of the teachers is to be make their surroundings more pleasant.

The freshmen will arrive at Storrs on Thursday, two days before the upper classes convene. The plan inaugurated two years ago is intended to allow the freshmen time to meet their instructors and become acquainted.

MOUNTAINOUS SEA OFF SOUTHERN FLA. COAST

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—The navy department at 8:15 p. m. today received a communication from the steamship President Adams off the southern Florida coast, reporting a mountainous sea and a barometer of 28. The wind was blowing at more than 90 miles an hour, the radiogram said.

A radiogram from Miami to the navy department received about the same time said that the wind had reached 70 miles an hour in Palm Beach and was increasing rapidly. The barometer was 28.88. At Fort Pierce, Florida, the wind had reached 50 miles an hour and was gaining in force.

Police Trap Failed To Entice Kidnapers

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—Four men were reported held by police today after a note, written in a boyish scrawl, spurred police to set a trap in Chicago's Loop for the kidnapers of Billy Ranieri, 10-year-old son of A. Frank Ranieri. The child has been held for $60,000 ransom for ten days.

The note received by the father read: "Please, Pa, pay the money, or you will never see me again."

With it, was another demand for money and instructions to Ranieri to place $15,000 in a rubbish box at a street intersection in the Loop. Ranieri, who had been working independently of police in an attempt to find his son, showed it to authorities.

Detectives were stationed in places of concealment in doorways and the lower floors of buildings in the vicinity where Ranieri had been instructed to place the money. Under order from police, he placed a dummy package in the rubbish box early today. The kidnapers, however, failed to appear.

Both Ranieri and police refused to discuss the reported arrests, but A. Scuill, cousin of the kidnaped lad, insisted that four men were in custody.

The father's offer of a $2,000 reward for the boy, dead or alive, has had no results.

Salvatore Mastrojanni, godfather of Billy, and Renaldo Schiedo, former employe of Ranieri, are still held under bonds of $25,000 on charges of kidnaping.

Mrs. Ranieri, too ill from the strain of worry and anxiety to go to church, remained at home. Crowds waited around the house for news of the lad's fate.

ROBINSON ABANDONS HIS CAMPAIGN IN FLORIDA

MIAMI, Florida, Sept. 16—(AP)—(Via telephone to Navy Yard, Charleston, S. C., and naval radio to Washington)—Senator Joe Robinson, the democratic vice presidential candidate, this afternoon abandoned his immediate political campaign in Florida to aid in relief work in the hurricane-stricken region.

Senator and Mrs. Robinson tonight said they would accompany the first relief train if their services were needed, to be sent into the hurricane area to assist the physicians and Red Cross nurses who have mobilized for relief work.

When advised of the hurricane conditions north of here between this city and Jupiter, the nominee immediately offered the use of his private car and the Pullman used by newspapermen during his campaign trips to the Florida East Coast railroad which today assembled a relief train to carry the doctors and nurses into the section.

The train early tonight was standing in the station here ready to leave.

Bonelli is expected to arrive here in the morning to take his place in the plane as navigator and radio operator.

"I feel very confident that we shall be able to navigate the Atlantic by the southern route and reach Rome," Sabelli said tonight.

The take-off will be between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning, he said. Failing that, the plane will hop at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the next low tide.

WILL BE ACTIVE WEEK FOR PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

Hoover Tonight Will Launch at Newark, N. J., His First Offensive Drive in the East—His Speech Will Begin at 8.30 P. M., E. S. T.—Gov. Smith Has Started on His 6,000 Mile Tour—The Governor's First Speech Will Be Made Tuesday Night at Omaha, Nebraska.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—(AP)—Resting in the Sabbath quiet of his home, Herbert Hoover fortified himself today for the arduous seven weeks of campaigning between him and the end of his campaign for the presidency.

With the exception of a few personal friends, he had no callers, and he stirred from the house only to worship at a Quaker meeting house on Thirteenth street with his wife and his son, Allan. A few small boys waited outside the church to catch a glimpse of the presidential candidate as he left, but with that exception he passed through the streets virtually unnoticed.

Tomorrow will see the republican nominee again in battle harness. He will move upon New Jersey, where at Newark he will launch his first offensive in the east in his drive for ballots. As the candidate invades the territory adjacent to the home of his democratic opponent, Gov. Alfred E. Smith will be speeding westward to carry the fight into the normally republican states of the middle west.

Probably a half million persons will see Hoover before he turns homeward while other millions will hear him over the big radio hook-up that has been arranged to broadcast his speech. Leaving Washington at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, the candidate's train will make a non-stop trip to Newark, arriving there at 2 o'clock eastern daylight saving time. He will be met by a procession of automobiles which will carry him through the Oranges and Montclair to the home of the inventor, Thomas A. Edison, at Menlo Park.

After a brief call upon Mr. and Mrs. Edison, Hoover's party will return to Newark for a reception before going to the First Regiment armory where the program incidental to the delivery of his speec hwill begin at 8:30 p. m., eastern daylight saving time.

The candidate and Mrs. Hoover will spend the night at the Edison home, but will begin their work early on Tuesday when they will visit the Newark municipal airport, going from there to Jersey City, Hoboken and Weehawken.

After a luncheon in Newark at which the nominee will meet the county chairmen and republican leaders of the state, Hoover will be taken by automobile through Princeton and Elizabeth to Trenton where he will board his strain for Washington at 5 o'clock, daylight saving time. He will be accompanied on the trip by a score or more of newspaper correspondents and photographers in addition to Mrs. Hoover, his son, Allan, his secretary, George Akerson, and several other members of his personal staff.

NOMINEE SMITH HAS STARTED ON 6,000-MILE TRIP

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 16—(AP)—Six thousand miles of travel, much of it through territory new to him, lay before Governor Smith tonight as he packed his bags preparatory to departure at midnight on his first campaign tour.

On the schedule of the democratic presidential nominee during the next two weeks were six speeches in as many states—at Omaha, Oklahoma City, Denver, Telena, Mont., St. Paul and Milwaukee—before his return to New York to attend and address the democratic state convention in Rochester, Oct. 1.

The governor's first speech—in the heart of the corn belt at Omaha Tuesday night—will be devoted largely to farm relief, and in it he is expected to expand his views on that subject, which has assumed the proportions of a major issue in the presidential campaign. He is keeping silent as to what he will say in his other addresses, intending to speak extemporaneously and to make last-minute decisions as to various phases of the campaign he will discuss.

Venturing west of the Mississippi for the first time since he went to the democratic national convention in San Antonio eight years ago, the party's standard bearer will travel on an 11-car special train, accompanied by his wife, his daughter, Mrs. John A. Warner, a small group of friends and political advisers, 40 newspapermen, nearly a dozen photographers, and a number of stenographers, typists and other assistants.

The train was made up in New York city, leaving there early tonight with a stop of a little more than an hour scheduled here for the governor and most of the members of his party to entrain. Albany admirers had planned a noisy, spectacular send-off, with red fire and other campaign embellishments, and many of its citizens had arranged to escort the governor, along with members of his family, to the station.

At Omaha, Governor Smith will inaugurate his speaking campaign exactly seven weeks before election day. After his return from his first swing, which will carry him into states his managers regard as debatable and through territory where La Follette in 1924 showed his greatest strength, he will set out without much delay on another series of speeches that will carry him up to the eve of election. He has not disclosed the cities he will visit during the last month of the campaign.

The train placed at the nominee's disposal for the journey through the west and northwest has been elaborately fitted out not only for his comfort but for that of all members of his party. The two rear cars—an observation coach and the "St. Nicholas," private car of William F. Kenny of New York—will be used by the governor and his immediate party.

Ahead are three compartment cars for newspapermen, a club car that will be used for press conferences, a work car for the reporters, a diner, a standard sleeper, a work car for the stenographers and memograph operators, and a baggage car.

The various cars have been fitted for telephone connections at terminals, and three radio receiving sets had been installed.

Those in Governor Smith's immediate party, in addition to Mrs. Smith, his daughter, Emily, and Mr. Kenny, who is a close friend of years standing, were Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell, commander of the New York National Guard, who will function as a military aide to the governor; Charles W. Berry, comptroller of New York city, who is a physician; Justice Joseph M. Proskauer of the appellate division of the New York supreme court; Judge Bernard Shientag of the city court in New York; Mrs. Daniel O'Day, vice-chairman of the New York state democratic committee; former Senator and Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, and J. Bruce Kremer, democratic national committeeman from Montana.

EVENTFUL WEEK-END FOR GOVERNOR'S SECRETARY

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Edward L. Kelly, executive secretary to Gov. John H. Trumbull, returned to his home here Saturday night after an eventful 24 hours during which period he was in Maine, in Washington and in Connecticut. While in Washington, he and other leaders in the republican service league had luncheon with Herbert Hoover, met President Coolidge and conferred with Republican National Chairman Hubert Work. Upon his arrival in Bridgeport, he completed nearly 1500 miles of travel in about 28 hours.

At 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, Captain and Mrs. Kelly were with Gov. Trumbull at this family in the Trumbull camp on Moosehead Lake, Me. At 4:15, the governor and his party, including Captain and Mrs. Kelly, boarded the Bar Harbor Express at Kineo, Me. At 5 o'clock Saturday morning, by special orders from the operating manager of the New Haven railroad, the express made an unscheduled stop at New London.

Meanwhile arrangements had been made with Major William F. Ladd of the 118th aero squadron, Connecticut National Guard, who was at the Groton airport, waiting for Captain Kelly. They hopped off at 7:10 for Washington, making the trip in just two hours and 20 minutes. Immediately, Captain Kelly, who is a past commander of the American Legion, department of Connecticut and, state chairman of the republican service league, went into session with other leaders of the organization, including Col. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, Col. John D. Markey, of Maryland, Col. William J. Keville of Massachusetts, Orville E. Cain, of New Hampshire, Col. Franklin O'Oller, of New Jersey, Major Albert B. Callan, of New York, Allen Adams, of North Carolina, William J. Whitehouse, of Rhode Island and E. C. Greer of Tennessee.

Hanford MacNider, of Iowa, formerly assitant secerary of war and Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison and Assistant Secretary Edward Robbins also were present.

The party had luncheon with Mr. Hoover at the residence of Col. William J. Donovan, and afterwards they were presented to the president at the white house, and then went into conference with National Chairman Work.

Major Ladd and his passenger left Washington at 3:55 Saturday afternoon and landed in Hartford at 6:25, the return trip to Hartford requiring exactly the same length of time as the trip from New London to Washington. Mr. Kelly boarded a train at the capital and returned home. The Trumbull party had left the Bar Harbor express at its regular stop, New Haven.

MAN KILLED WHEN AUTOS COLLIDED IN THOMPSONVILLE

THOMPSONVILLE, Sept. 16—(AP)—One man was killed, two were taken to hospitals and three more passengers of two automobiles received lesser injuries in a collision a half mile from here early today. Walter Larson, 18, a high school senior of West Hartford, died from a crushed skull.

Lawrence Yanslow, West Hartford, driver of one of the machines, is in Wesson Memorial hospital in Springfield with a compound fractured arm and elbow. With him at the time were six companions, including two women.

Those treated for cuts and bruises were Miss Ingeborg Benson and her sister, Ellen Benson, of West Hartford, and Charles Morecker, West Springfield.

The collision occurred when Mockus attempted to pass a truck and cut into the path of the approaching West Hartford machine. The front wheels locked causing the Connecticut car to turn over.

NEW YORK POLICEMAN WAS SLAIN BY HIS WIFE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—Dorothy Leonard, 25, widow of Policeman Michael Leonard who was found dead in his Flushing home yesterday, confessed today, police said, to having slain her husband with a carving knife.

Police said Mrs. Leonard told them she struck with the knife, after Leonard had twice knocked her down during a quarrel which began when he charged her with drinking.

Mrs. Leonard was held without bail charged with homicide, but asked that she be permitted to attend her husband's funeral on Tuesday and that her four year old son be permitted to stay in jail with her. Both requests will be referred to the court.

POLICE CAPTURE RUM CAR AFTER CHASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 16—The first rum-running car to be captured here in many weeks netted the police a catch of 16 gallons and one pint of alcohol and three defendants on charges of violation of the liquor laws about 4.20 o'clock this morning when Patrolmen Albert Montie and Leo Piche halted a Ford roadster and discovered the liquor in the rear compartment. The Ford came up through the city and was spotted by Officer Montie, who became suspicious of the appearance of the three occupants and of the speed of the machine. Chase was given by Officers Montie and Piche in a commandeered car and the roadster halted near the Willimantic cemetery on upper Main street. Upon the approach of the officers one of the men threw out a bottle in which had been liquor. The bottle struck the side windshield and broke it. The officers found the 16 gallons in cans in the rear and a pint bottle. The driver, John Molly, 28, gave his address as 50 Perry street, Central Falls, R. I. The address on his driver's license, however, was 74 John street, Hartford. He claimed ownership of the liquor and was arrested on charges of possession and transportation of liquor. John McNamara, 20, of 81 Buckingham street, Hartford, said that he owned the machine, having purchased it some two weeks ago. The registration markers on the machine had been taken from a garage in Hartford, according to McNamara. He was put under charges of transportation of liquor and failure to have a registration. The third man, George H. Burlingame, 43, also of 81 Buckingham street, Hartford, was charged with transportation of liquor. Bonds of $500 were named but had not been furnished up to Sunday afternoon although friends of McNamara were seeking his temporary release. The trio were booked to appear in police court Monday.

NEW TRADE SCHOOL TO OPEN ON MONDAY

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 16—Three departments of the new state trade school recently established here will open Monday for the term in the former Turner mill at the corner of Valley and Bank streets. About 40 pupils will be entered Monday for courses in masonry, carpentry and painting. Their studies will include participation in completing the alterations at the school. The formal opening for the term will be on October 1 when studies in plumbing, electrical work and drafting will commence in addition to the three previously named. On that date it is expected that 60 more pupils will register making the total registration about 100. Tentative registrations on hand show that the pupils will represent about 16 towns adjacent to the town of Windham and this fact gives indication of the tremendous field from which the local trade school will draw its student body.

Alterations on the three and one-half story brick building have been underway for the past two months and have brought about several drastic changes including the relocation of entrances and staircases to comply with fireproof and safety exit requirements. The floors have been partitioned off into school rooms for manual work and mental studies. Student carpenters from the Putnam state trade school directed these partitions and completed the general woodwork during the past week. The basement will be used for the courses in masonry and students will assist this week in laying a concrete floor and sidewalks under an instructor this week. The first floor will be used entirely for the carpentry department. On the west side of the second floor will be the plumbing and heating department and on the east side, painting, paper hanging and decorating. The electrical department will be on the west side of the third floor while drafting will be taught on the east side of this floor. The northeast corner of the third floor is designated as a class room for the students.

Preparations for the opening of the school are under supervision of F. J. Trinder, of Hartford, vocational director of the trade schools of the state. It has been indicated that a permanent director of the local school has not as yet been appointed. Announcement was made today that Miss Ruth M. Ruse of Prospect street this city, former secretary to W. B. Knight, agent of the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing company, has accepted the position of secretary at the new trade school. Miss Ruse will enter upon her new duties Monday.

The movement for the new trade school was started by School Superintendent Egbert A. Case about five years ago, local conditions showing a demand for such a school which represents phases of instruction not to be found in the present school system. Figures were given to show that of an average of 100 graduates from the high school annually, only 15 per cent. enter college while 85 enter upon business careers, generally not of an industrial nature. About one half of the graduates are from smaller towns surrounding Windham. It was also pointed out that the elementary schools turn out about 300 boys and girls annually, who enter industry without specific training.

Under the arrangement the town of Windham purchased the building for the school at a cost of $38,000. The town furnished besides the building, coal, light, water power and janitor and $3,000 has been appropriated to meet this expense for one term. The town also appropriated $10,000 for the remodification of the building for school purposes. The state provides the more expensive services of teachers and supervision and an appropriation of $50,000 was secured from the last legislature for this purpose, the appropriation being sponsored by Representatives A. Linn Weatherhead and Charles B. Pomeroy of Windham.

The school will serve an aggregate population of 18,000 people in the farming areas and smaller communities about Willimantic. It is expected that within three or four years the annual registration will be over 500 pupils.

At the police court session Saturday morning four cases were disposed of, an appeal to superior court being taken from one of the convictions. This was in the case of Miss Ilene M. Nickerson of Boston, Mass., charged with driving an automobile under an improper license. The accused pleaded nolo contendre and when Judge Foss imposed a fine of $25 and costs, totaling $41.15, the young woman took an appeal. Prosecutor Gaucher informed the court that Miss Nickerson had been unduly troublesome to the police since her arrest earlier in the week. A bond of $500 was furnished for her release by Peter Yonclas of this city.

Attorney W. A. King appeared on behalf of Albert Roy, a local young man who had been committed to the reform school at Meriden about two years ago. With the consent of the reform school authorities and agreement of the court, the case was reopened and the accused placed on probation for three months.

Mrs. Elizabeth Adamo of 1242 Main street was charged with assault upon the three year old daughter of Mrs. Florence Trudeau, a neighbor. She pleaded not guilty. The woman was fined five dollars and costs and placed on probation for one month. The court ordered the costs paid, stating that the fine would be remitted provided that the woman did not violate the probation period. The fourth case was one of intoxication in which the accused was fined.

Mrs. Annie A. Ladd, 77, widow of Allison B. Ladd, died at her home, 125 Valley street, Friday night after a long illness. She was born in Columbia, October 31, 1850, a daughter of Anson and Lydia Markham Hyde. She had resided here for 25 years. Surviving her are one son, William E. Ladd of Albany, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. Estella Brooks, who made her home with the deceased. Mrs. Ladd was a member of the First Congregational church.

A quartet of South Manchester and New York young men were arrested late Saturday night on charges of intoxication and breach of the peace following a carousal in front of the home of Dr. E. E. Gorton of 17 Pearl street, which wound up with insults to the dentist when he asked them to leave the vicinity. They gave their names as: Joseph Loney 27, Charter Oak place; Earl Hatch, 22, 37 Grove street both of South Manchester and Carl Anderson, 24, of 147 West Center street and James MacDonald, alias Jones, of 304 West 114th street, New York city. They were rounded up by Officer Montie.

A total of 322 new voters, 160 of them women and 162 men had been admitted on the town list by the board of selectmen and town clerk at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon during a session held for that purpose. There are 925 names mostly of women, on the list to be made. Another session will be held by the board and town clerk Saturday, September 22.

Horace J. Fenton, recently of Annapolis, Md., and formerly of this city delivered the sermon on the occasion of Laymen's day at the Mansfield Center Congregational church today. All parts of the order of service were given by the men.

Cars driven by Eugene Lewis of this city and Stephen Metack of Warrenville were in collision at 7.15 o'clock Saturday evening as both were cutting through the triangle at the fork of the Hartford and Stafford Springs highways off West Main street. Lewis turning to come east and Metack turning to go west. The damage was slight and no action was taken by Sergeant Grant Bombria who investigated.

Nathan Jacobson, 31, of South Coventry, a graduate of Windham High school where he starred in football is among the students of the Connecticut Agricultural college listed for honors of the second group in scholastic standing during the past year.

John R. O'Mara, 50, giving his address as 114 East 39th street, New York city, broke loose into a wild west show all his own on the streets here Saturday night and landed in the police lock-up where he was booked on charges of drunkenness and breach of the peace. Under the spell of liquor, O'Mara went about town discharging blank cartridges from small burglar alarm device which he held in his hand. Several complaints were entered against the man and he was located about midnight by Officer Piche.

OVER 2500 IN ATTENDANCE AT WOODSTOCK REPUBLICAN RALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 16—Windham county's largest political event of the 1928 presidential campaign was staged Saturday afternoon at Woodstock common, Woodstock Hill, by the Windham County Hoover and Curtis Republican club before an audience of 2,500 from all sections of the state. The meeting was a gathering of Windham county republicans, but it marked the resumption of the famous meetings of Woodstock common of many years ago.

At two o'clock a musical programme was given by the Governor's Foot Guard band of Hartford, Fairman's Concert band of Providence, and the Willimantic B. P. O. E. band of the Thread City.

Governor and Staff Arrives

Promptly at 3 o'clock the car of His Excellency, John H. Trumbull and staff followed by the officials and speakers of the day entered the large natural auditorium at the east end of the field. The parade of automobiles was through the center of the field, and around to the speakers' stand, where the president of the club, Mayor Charles A. Gates of Willimantic entered first followed by Governor Trumbull, Senator Bingham, Mrs. Charles Knight of Providence, daughter of Vice Presidential Nominee Charles Curtis and others who were to have seats in the speakers' stand.

The speakers' stand was situated upon a knoll at the west side of the field in the same place as when General U. S. Grant addressed a similar gathering on July 4th, 1870. It was beautifully decorated with bunting and wild flowers typical of old Woodstock. In the rear of the stand was a large American flag, which extended the length of the stand. The speakers delivered their addresses from a pulpit upon which was a microphone, where the voices were amplified. In the front of the large stand was a shield bearing the national colors. This shield adorned the stand from which President Grant had spoken more than a half century ago.

Pres. Gates Presides

President Gates was the first to speak. He explained the purpose of the gathering, and introduced Rev. Thomas B. Powell, pastor of the Congregational church of Woodstock Hill, who offered the prayer.

Again Mayor Gates spoke and praised Clarence W. Bowen of Woodstock, secretary of the club, whose efforts brought about the mass meeting and rally of the members and leaders of the G. O. P. of the county. After a brief characterization of Mr. Bowen, Mr. Gates said, "I take great pleasure in presenting John H. Trumbull, the present and next governor of Connecticut." As Governor Trumbull came forth, cheers and shouts went up, the governor being forced to wait a few moments before he could make himself heard above the noise and cheers of the gathering.

Governor Trumbull expressed himself as being overjoyed to have the opportunity of returning to Woodstock and Windham county where he first saw the light of day. He touched upon the popularity of Governor Alfred E. Smith in Windham county, and stressed the fact that Connecticut will depend upon Windham county, in order to place itself in the Hoover column on election day. "So goes Maine, so goes the nation, and by last week's showing I hold little fear of the democratic threats in this old republican stronghold," said the governor.

Telegram From Sen. Curtis

The governor's speech was brief and was confined to party matters. Pres. Gates next introduced, Hon. Clarence W. Bowen, secretary of the club. Mr. Bowen read a telegram from the G. O. P., presidential nominee, for whom the club is named, Herbert Hoover. In his message, Mr. Hoover signified his regrets that he could not be present at Woodstock common. Like Mr. Hoover, his running mate Senator Charles Curtis wired that he wished the meeting to be most successful, and regretted that his campaign work, prevented him from being present. Mr. Bowen also read a number of resolutions adopted by the club, which pledged support to Hoover and Curtis and the republican ticket. The resolutions:

Whereas: The republican party in national convention assembled at Kansas City, nominated as successor to Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses S. Grant, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Calvin Coolidge, for president of the United States Herbert Hoover; and for vice president, Charles Curtis; Therefore, be it resolved: That we the members of the Windham County Hoover and Curtis Republican club, members of the same club in Tolland, New London, Hartford, Litchfield and other counties in the state of Connecticut, in Worcester county, Massachusetts, and in towns in our sister state of Rhode Island, in mass meeting assembled on Woodstock common, pledge our unqualified support to Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis; and from this 15th day of September until Tuesday the 6th of November will work for the triumphant election of our ideal standard-bearers, Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis.

Again Governor Trumbull arose to the floor and led the gathering in community singing, while the band rendered the musical accompaniment of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Frederick C. Walcott, of Norfolk, candidate for United States senator, to succeed Senator McLean, who has retired from public office was next. Mr. Walcott, an intimate friend of Mr. Hoover's during the great strife of 1918, and also an advisor of the G. O. P., standard bearers, during the Belgium relief, outlined the qualities of his friend. He touched upon the many almost miraculous feats performed by Mr. Hoover, while he was in France providing the backbone of the allied strength to millions, food. Leaving the war Mr. Walcott, returned to America, and went with Hoover to the flooded districts in the Mississippi valley and spoke of the heroic work of Hoover in bringing relief to the victims.

J. Henry Rorabach, chairman of the state republican central committee was scheduled to speak, but he did not appear and no excuse was offered by the officials.

Senator Hiram Bingham, lauded the principals of republicanism, exemplified during the past two administrations and flayed the promises made by the democrats if they score the victory in the fall election. Mr. Bingham said:

Senator Bingham's Remarks.

Senator Hiram Bingham said:

I have known Mr. Hoover and Senator Curtis for several years. Both are eminently well qualified for the position for which they have been nominated. The zeal and wisdom with which Mr. Hoover has conducted the department of commerce during the past seven and one-half years is the best possible guarantee of the kind of service he will render to the nation as president.

With his wide knowledge of world affairs he has been able to foster our foreign trade in the face of increasing foreign competition as no previous secretary has ever done. With his training as an engineer and his genius for arriving at the best and most efficient way of doing things he has played a stupendous part in the elimination of waste in many of our industries and it is that increased efficency which enables our factories to hold their own in world competition. At the same time with his personal knowledge of foreign living conditions he knows how supremely important it is for us to maintain the protective tariff. He appreciates fully that if his dream of happier homes for America is to come true we cannot afford to allow our markets to be flooded by products made by poorly paid foreign labor. The democrats claim that they have recently been converted to this doctrine, but only a few months ago the democratic candidate for vice president and those who follow his leadership in the senate voted that the tariff should be lowered and declined to agree to my amendment which stated that there were certain articles on which the tariff should be increased.

Senator Curtis has had a remarkable training for his duties as vice president. He has been in the congress of the United States for nearly forty years and has been in the senate almost twenty years. Since the death of Senator Lodge he has been the leader of the republican party in the senate. His knowledge of parliamentary law is second to none. His skill in handling difficult situations has enabled a republican administration to put through the senate various measures at a time when we had a technical majority of only one and when it would have been very easy for the democrats by filibustering tactics to prevent the pas-minded, tactful and wise. From this it will be seen that he is pre-eminently qualified for the post of president of the senate.

The republican party is indeed fortunate in having as its standard bearers such splendidly equipped leaders as Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis.

Senator Bingham also referred enthusiastically to the fine record made by John H. Trumbull as governor of Connecticut and to the special qualifications which make Frederic C. Walcott the best available candidate for United States senator. He spoke with warm admiration of the record of Senator McLean and expressed great regret that Senator McLean had come to the conclusion to conclude his public service with the present session of sage of important measures. Such skill and sagacity has rarely been shown in the record of republican leadership in the senate. He has the reputation among those who know him best in Washington of being fair congress.

Hon. Frank H. Foss, M. C. of Mass., and Congressman Richard P. Freeman addressed the rally. Mr. Freeman said:

Congressman Freeman.

Congressman Richard P. Freeman said in part:

It has been demonstrated that not only are the interests of the republican party and our mutual, but that the interests of our party and those of the nation are also mutual. In former campaigns it has always been our undertaking to rekindle flames of interest among the rank and file of the party. Today however it would seem that the whole licaleectorate is interested--quite wide awake in fact and quite of a mind to vote. This is a cause for rejoicing since political apathy in a democracy is a dangerous foe, and one necessary to combat. We must be like the good soldier whom Paul, the Apostle, wrote about in one of his epistles. The armor, helmet, breastplate, sword, there mentioned, are all to be found in our republican armory. That armor we know consists of these achievements:

Four successive reduction in federal taxation;

Seven billion dollars reduction of the national debt;

Curtailing of the extravagance of the national government;

Budgeting of national expenditures, to keep within probable income;

Immigration restrictions;

Limitation of armament;

Plans for settlement of reparation and war debts.

The helmets are the helmets of peace with all nations floating their newest "outlawry of war" plumes; and the breastplates are those of a protective tariff, which affords security to our industrial enterprises and the maintenance of our high standard of living. And the sword? It is the two-edged sword of enthusiasm, both for our cause and our leader—a leader, that one internationally known author, a woman, hitherto a democrat, characterizes as the best men either major party has offered for president in many years. She goes on to say: "He is indeed the man for whom we have waiting, the wise, just, disinterested public servant already known to us all. We know what he can do because of what he has already done. We know he will keep his word because in war and peace he has kept it. There is no other living American whose record at home and abroad equals his."

If a recruit from the democracy feels this way about Mr. Hoover, how ought we to feel. My friends, let us conduct this campaign with enthusiasm for our wonderful standard bearer—he is worthy of all praise and of our most valiant efforts. I believe the men and women of America will reward Herbert Hoover with the honor to which he aspires, and that we, friends and fellow republicans, shall celebrate a great victory on Nov. 6th.

Again the audience was led in song by Governor Trumbull, during the singing of the anthem, "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean." As Senator George H. Moses' turn to speak neared, a telegram was received by Mr. Bowen and read, which Senator Moses of the granite state, regretted that he would not be able to fulfill his Woodstock engagement, because of a southern campaign tour. Much disappointment was expressed among the attendance as the message was heard.

Ably fulfilling Sen. Moses's place was Mrs. Knight, the vice presidential nominee's daughter, who was called upon and accepted the invitation of Governor Trumbull to say a few words. "I cannot see how any woman in the audience cap help but vote the republican ticket after hearing these wonderful speakers," said Mrs. Knight. Mrs. Knight has all the features of her esteemed father. Her brief talk brought a demonstration from the gathering and the governor experienced difficulty in bringing the crowd to quiet.

The last speaker of the day was Will Irwin, internationally known author and editor and close friend of Herbert Hoover's. In informing the attendance of his acquaintance with Mr. Hoover, Irwin said, "I've known that bird for 34 years, and I can fearlessly and truthfully say that he is the most qualified man the republicans ever offered for the presidency of the United States." Mr. Irwin, in his quaint western style of talk, began with the life of Hoover and described him from his birth until the time of his nomination at Kansas City. During one of his darkest days in France, Mr. Irwin said that Hoover was troubled with a shipment of food coming through dangerous territory. Many advised him against this route as the large fortune that had provided for the shipment would be lost if the Germans should by chance capture the train. "Mr. Hoover, upon hearing his advisors, used one of his rarest swearwords," said Mr. Irwin, "and here is what he said," 'Let the fortune go to Hell,' we must save these starving people regardless of the cost.' "I have nothing to say against, Governor Smith, because he is a good man, but Hoover is the man for the presidency, and with such demonstrations as this one today, we'll make the Tammany Tiger, look like a prairie dog asleep," said the author in his closing sentence.

With a few remarks by Governor Trumbull, the revival meeting of the one time political rallies of Woodstock came to a close.

Although the large common was fairly crowded, it was only about one third of the mass of humanity expected to be present on the previous day. Much of this is due to the threatening rain clouds which hung overhead during the length of the programme, yet rain did not begin to fall until fully an hour after the event came to a close.

The highway was jammed with automobile traffic which was efficiently handled, under the direction of Commissioner Robert T. Hurley and members of the Connecticut state police.

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 16—As to making new voters, a new all-time record was set up here Saturday when 393 persons were admitted to the electorate in the town of Killingly. Making this unusually large number of new voters proved a long and trying task for the officials to whom such duties are delegated, and they were at it all day. No such number of voters ever were made in one day in this town. And, further, there were on hand the applications of approximately 523 candidates to-be-made. However, more than 100 failed to put in an appearance, or came to be made and could not spare the time to await their turn the assumption being that they will be made in October in time for the state and national election in November.

Of the number admitted Saturday 191 are classified as republicans and 176 as democrats, as to caucus registration. Some thirty odd passed up the opportunity to register on either caucus list. Eight of those who came before the officials to have their qualifications to be voters examined were rejected.

Of the new voters who can be definitely classified, as to party leanings, 126 in the first district, 60 in the second district and five in the third district, registered as republicans. In the first district the democrats gained 99 new members, 73 more in the second district and four in the third district. It will be noted that the democrats made a gain over the republicans from among the new voters of the second district.

The coming national election is regarded as being the main incentive for producing such a large number of new voters in Killingly this season. Among the new voters are numbers of women, of both parties.

It is well over 100 years since the first fair of an organization now represented as successor by the Windham County Agricultural society was held in this territory, and in keeping with that tradition the annual Brooklyn fair is to be held this week. Tuesday is entry day and Wednesday and Thursday the big days.

For weeks past the management has been busy with its plans for the annual exhibition, still remaining a good, old-fashioned country fair, with exhibits of the products of the farm, cattle, poultry and horse shows, races and many other diversions. Good roads and automobiles have become two large factors in swelling the attendance at Brooklyn for several years past. This year motorists going into Brooklyn for the fair from the vicinity of Danielson will do well to use the Allen hill route or follow the state highway around through Wauregan to avoid the rough going on Brooklyn flats, where highway construction work has left the road in a condition not at all inviting for travel.

Osias Fournier, 64, a native of Rutland, Vt., died Saturday at his home in Moosup, where he had lived for many years. He leaves his wife and a daughter.

At North Foster at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon funeral services for Elmer F. Stone were conducted by Rev. George Watts of East Providence, Baptist missionary for the state of Rhode Island, and by Rev. E. G. Bucklin of Chepachet. During the service Rev. Mr. Bucklin sang "Life is Like a Mountain Railway," and "Rock of Ages." Burial was in the Hopkins-Stone cemetery near North Foster. The bearers were Bert Hopkins, Harris A. Hammond, Elmer Aylsworth, Silas Spink, Harry Perkins and Leon A. Stone. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Rush work is now the rule on the state highway reconstruction work being done on the Providence cut-off. Numbers of men, with trucks and a steam roller, were engaged today in what may be termed emergency work, that the contract may be completed before cold weather sets in—and there remains plenty of work to be done. This is the contract that was abandoned by Eugene Gobeille, missing Worcester contractor who originally undertook the work, when he disappeared from here during the summer, and has not since been found, though reported in August to be in Canada.

In a campaign that has developed some unpleasant phases for a large percentage of the electorate in Windham county, it is a pleasure to record this morning, repeating the expressed sentiments of numbers of democrats who discussed the matter today, that the speakers at the big republican rally in Woodstock Saturday afternoon disdained to do other than discuss legitimate issues. Democrats appeared agreed that members of their party had no complaint to make about any of the addresses, all of which were on a high, clean level.

This momentous Sunday of their lives—a day marking a recess period in their trial for murder—passed quietly at the county jail in Brooklyn for Raymond G. Lalone and Albert Raymond, accused of the murder of State Officer Irving H. Nelson. If they are greatly perturbed over the situation in which they find themselves, the prisoners showed little indication of it, and their demeanor is said to be much the same as during the months that they have been at the jail awaiting trial.

This cloudy day cast no shadows over the sunny attitude of members of the Danielson Firemen's association at the Old Furnace for their annual outing and clambake. In the pretty retreat, now a park area owned by the town of Killingly, and scene of many church picnics and other such outings in years gone by, they gathered during the forenoon and whiled away the hours until the big "shore" dinner was served under the direction of "King" George Jacques at one o'clock. It was such a feast as eventually earns a place in tradition, and as the firemen are a healthy and husky group of men they did full justice to the bountiful spread. The department members returned here late in the afternoon.

Up to late this afternoon only minor accidents involving motor cars had been reported in this territory. At 12.35 this morning on the highway between North Grosvenordale and Wilsonville in the town of Thompson cars operated by Thomas J. Kelley of Thompson and Omer Maynard of 76 Maynard street, Putnam, were involved in an affair that resulted in Kelley being ordered to make a court appearance in Thompson Monday. At Woodstock, where the big republican rally took place Saturday afternoon, there was only one small accident, this having to do with a truck backing into a car and damaging it somewhat. The week end brought no report of personal injuries in motor vehicle accidents.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson barracks and several of his men were on duty at Woodstock Saturday afternoon directing traffic.

Of more than passing interest is the election of William H. Putnam, of Hartford, senior member of the firm of Putnam & Company as director of The Windham County National bank.

Mr. Putnam's election to the board of this prominent financial institution makes the fourth generation in the Putnam family who have served on its board.

The Windham County National bank is the oldest bank by far doing business in Windham county and one of the five oldest banks in the state of Connecticut was incorporated in 1822 by special act of the Connecticut legislature.

William Putnam, great grandfather of William H. Putnam, was numbered among the first directors of this bank and served for 22 years. William H. Putnam, grand father of the present William H. Putnam, became a director in 1879 and served successively for ten years. Albert D. Putnam, father of William H. Putnam, became a director in 1889 succeeding to the position and filling the vacancy caused by the death of his father. Shortly thereafter he retired from the board and was again elected in 1897 and served continuously for seven years. It is therefore evident that the present William H. Putnam, newly elected director has inherited the directorship of his great grandfather handed down to him through the various generations.

The present William H. Putnam spent the early part of his career as a clerk and teller in the Windham County National bank, resigning to enter a broader field of banking. In 1914 he became one of the original incorporators and directors of The Killingly Trust company and continues in such directorate to the present day.

Mr. Putnam's election to the board is a distinct compliment to him and recognizes his successful career as one of the enterprising bankers of the city of Hartford.

The Windham County National bank is likewise to be congratulated upon this affiliation. Mr. Putnam will bring to the board a rich experience in the management of financial affairs and particularly the investment line.

Mr. Putnam maintains a great interest in Danielson and in the town of Killingly. His mother, Mrs. A. D. Putnam, is still living in the family home on Reynolds street and Mr. Putnam has a great love for the community and particularly the Episcopal church where he was wont to attend as a younger man and still has a keen interest in the affairs of the parish.

Today Attorney L. A. Wolsard, Alma Forcier, Goodyear, and Frank M. Bedard, West Side, were at Waterbury to attend a testimonial dinner given by the French republican clubs of Connecticut for the party nominees on the state ticket.

It was announced today that the Windham County convention of Religious Education is to be held here at the Westfield Congregational church on October 15. There are to be conferences, exhibits and addresses.

At St. James' church a class is being given special instruction leading to the administering on the last Sunday in September, of confirmation by the bishop of the dioceses.

Killingly—all sections of it—was well represented Saturday afternoon for the big Hoover-Curtis Country club rally on the common at Woodstock.

Recently a considerable number of honorary members have been recruited for the Danielson Firemen's association, which held an outing today.

A cottage house to rent, seven rooms with modern conveniences and a large front lawn. Inquire 85 South Main stre or Tel. 174-2.—Adv.

Thirty members of the Killingly high school football club are now in training under the direction of Coach William Schofield of the faculty. Early work would indicate that the team has good prospects for the playing season.

Danielson men appear to have almost unanimously obeyed the unwritten edict that straw hats are out of the picture September 15.

When the annual meeting of the Danielson Federation of Churches is held Wednesday evening in the Jacobs Memorial library, officers for the ensuing year are to be elected.

Promptly at 2 o'clock this afternoon electric power all through this territory was shut-off in order that crews of the Eastern Connecticut Power company might make repairs that were necessary, as the company announced at the week end would be done.

Mrs. Owen Bell and children have gone to Albany-Decatur, Ala., to join Mr. Bell, an office department of the Connecticut Mills company in that southern community.

Miss Isabelle D. Croyen of New Bedford spent the week end visiting with frinds in Danielson.

Mrs. Harding W. Gaylord has been elected general chairman of an organization to be known as The Woman's association of the Westfield Congregational church and which is to be supervise all the women's organizations of the church.

Right now there is very considerable activity on the part of candidates for town offices over which contests are regarded as likely to develop, an outstanding is the drive that is on for first selectman.

It is announced that William S. Hunter of Goodyear again will be a candidate on the republican ticket for a nomination as representative. Mr. Hunter served creditably in the last session as a member of the house from this town. As previously announced, Representative Arthur W. Williams of Danielson also is in the field for a renomination from this, the first district, of the town.

A wild grape crop that is abundant is ripening in this section, promising to yield many bushels for those who are acquainted with localities where the grapes grow in quantities.

PUTNAM

SNEAK THIEF STEALS PURSE IN BOLLES ST. HOUSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 16—A sneak thief made his way into the home of Durham Hall on Bolles street, Friday evening and escaped with a purse, belonging to Miss Phoebe Franklin a roomer at the Hall home. Mr. and Mrs. Hall left their home early in the evening and left the children in charge of Mrs. Robert Brownlie, a neighbor. During the course of the evening Mrs. Brownlie was disturbed by a noise in the front part of the house. She made a search of the room but found each little detail in order. When Miss Franklin returned to her home she discovered that her purse, which she had forgotten, was gone and the window screen had been removed from its place. The police were summoned and an investigation of the matter was made by Officer Joseph Page.

The police searched the premises but found no clue to the thief. It is believed that the person committing the offense is familiar with the layout of the house and also was aware that the owner of the purse had left it in the room.

The enrollment at the state trade school is considerably larger than that of the past year, according to reports recently received from officials of the school. Particular interest is evident in the building trades departments and the related subjects as the work will require one additional instructor in the near future. The school's operations throughout the summer were successful from both the standpoint of enrollment and the quality of instruction given.

The masonry department, although established a little less than a year, is developing rapidly.

The faculty organization this year is as follows: H. H. Ellis, director; J. R. McCormick, L. C. Cutler, electrical department; Ernest Stary, J. M. Smith, Carpentry department; H. E. Burgess, machine department; C. A. Linderson, textile department; T. E. Barr, drafting department; T. A. Kelly, masonry department; Hannah E. Pease, sewing department; Ethel Spooner, cooking department. The only change since the last school year was the resignation of John F. Craig, in the carpentry department and the employment of J. M. Smith as his successor.

A very interesting experience of the past year has been the work done by the school in the preparing of plans and the assisting in the remodeling of an old building to be used by the town of Windham as a trade school at Willimantic. Drafting students drew the plans, specifications were gotten out by the boys at the school, electrical and carpentry students putting in the wiring complete and building the interior partitions. The entire work is progressing rapidly to a satisfactory completion.

The textile department has reopened with a full line of instruction in this work, it being engaged particularly in the making of fine cotton goods and the type of experience runs from the opening of the bale to the inspecting of the finished cloth.

The evening school will open on October 1st. Applications for enrollment in the evening courses of instruction may be had from the school, or from Burt's and Dupre's drug stores.

An accident involving the automobiles of Joseph Schmanska and William Desonier, both of Putnam, occurred Saturday evening at the top of Bundy street hill. Desonier was approaching on Main street when the Schmanska car came up the hill and crashed the smaller vehicle. Neither driver was injured but considerable damage was inflicted on each car. Neither driver was held.

Dr. Marguerite J. Bullard, who recently underwent an operation was reported by the officials at the Day Kimball hospital today as improved. She was allowed to sit up in bed Friday.

Maurice B. Fuller, son of Lucius H. Fuller, prominent Putnam business man, died in Noank, Saturday morning after a long illness. The younger Mr. Fuller is a native of Putnam, and spent the greater part of his life here. He received his education in the schools of Putnam and later entered business with his father. Ill health had forced him to retire from actual work and he went to Noank to rest. He is survived by his father and one brother who resides in California.

The Hall Memorial gymnasium, in Woodstock, is now under construction, and is fast nearing completion. The building, that will be one of the most complete athletic halls in the county, is situated in the rear of Woodstock academy and will be used by the athletic teams of the academy for their contests with rival schools. The greater part of the funds for the erection of the building were raised by popular subscription.

Miss Dorothy C. Baker, a former member of the faculty of Putnam high school, now of Warwick, R. I., was a Putnam visitor over the week-end.

Workouts during the last week at Putnam high school indicate that the gridiron team will be one of the most successful since the victorious team of 1926. Coach Noyes has put the candidates through stiff drills during the week and feels that his material this year is in better form than any he has ever coached at Putnam. The first team players will be named during the coming week and all efforts will be devoted to the winning of the Windham game, which is scheduled to take place at Putnam on September 29. The team has not been forced to contend with any of the pranks played by a jinx that followed it last season, in the form of early season injuries, which did much to hamper their championship hopes.

Putnam was well represented at the mass meeting staged Saturday by the Windham county Hoover-Curtis Republican club at Woodstock common. The Putnam delegation formed in automobiles at Putnam high school at 1 p. m. and paraded down School street, to Grove, to Ring, countermarching to Grove to South Main to Main, to Bridge, to Church, to Providence streets, and thence to Marshall and on to Woodstock. During the parade about the city, horns, whistles and other noisemakers featured the event.

CRANSKA VETERAN EMPLOYES RECEIVED WITH CHEERS

Merited recognition of the older employes of the two mills under the Cranska management was given at a dinner at Moosup pond recently in connection with a field day. After Lucius Cranska had introduced several guests T. J. Seaton proceeded to introduce the older employes of the Moosup mill, reading the position and term of service of each. They were greeted with cheers from the crowd. The following were thus recognized, in each case the figure indicating the number of years' service with the Cranska organization.

Henry A. Roberts, 48, overseer of carding; Arthur E. Medbury, 42, overseer of spinning; Arthur Zercie, 38, overseer of twisting; Anthony Paranzino, 20, overseer of inspecting; E. A. Codlin, 21, engineer; William A. Rose 26, master mechanic; Emilien Dore, 18, head carpenter; Hubert Bigonese, 47; Edna Brown, 38; Napoleon Leblanc, 37; Joseph Zercie, 36; Hiram Methot, 35.

Mr. Roberts in addition to 48 years for the Floyd Cranska company had been employed with its predecessor, the Gladding mill, for three years. Mr. Higgins of Worcester, then introduced the heads of departments and older employes there.

The father of Lucius Cranska, the late Floyd Cranska, purchased the old Gladding thread mill in Moosup in 1880. Since that time additions have been made, making the present large and modern factory. The Worcester plant was started in 1899, and there the product of the Moosup plant is finished. The two companies are separate entities, but Lucious Cranska is president of both.

WESTERLY

MRS. SPANO'S LEG BROKEN WHEN SHE WAS STRUCK BY CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 16—About 6 o'clock, Saturday evening, Mrs. Angeline Spano, wife of Michael Spano, Oak street, received injuries when struck by an automobile driven by Joseph Burgess, 19, of Bradford, who had lost control of the car. The auto was the property of George Smith of Pawtucket, R. I., and investigating by State Trooper Bonat revealed the fact that Burgess had no driver's license. Mrs Spano was going up Oak street when she noticed the car zigzagging down Oak street hill and sought protection behind a tree by the roadside. The clearance was not sufficient as the machine was turned off the road and across the lots, eventually to be brought to a stand-still on the tracks of the New Haven railroad, by the plant of the Coduri Granite works. Joseph Gervasini, hearing the crash as the auto left the highway, rushed out from his home to help pick up Mrs. Spano and Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called. At the Westerly hospital it was found that she had sustained a bad fracture of the left leg, near the ankle and cuts and bruises about the hand and face. Burgess was locked up at the Westerly police station on a charge of driving without a license. He claimed that the brake rod became broken and he was unable to stop the car and swung it off the road to avoid hitting other machines on the highway

KINGSTON FAIR A SUCCESS IN SPITE OF POOR WEATHER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 16—The 53rd annual fair of Washington County Agricultural association at Kingston came to a close Saturday night. The day was Children's day, when children were admitted to the grounds without charge. The weather appeared even more threatening than on the previous three days of the fair and this served to reduce the number of those in attendance. The vaudeville program and afternoon racing were features of the day and the pageant and fireworks display closed the evening, which became increasingly damp and wet.

In the early evening hours exhibitors began taking away their various displays and many juniors were made happy by the gift of fruit and vegetables which some of the owners did not care to take home. A pleasing feature of this year's fair and one which attracted more of an audience than on previous years was the Horse Show conducted inside the race track before and during the track racing. Show horses which attracted interest were from the Welch farm in Charlestown, R. I., and others brought from the Portsmouth, R. I., fair. The judges were A. J. Currier and Dr. Thomas E. Robinson of Westerly. The fair management is reported gratified with the attendance, which although not record-breaking was of sufficient size to insure the success for 1929.

PORTO RICO'S DISASTER

Time is permitting Porto Rico to better ascertain the havoc that was wrought by the terrific hurricane that swept through the West Indies leaving death and destruction in its wake.

Hurricanes are beyond control. They twist and turn in a manner hard to understand and when they have spent their force they have cleared a wide path. Whatever is in their way, whether it be on land or sea, feels the effect. And once again a West Indian hurricane has thrown itself not only against the islands but against Florida, and throughout its course the extent of its damage is as yet undetermined.

Porto Rico reports however that it has experienced a serious disaster. The death list is large and property loss will be heavy. This will be particularly true of crops.

Already it has been shown that Porto Rico will require outside assistance in meeting the situation and there is much satisfaction in the fact that following a conference with President Coolidge, H. M. Baker, director of disaster relief for the American Red Cross was sent by that organization to Porto Rico to take charge of the situation. Other islands in that region will likewise come in for assistance if conditions required it.

With the large death list at Porto Rico and the devastation, conditions in the island will call for careful handling. There will be much distress, troublesome sanitary conditions and a big problem in dealing with the homeless. Sympathy and aid will be poured out in liberal quantities but there cannot fail to be a high degree of satisfaction over the fact that there is such an efficient organization ready to respond to such a need as the American Red Cross.

Ready to start a once, prepared to get into action immediately this organization stands as the emergency relief corps of the United States. It doesn't welcome disasters, but it is equipped to meet them, knowing that double service is rendered through prompt and effective measures. Director Baker has had valuable experience in meeting just such conditions and under his guidance relief work should bring the maximum in results.

STRAW HATS

Just because the 15th of September has come and gone doesn't necessarily mean that no more straw hats will be seen. Some have been put on the shelf or in the ash barrel, according to their condition, but there will be numerous straws to be seen for days to come. That is, they will be seen unless the weather conditions demand something else.

In a communication to a New York paper a writer says: "There are hot days throughout September up to October 1. It does seem arbitrary to try to set a date like September 15 when men shall cease wearing straw hats or be considered queer and subject to ridicule or assault. If a date for discontinuing strawhats is in order why not make it October 1? Let men show their independence and wear straw hats as long as they feel like it."

The date for abandoning the straws is much like the passing of summer. The season goes, whether measured by the months or the equinox, but we continue to get summery days and no one fails to enjoy them when they come even after those dates.

It is safe to say that if September provides a number of sour days from now on the strawhats will quickly disappear. Some will pass into forgetfulness because some claim the season is ended. There are those who do not like straw, those who have not worn them all summer and those, liking a change who had already donned felts or caps or iron men before September arrived.

Independence has and will continue to prevail when it comes to the headgear of men, according to the individual. Some timorous souls will follow a leader while others will do as they please even if it means fighting it out on the straw hat line all winter. The approach of cooler weather and the shorter days indicates that sooner or later a different hat will be required. Some cannot make that change too soon; others are content to bide their time and suit their own comfort and convenience instead of being slaves to a hard and fast rule, especially if the rule doesn't jibe with their likes. There is no good reason why straws shouldn't be worn until October first, or later if comfortable, and weather being warm it will be possible to see many of them the wearers of which will expect no medals for courage or deserve no charges of eccentricity.

FIGHTING AGAINST DEFICIT

When the president declares that there must be no deficit, that the concluding year of his term must not be clouded in such a manner, it is characteristic of him.

When he tells the heads of the departments that expenditures must be kept down if necessary to avoid a deficit, it is in keeping with his repeated warnings and efforts. He has taken that position repeatedly in the interest of economy and sound conditions.

A deficit has been warned against by the president on several occasions when there were those who were advocating large expenditures and far greater tax reductions than the financial situation warranted. How easy it is to plunge into red ink is well illustrated by the comparison of the stand that was taken by the president in the last session of congress concerning the extent of tax reduction and that of some of the enthusiasts who were urging twice as much as was actually voted. They were declared at the time to be taking a rash attitude and the recent estimate by the budget director that a deficit was threatened, even though the administration's policy was followed, confirms it.

Nothing would be more distasteful to the president than to have his administration close with a deficit. It is against the policy he has advocated and followed from the first and it is only what might be expected when he insists that it must not develop.

There is an opportunity through increased revenue for the overcoming of the threatened deficit. It is also possible for certain expenditures to be cut down and it is this move which can be accomplished, rather than trusting to future developments, to which the president is devoting his attention.

It is an effort which the country is bound to applaud. The country today owes much to the policies which he has advanced and maintained and it has confidence that he will be able to get action from his department heads that will prevent running into a deficit.

DIRECTIONAL SIGNS

The first of the directional signs about the center of the city have been placed and it must be said that they make a good impression and should be of much service to those who are through the city. The help that is furnished at corners should be of assistance to traffic by making it unnecessary for so many to stop and inquire the way while the appreciation on the part of the driver who is thus helped is invariably lasting.

The authorities have been pursuing a pleasing policy in regard to parking places, crosswalk markings, one-way street restrictions and guide lines in the streets. To this is now added the erection of legible and well placed signs which point the direction to be followed to go to the nearby and distant towns and cities. They answer the questions that are asked by the score every day. It is possible that some additional ones will be required or that time will reveal the more effective placing of some of them but the important thing is to make a start and that has been done in a gratifying manner.

Those going through a strange city are for the most part intent upon doing it as quickly as possible and without stopping or getting out of the car any more times than is necessary to inquire the way. The directional signs help the pathfinder. They are conspicuously placed and silently tell the desired information.

Norwich has responded to a much needed requirement and displayed its interest in meeting a problem which grows with each year's increase in motor vehicle travel.

PAYING OFF LIBERTIES

Another of the war loans, the third Liberty carrying interest at 4 1-4 per cent., has been paid. This has run for a period of 10 years and all that remain of the big loans are the first and the fourth.

In meeting the huge indebtedness that existed as the result of the war the government has faced unusual problems, but it has been conspicuously successful both in the accomplishments and in the savings. Refunding operations have been carried on extensively and the oversubscriptions have demonstrated the eagerness for government issues, while the reduction of the federal account through the lower interest rates as well as the payment of loans has been particularly favorable to the national treasury. The refunding through new bonds or the issuance of short term notes was carried out smoothly though it was evident that it was getting the benefit of masterly guidance.

With the third Liberties ceasing to draw interest it will be interesting to note how many fail to turn in their bonds for redemption. On all previous issues there have been large numbers who have neglected to present their securities and get their money, and this in spite of the many methods of giving warning to the bondholders. It will be surprising if the same situation doesn't prevail concerning the thirds. While payment will be made at any time, some holders of such securities seem to overlook the fact that interest doesn't accumulate after the redemption date and they should be cashed and the proceeds placed in banks or other safe securities that there may be the least loss sustained.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Serve string beans in a white sauce, flavored with paprika and little lemon juice.

French dressing mixed and placed in the refrigerator in a cruet will keep idefinitely.

A teaspoon of powdered alum added to stove blacking gives the stove an excellent polish.

To scour steel knife blades, use a piece of raw potato. Or use a cork dipped in scouring powder.

To remove a musty odor from a room put a drop of oil of lavender in the corners.

There is no finer cleaning agent for brass than salt and lemon juice or salt and vinegar.

A piece of rubber tubing slipped over the sink faucets prevents china dishes being nicked when washed.

If you want to boil soft-shelled eggs, put quite a little salt in the water. It tends to prevent their cracking.

Add a cup of grated cheese to the white sauce in which you serve creamed cauliflower. It gives it a delicious flavor.

Mussed artifical flowers will look like new if they are held over steam a few minutes.

Windows will shine if a lump of starch is dissolved in the water with which they are washed.

Bags to hold shoes, laundry and other articles will be found convenient if hung in the closet.

When onions have been boiled in a saucepan and the odor remains, wash the pan with hot water and soapsuds, dry and then wash in a little strong vinegar.

Drain all boiled vegetables as soon as they are tender. They become soggy if they are allowed to stand undrained after cooking. The water drained off may be saved for soup stock. Most vegetables should be cooked in a small amount of water because part of the mineral salts dissolves in the water and is lost if the water is thrown away.

FRIED FISH.

When frying fish, chicken or any other meat, mix the flour, pepper and salt in apaper sack and drop the pieces into it and shake. This does away with cleaning up afterward.

EASIER TO HANDLE

When toasting marshmallows dip the fork into butter before putting a marshmallow on. It will not stick then and will come off in their original shape.

RUSTY GRATES.

If a grate is rusty, the best thing to do is to brush it over very thoroughly with black lead that has been mixed rather soft. If left for a day, then reblacked, it will polish up well.

LAUNDRY HINTS

When through using the electric washing machine, always disconnect the electric cord from the source of power, wipe out the interior of the machine thoroughly, and allow it to air.

Fabrics that may be injured by water should be sponged with denatured alcohol.

A small amount of soap powder added to hot starch will prevent the iron from sticking.

When ironing a garment will not pucker if it is ironed with a thread of the goods, until dry.

Children's garments may be easily ironed if they are made so they open out flat.

Satin may be renewed by rubbing it with a solution of soapstone back dissolved in warm water. Satin should not be ironed.

BOILED ICING

If boiled icing does not harden properly reheat it in the top of the double boiler. This can be done even after the syrup has been poured over the egg white. The slow heating, with constant stirring, especially if done with a dover beater, causes some of the moisture to evaporate and thereby concentrates the mixture so that the sugar crystallizes in fine particles and the icing "sets" or hardens.

ECONOMICAL DISH

Meat loaf or roll is one of the most economical meat dishes that can be served. Some of the cheaper cuts can be used in making it. All that is not eaten hot can be used in cold slices, sandwiches or hash. Any lean meat may be used. Allow a medium-sized onion to each 2 pounds of meat, and 1 egg to hold the chopped meat together. Fine, dry bread crumbs and any preferred seasoning may be added.

CLEAN BRUSH

To clean a hairbrush dip it up and down in tepid water to which a tablespoon of ammonia has been added. Do not dry in sun.

MAGAZINE STAND

An odd but exceedingly convenient stand for magazines is fully two feet long and a foot wide. It is divided into five compartments for magazines and is painted black, with lines of gold.

NEW DRESSING-TABLE

A most extraordinary dressing-table was part of an exhibition of modern furniture. It consisted of five deep glass shelves built into the wall to hold all the bottles of the modern beauty. The cover let down upon hinges and formed a shelf when necessary. It, too, was of glass.

FIRST AID TO TRAVELERS

A small pigskin case contains a thimble, scissors, needles and many small reels of silk for mending both frocks and stockings.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Fifty-seven colleges in the United States have women as executive heads.

Sixteen women in the United States have already been licensed as air pilots.

Women postal employees in Germany must wear skirts 8 inches below the knee.

Many of the best-known advertising agencies in London are now managed by women.

The Nicaragua Railroad hospital, owned by the Nicaraguan government, is supervised by Miss Ruth Ginn, an American nurse.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Tomatoes contain valuable vitamins and should be eaten often. The children should be encouraged to eat them. Heat does not change the vitamins, so canned tomatoes may be eaten with benefit.

Anything that stimulates the circulation will help get rid of this condition called "gooseflesh." Extremes in temperature in bathing will do this, such as alternately using hot and then cold water over the arms and then friction from a coarse towel when drying the skin.

If you want an oil to make the lashes and eyebrows really grow, use castor oil. This, being a vegetable oil, will nourish, it will also darken the hair and it will make brows and lashes glossy, too.

The Japanese bath is a good way of circumventing your inability to stand cold water. Get in a warm bath first, add hot water until the bath is just as hot as you can stand it. Scrub in the hot water. Then keep adding cold as the hot runs out until the water is almost icy. Rub vigorously with warm towels to stimulate the circulation. A bath is almost more beautifying when finished with cold water.

CABBAGE IN NEW DRESS

Cut a tart apple into slender strips about an inch long, then mix with it two cups of shredded cabbage marinated with a tablespoon of vinegar. One green pepper and one pimento chopped fine give zest and color and three tablespoons of chopped nuts add a novel touch. Mix these ingredients well together, adding a half teaspoon of salt and pepper to taste and then mix lightly with Thousand Island dressing.

BOOK TROUGH

For bedroom or boudoir, where one does not desire book shelves but does wish a few favorite books about, a book trough with 20 books is a useful piece of furniture, particularly when it is painted an antique tone.

FOR THE BABY

The mother of a very young baby would appreciate a simple gift consisting of a glass tray upon which are two painted glass bottles for cotton and boric acid, and a fancy box containing swabs.

DRESS PROTECTORS

Stiff gauze forms the base for the dress covers that are so successful at present. They come in many lovely shades. A number of them would make a sensible engagement gift.

BRIGHT UMBRELLAS

Wash your umbrellas every once in a while. Open and use nail brush dipped in warm ammonia water. If spotted, soapsuds can be used. Turn the bath shower on to rinse.

CORRESPONDENCE BOX

NEW PICTURE FRAME

A large picture frame worthy of a lovely face is made of light green velvet and has a piece of white jade beautifully carved and set in the top.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Selvedge-edge fabrics are new.

Wood shades will be prominent in fall evening rooms.

Flowered chiffon for every wear gives variety to the mode.

The vogue for crisp fabrics is definitely established in the evening mode.

A new silk for sports has almost the weight and feeling of soft light woolen.

New this season is transparent rayon velvet, in colors and designs similar to chiffon.

A distinguishing feature of a new Paris suit is the use of handkerchief linen with silk crepe.

A most happy combination is achieved in a dress of white silk, sleeveless, and worn under a coat of flannel.

Smart enough to wear even upon the beach are bath robes for boys made of flannel in brilliant yellows, greens, etc.

Charming little evening gowns are made of white chiffon and have touches of violet in flowers or trimming.

A smart sport coat is made of a novelty white wool material and has a border of pastel shades arranged in a geometric pattern.

Suitable for half mourning or for the all-white costume is a shawl made of white silk, with a wide fringe of the same white.

The lace bridesmaid gowns at a recent wedding had watered ribbon sashes in pastel shades. Each hat had its matching streamers.

NEW HATS

Although the new hats are of felt and are still small, there are many new features that stamp them as of 1928. Among others there is the question of trimming. For the first time in several seasons ribbons are placed upon these felt hats so that they stand out and are not just bands about the crown. Some of the brown hats are trimmed with a new shade of red, while others are a combination of brown and beige.

BLUE FOR FALL

There is much talk of blue for fall and winter wear, and certainly the clothes produced in this color are altogether wearable. Transparent velvets for evening, crepe satins for afternoon, delightful light woolens for daytime wear are all shown by one of the smartest shops.

TAFFETA FROCK

A very charming frock for evening wear is of a very delicate shade of lavendar taffeta. The waist is strictly plain with round neck and no sleeves but the skirt has a deep and irregular border of magenta taffeta, with blocks of deeper violet set in.

PASTRY CARE

Have care where you stand pastry just out of the oven. A cold or draughty place often condenses the steam and makes it heavy.

SAGGING SEATS

Cane seats can be rejuvenated by scrubbing thoroughly with hot soapsuds, rinsing with lemon juice and drying upside down.

RECIPES

Sour-Cream Cookies: Cream one-fourth cup of butter, add three-fourths cup of sugar, and one beaten egg, then half a teaspoon of peach or pineapple extract and half a cup of sour cream. Mix and sift together one and one-half cups of flour, half a teaspoonful of baking soda, and a pinch of salt. Make a soft dough, roll very thin, cut into fancy shapes, sprinkle with sugar and cocoanut, and bake in a quick oven.

Angel Food Cake: Beat the whites of six eggs until frothy, then add one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar and toast until stiff but not dry. Measure three-fourths cup of sugar and fold in slowly, beating after each addition. Mix one-fourth teaspoon of salt with three-fourths cup of flour, and sift four times, then fold it gently into the whites of the eggs. Do not beat or stir. Add half a teaspoon of vanilla. Pour into ungreased, one-pound coffee cans. This will fill about two cans. Bake in a slow oven, covering the cake with a buttered paper, if necessary, to prevent browning too deeply. To serve cut in rounds and cover with mashed and sweetened fruit or jam.

Arm Chair Journeys To Other Lands

By WILLIAM MILLER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

ATHENS, Sept. 17—(AP)—In some countries the relationship established between godparents and godchildren is purely formal, and virtually ends with the christening. But in Greece it is a serious connection, involving well-established duties and rights, which lasts throughout life.

Not only is the kouniparos, as the godfather is called, expected to take a continuous interest in the fortunes of his godchildren, but he is morally bound to render such services as he can to the child and his friends. For this reason, leading men are eagerly sought as godfathers and find that it brings them power and popularity to accept the office.

The most popular of the modern mayors of Athens would think it worth while to go out as far as Marathon to assist at the christening of a baby. One of the reasons of the late King Constantine's great popularity with his soldiers was that he was willing to act as their children's godfather.

Besides, the relationship extends beyond the children to their parents. Hence the manager of a commercial company by repeatedly becoming kouniparos was on intimate terms with numerous peasants and their families throughout a large part of Boeotia.

Some years ago before visiting Monemvasia whence the famous "Malmsey wine" took its name a place then very difficult of access and without a hotel a traveler obtained a general letter of introduction from the local deputy to his constituents one of whom was to put the wayfarer up. From the moment the latter arrived within the deputy's constituency he found that he was "treated" as a guest. When he ordered coffee at the first cafe at which he stopped the landlord refused payment on the ground that he bore a letter of introduction from his kouniparos. When he reached Monemvasia he was for three days the guest of a leading citizen while investigating the sights of "the Greek Gibraltar."

In politics a candidate who has been many times a godfather has a good chance of obtaining many votes. But on the other hand if elected a deputy, and still more if nominated a minister, he will be expected to provide snug places for his godchildren's families. Thus, this custom helps to swell the crowds in the ante-chambers of Greek ministers. But the gradual development of industries tends to diminish place-hunting and thus lightens the load of the ministerial kouniparos. Meanwhile, the custom makes people clannish and tends to bring rich and poor together as members of one family.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Cubby Runs Away

By Thornton W. Burgess

Look where you run, or goodness knows,
You're apt to stub your toes.
—Cubby Bear

Cubby Bear was having a wonderful time all by himself. He had climbed up on the roof of Farmer Brown's sugar-house over in the Green Forest and had knocked down the piece of stovepipe which was the chimney of the little sugar-house. Now he was cuffing it and knocking it around the ground, much as you have seen a kitten knock a spool around. It didn't fight back. No sir, it didn't fight back. It rolled and it made a noise, and altogether it made a very nice plaything. At least Cubby thought so. For the time being he had forgotten all about the smell of Wood

He gave a frightened squeal and was off again

Mice and of Trader the Wood Rat, which had come from inside that little sugar-house. You know he had been trying to break in when he knocked off the chimney.

That was just like Cubby. Bears have no persistence. If they start to do a thing and something distracts their attention they forget about what they had started to do. All Cubby thought about now was playing with that old piece of stovepipe. He thrust a little black paw way into it and then stood up with it still on his arm. That frightened him for a minute and he swung that arm. That sent the piece of stovepipe flying. Instantly Cubby was after it and pounced on it as if it were something alive.

Peeping through cracks in the sugar-house, Whitefoot and Mrs. Whitefoot and Trader the Wood Rat watched what was going on. You see, they had heard the noise and after a while curiosity got the best of them.

Cubby was so busy that he failed to look around to see if anybody else were present. In other words, he forgot to watch out. Yes, sir, he forgot to watch out. There was a sudden loud sniff. Cubby dropped that piece of stovepipe as if it had burned him. He turned toward the place that loud sniff had come from. Such a look as there was on his face! He scrambled to his feet and away he went. You wouldn't believe that a little bear could run as fast as Cubby ran. All the time he kept trying to look behind him. Now this is a very bad thing for any one to try to do—to run and look behind at the same time. Only people whose eyes are set away back, like those of Peter Rabbit, can do that successfully. There was an old stump in the clearing. Cubby Bear ran right smack into it! He didn't see that stump at all, because he was trying to look behind him.

Cubby was knocked sprawling. But he didn't lose any time. No, sir, Cubby didn't lose any time. He just gave a frightened squeal and was off again. Across the clearing he raced and into the Green Forest. Then he went up a tree. You wouldn't believe that any one as big as Cubby Bear could go up a tree as fast as he went. The way he went up that tree would have been a credit to Happy Jack Squirrel. Up he went up, up, up, until he could get no higher. He was away up in the top of a tree, hanging on for dear life and looking down with such a scared expression as only a badly scared little bear can have.

What was it all about? Well, over there by that piece of stovepipe, sniffing at it and rolling it over to see what it was, was his father, great big Buster Bear. Cubby didn't know it was his father and Buster didn't know that Cubby was his son. You see, Father Bears seldom know their own children. Buster looked over at the tree where Cubby was and yawned. Then he took a few steps in that direction. Cubby clung more tightly than ever and did his best to climb a little higher. Then Buster lost all interest in Cubby and shuffled over to the sugar-house. It was the turn then of Mrs. Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and Mrs. Whitefoot and Trader the Wood Rat to run. They ran and hid in their nests and wondered if it would be possible for great big Buster Bear to get into that sugar-house.

Stories That Recall Others

Easy for the Teacher

When little John showed his first task of the school year to his mother she said the writing was terrible and the teacher would never be able to read it.

John replied: "Oh, well, my teacher knows the answer, so she'll know what I mean."

Throughout

The family was moving to a new location and the father in describing the house he had rented, among other things, said that it has "hardwood floors throughout."

Five year old Paul repeated the description to a neighbor, but ended by saying, "I guess we will have to wait till we move there to see what kind of floors we will have because dad said they had all the hard wood floors "threw out."

YOUR HEALTH

CONSTIPATION

By A. B. Olsen, M. D., Battle Creek, Mich.

Lane, the eminent London surgeon, says that modern man is regular in consuming three meals a day, but irregular in emptying his bowels. This failure to pay proper attention to the calls of nature leads in time to constipation, a common disorder that may cause serious trouble if neglected.

During its passage through the stomach and small bowel the nutritious part of the food is digested and taken into the blood stream, while the waste is passed into the colon or large bowel. Thus the large bowel acts as a garbage can for the body, and keeping it clean is obviously a matter of vital importance to health.

Normally the waste matter from each meal should be expelled from the bowels in the course of 18 to 20 hours, producing two or three evacuations daily.

If this human garbage bin is not promptly and regularly emptied, decay of the contents takes place, resulting in a putrid mass with the formation of more or less poisonous products which may be absorbed into the blood and cause auto-intoxication or self-poisoning. Some of the symptoms are a foul breath, a coated tongue, loss of appetite, a dull headache, languor, drowsiness, tiredness, and vague feelings of discomfort. Natural vim and vigor are lacking and there may be a tendency to blues.

The bowels are naturally regulated by diet, water drinking and exercise. A diet rich in fruit and vegetables has a mild laxative effect which is usually sufficient to maintain normal bowel activity. Laxative fruits include apples, pears, peaches, plums, cherries, grapes, fresh figs and the citrus fruits, oranges, tangerines and grapefruit. Among stewed fruits may be mentioned baked and stewed apples and stewed prunes, raisins and figs. Fresh crisp celery, lettuce, radishes, cucumbers, spring onions, melons, tomatoes, cabbage and shredded turnips and carrots all furnish roughage, and for this reason are helpful. Cooked greens such as spinach, Swiss chard, endive, dandelion, leeks, string beans, Brussel sprout, cabbage and cauliflower have a varying laxative influence. White bread is constipating but bran or graham bread have a contrary effect. For a breakfast food bran flakes are preferable to corn flakes.

Sluggish bowels may be relieved by taking plain or emulsified mineral oil in half ounce doses with meals, more or less, according to the degree of constipation. If necessary, the bowels may be washed clean by the use of a plain water injection, one to three pints.

If these mild measures do not relieve the constipation, consult the family doctor. It is poor economy, and also dangerous, to be one's own physician.

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breadth, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or use the free coupon:

THERE is nothing that has ever taken the place of Bayer Aspirin as an antidote for pain. Safe, or physicians wouldn't use it, and endorse it: use by others. Sure, or several million users would have turned to something else. But get real Bayer Aspirin (at any drugstore) with Bayer on the box, and the word genuine printed in red:

RECOVERS AUTOMOBILE FOR BATH STREET DEALER

A new Jordan automobile which F. W. Davis of Somerville, N. J., obtained a week ago from the Bailey garage at 32 Bath street, was recovered Friday at Westbrook, Me., by Sergt. Henry J Albright of the Groton state police barracks. Sergeant Albright drove the machine back here, but did not succeed in arresting Davis because the police of Somerville had taken Davis back to New Jersey where he is wanted on the charge of issuing a fraudulent check. A similar charge is made against him here.

It is claimed that a week ago Davis appeared at the Norwich garage with a roadster which he wished to trade in for a new phaeton. He presented a bill of sale for the roadster and a check for $900; the transaction was completed and he drove off the new car. Several days later the check, which was drawn on a Somerville bank, came back marked no funds, and when Sergeant Albright was informed he broadcast an alarm for the arrest of Davis which resulted in his apprehension in Maine.

A warrant, charging Davis with issuing a fraudulent check has been sent to the Somerville authorities with the request that Davis be held for the Connecticut state police when the New Jersey authorities have finished with him

The volunteers who removed the old grandstand put the finishing touches on the ground where it stood by digging holes to bury all the stone piers and then filling in and grading the property. The volunteer group working on the track has completed the new fence and new track grading and has nearly finished putting in the new pump and new entrance to the track in front of the new horse stables. The 40 new horse sheds are all completed except the 20 doors and on Saturday W. H. Nelson with a crew of volunteer electricians wired the new stalls. F. S. Armstrong with another group of volunteers removed all the old posts and filled in the old post holes on the ground where the old horse barns stood.

To McCoy Laboratories:

Two years ago my 12-year-old son and I both had diphtheria, after which we were both left very anemic. My boy had to quit schohol and got so weak he could not walk across the room; after finding he was anemic we took bottles and bottles of blood medicine without any results, so having seen your McCoy's Tablets advertising so much I decided to try them. It was but a short time after doing so that he was out playing and going to school. I also started taking them. At the time I weighed 103 pounds and when I had taken three boxes I weighed 126 pounds. VELVETMEN TAKE FIRST GAME OF SERIES BEATING TAFTVILLE A. A. 8 TO 7

J. B. Martin gained first blood in the annual "town series" with Taftville A. A. Sunday afternoon at Martin field, 8 to 7, in 11 innings in one of the most fiercely contested struggles that these two clubs have ever put on. A large crowd saw the fray. In a preliminary game the Taftville American Legions won handily from the Holy Name Juniors of Jewett City, 7 to 1.

The Martin men were in a real hitting mood, hitting all three of Jim Troland's pitchers for their sweet victory to gain the edge in the series. Twenty safeties rang from the bats of the Velvetmen during the matinee.

Lloyd Jarvis started for Troland but he was forced out under fire in the second inning after J. B. had taken a 5 to 0 lead. Tony West came in, retired the side and went along well, although touched freely until the eleventh when he was relieved by Lefty Dugas with the winning run on base. Dugas took the mound with one out and men on second and third. He promptly filled the bases with an intentional pass and forced the next batter to lift a fly to short left but Fisher banged one down at Meddie Dugas, who just took over first after his brother went to pitch and Meddie muffed the ball, the winning run trickling over.

Russ Fisher pitched masterful ball for the Velvetmen. He was found for 13 hits but clever support by his mates enabled him to pull through the winner. Several times it looked as if he were gone but he managed to pull through until his mates could put on enough stem for the winning margin in the second overtime stanza.

Open Scoring

After Faber had doubled with two gone in Taftville's first and was left stranded J. B. put on a one-run attack off Jarvis in their half. Krauss singled. King was safe on Christy's error and Campbell singled to score Krauss. In the second frame, however, Jarvis was forced to retire when Smith's single, a pass to Fisher, Joubert's double and Paddy Ryan's home run over the canvas in deep left field with two on manufactured four runs with two out. Krauss doubled and then Tony West took over the pitching duties. King was safe on Faber's error but died stealing.

Taftville scored first in the fourth on Dugas' double, a wild pitch, sacrifice fly by Lamory, pass to Eccleston and Jarvis three base hit. The Troland gang then knotted the count in the next inning, the fifth, on a pass to Mills, doubles by Faber and Lamory and an error by Krauss.

J. B. broke the tie in the seventh on Liberty's single, Ryan's sacrifice and Krauss' third double that he tried to stretch into a triple but was out, Mills to Christy.

Taftville, however, tied the score again in the eighth on Eccleston's single, Krauss' error on Christy's roller, a sacrifice bunt by Jarvis and a sacrifice fly by West.

J. B. threatened again in their half of the eighth when Smith, Fisher and Murphy singled but a fine throw by Lloyd Jarvis from deep center on Fisher's hit caught Smith trying to go from first to third and averted danger. J. B. also made a serious threat in the ninth on King's single and Campbell's double with two out but Smith flied to left to end the inning.

Taftville broke through for one tally in the half of the eleventh on Mills' single and Faber's double but J. B. doubled this for the game in their part of the inning. Liberty walked as a starter but was forced by Ryan. Krauss singled moving Ryan to second and King doubled to right center, scoring Ryan and sending Krauss to third. West then retired and Lefty Dugas took over the hill. He intentionally walked Campbell to fill the bases and got Smith on a pop-up to Mills in short left but Fisher hit to A. Dugas, who missed it, the ball caroming off his leg into center while Krauss scored.

Junior Game

In the first game of the day Taftville, champion of the Norwich Junior league played classy ball to even their series with the Holy Name juniors of Jewett City, 7 to 1. Lemieux pitched nice ball for the winners while his teammates supported him ably. Last Sunday Jewett City won over Taftville, 1 to 0 and the deciding game of the series will be played soon.

NOTES

Plenty of old-fashioned slugging with fielding feats of brilliance thrown. It was without doubt the best game hereabouts this year, anyway.

Joe Faber's three doubles were no flukes. One landed on top of the main factory building. And that is some clout.

Denny Murphy, Taftville boy, now with the Chicago Cubs was an interested spectator at the game. The Cubs are in Boston and Denny hopped to his home for the day, leaving at 7 o'clock for the Hub City, where the Cubs resume their series today. He invited his friends either to New York or Philadelphia for the world series to see the Cubs, of course.

Lloyd Jarvis made his farewell appearance on local diamonds for this year as this clever little performer leaves for Holy Cross college Wednesday. Lloyd played a brilliant game in the field and drew a big hand on each trip to the plate.

Ryan's home run was a long hit, easily clearing the burlap.

SANDE RODE HIS LAST RACE ON SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—Earl Sande has hung up his boots for good with one of his pet dreams unrealized—a victory in the Futurity.

The great jockey, who already has rounded up a small stable of his own, rode his last race at Belmont Park yesterday but saw the Futurity, worth $120,000 this year, go to High Strung with Pony McAtee in the saddle. Curate, Sande's mount in the classic for two-year-olds, found the pace entirely too hot and finished last.

Later in the day, Sande had the mount on Chance Shot in the Jockey club's gold cup and brought the J. E. Widener entry home in second place behind the great Reigh Count, undoubtedly the king of three year olds this season.

As Sande dismounted, he was called to his employer's box where Mr. Widener paid tribute to the faithful service Sande had given him.

"I want to congratulate you, Earl, and thank you too, for your manly and honorable connection with the turf as a jockey," said Mr. Widener. "You never have done anything to bring dishonor to a noble sport. It is my earnest wish and hope that you will have success in your new occupation as an owner and trainer and I feel sure that you will have it."

And the Saga of Sande, the jockey, was ended.

SENATORS HAMMER TIGER PITCHERS TO WIN, 11 TO 7

DETROIT, Sept. 16—(AP)—Washington hammered three Tiger pitchers for 15 hits and took the second game of the series 11 to 7 here today. Goose Goslin, leading batter of the American league, slammed a home run into the right field bleachers in the sixth with Sam Rice on base. It was the only hit Goslin made and his average shrunk slightly. Sam Jones went the full distance in the box for Washington and registered his 13th victory of the season.

TAFTVILLE A. A. DOWNS HOUSE OF DAVID

With the largest turnout of the season, a turn-out of curious people along with the real ball fans, Taftville gave the famed House of David outfit a trimming Saturday afternoon, 5-3. The be-whiskered Barnstormers wanted the game too, to make a record of four straight for the season. They have been able to win three in succession, but have fallen down on the fourth game all season, and Saturday's game was the first loss in four.

The fans were lined two and three deep to witness the spectacle, and not only witnessed a very good game but had a lot of fun laughing at the Nick Altrock stunts of the visitor's first baseman, Cot Kennedy. His facetious remarks, the playing of his banjo amongst the crowd with his extemporanious verses, and the banner trick of fishing, falling overboard and swimming, had the crowd in an uproar. To add to that he batted first and ran to third and was quite peeved that he should be called out. With all his fooling he was a good ball player.

The team itself, played rather loosly at times and their errors was instrumental in Taftville's tying the score in the third, after the David's had taken the lead in the second with two runs. Smith their first man up in the second singled. Julin drove out a double and Reid doubled to score Smith and Julin. Reid went out at home trying to beat out a sacrifice to Dugas.

Taftville came back in their half and Dabrowski the first man up doubled and scored on Joe Faber's hit. Faber came home on a wild throw. Janesko tightened up and allowed only two hits until the eighth when Eccleston singled, went to second on Jarvis's base on balls and went home on a wild throw by the David's catcher. Jarvis went to third and came home on Bob Christy's double.

The House of David scored one more run in the fifth when Menzie walked, went to second on Kennedy's hit and came home on Smith's bingle. From then on Dugas held them hitless.

Janesko with his ability to change his place, pitched a good game and kept Taftville's hits down pretty well. Lamory was the only Taftville lad who seemed able to connect over once safely, and he garnered three out of four. Harry Mills played a while of a game at first grabbing off several hard ones.

All in all it was a pleasant afternoon, the fans were well repayed for their investment. A good game and a lot of fun finished the season for Taftville with the exception of the bloody series with J. B. Martin. The score:

YANKEES RETAIN LEAD BY BEATING BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The New York Yankees kept a tight clutch on their half game lead over the Athletics in the American league by defeating the St. Louis Browns here today, 7 to 5.

The Yankees started their scoring in the first inning when Combs tripled to center. Blaeholder tossed out Koenig Combs holding third. Gehrig was struck out and Ruth walked. Combs scored and Ruth reached second on a double steal.

The league leaders again blossomed out in the second inning when they garnered three runs on five singles. Robertson singled to right field and Bengough followed with another sin-Blaeholder's glove and the bases were gle. Johnson bounced his single off filled. Combs popped out the fourth single and scored Robertson and Bengough. The fifth single by Koenig scored Johnson.

The Browns recovered in the third when Ruth dropped Blue's line drive, the latter reaching second. Koenig threw out O'Rourke and Blue went to third. Manush and Schulte walked filling the bases. Blue scored when Koenig threw out Kress.

The fifth inning ended with home runs for both teams when Gehrig made his 24th circuit clout and Lu Blue of the Browns also hit to the bleachers.

Bengough of the Yankees singled in the sixth and was forced by Johnson who tried to sacrifice. Koenig hit into the right field pavilion for a home run scoring behind Johnson.

Brannon of the Browns rolled to Lazzeri and McGowan went to second when Lazzeri dropped his pop fly. Manion walked and Bettencourt batted for Blaeholder and walked, filling the bases. After pitching two balls to Blue, Johnson was relieved by Zachary. Blue lined out to Ruth and McGowan scored after the catch.

The Browns tried a comeback in the ninth when Blue reached second on Koenig's wild throw, with none out. Robertson threw out O'Rourke and Blue held second. He was abl to take third when Manush singled to left. A passed ball helped Manush to second and he scored on Kress' single to right field, giving the Browns two runs.

DUWELL CLUB SIGNS TWO AMATEUR TEAMS FOR 12-BOUT CARD FRIDAY

The outdoor amateur boxing season here will positively be brought to a close at the Duwell field Friday night when the local athletic organization presents its fourth and final card of the current season.

As a means of showing its appreciation of the splendid support lent them by the local following during the season the Duwells will wind up activities with the biggest and best amateur show ever presented in Eastern Conn.

According to information given out last night by Duwell officials a card of twelve bouts featuring two prominent New England teams will mark the winding up of outdoor boxing. The policy of the local organization in the past has been a card of ten bouts with one main attraction, but in view of the recent successes, made possible by the fans of Norwich and vicinity, the committee handling the bouts feels as if it owes the following one grand and glorious finale.

At the present time a five-man team from Springfield has been signed and withi nthe next day or two another prominent club from either Massachusetts or Rhode Island will be lined up. Just what city will provide the second team is not known as yet, but several places are being considered and a good attraction will surely be selected.

The team from Springfield is the same one that was supposed to show here two weeks ago but was scratched two days before the fight when it was found that the best boys were slated to appear elsewhere on the date that the team was scheduled to work Norwich. The handler of this team has assured the Duwells that his best boys will be available this week and that the following men will positively appear: Bobby Elliott, 118, Johnny Gauthier, 126, Ray Kelly, 135, Tony Murphy, 135 and Jimmy Scaldi, 147 pounds.

Followers of the amateur boxing game will recognize the above boys as scrappers who have been playing the prominent A. A. U. shows in the east with remarkable success. Each one is an experienced exponent of the art possessing an impressive record.

In addition to the two out of state teams, the final outdoor bill is expected to draw several new entries from eastern Conn. and western Rhode Island. The boys from Norwich, Westerly, Danielson, Jewett City and Taftville will also be given an opportunity to display their wares.

ALL GREENEVILLE TAKES OVER THAMES A. C., 4 to 2

In one of the hardest fought games of the Thames A. C. schedule the Thames club dropped a ten-inning game to the All-Greeneville club 4 to 2. Sunday afternoon at Hollyhock island. Both teams played brilliant ball with the breaks going to the All-Greeneville club. Nevins started in the box for the Greeneville team but weakened in the fifth and Couture took up the burden and held the Thames team safely. Koslowski went the distance for the Thames team. The Thames club scored once in the second and again in the third only to have the Greeneville team even the count in the sixth. From then on it was a pitching battle until the tenth when with Fitzgerald on base Artie McGowan hit a homer into left field scoring the runs that proved the winning margin. The Thames A. C. was managed by Johnny Crimmins owing to the absence of Manager Pop McGuire. The score:

GIANTS DROP HALF GAME WHEN BEATEN BY PIRATES

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—The Giants dropped half a game further behind the pace setting Cardinals today when Pittsburgh opened its final eastern invasion with a 1 to 0 victory over the clan McGraw while the Red Birds were idle. This reverse left the struggling Giants two full games out of first place, but leading the third-place Cubs by one and one-half contests.

The home team outhit the Pirates by 7 to 3, and threatened Young Fred Fussell often, but cuold get no runs. The Pirates were dangerous only in the third, when they scored, and in the ninth when they filled the bases on Jack Scott after two were out. The defeat was charged to Larry Benton, his seventh of the season, and it broke a run of nine straight Giant victories.

Benton's only two passes, combined with the only two hits the Pirates made proved the sorrel top's undoing in the third. Wright and Fussell singled and Adams walked filling all the bases with only one out, but things looked better for Benton when Lindstrom seized Lloyd Waner's drive and bounced the ball to Hogan, forcing Wright at the plate.

Benton then walked Paul Waner forcing Fussell home with run which eventually cost the Giants the game.

From that point to the ninth Benton retired the Pirates in order, but Jack Scott, entering the game after the star right hander had given way to a pinch batsman, found himself in trouble in the ninth. Lloyd Waner led off with an infield single to Cohen, and after Paul Waner and Traynor raised easy flies, Scott walked Grantham and hit Comorosky to fill the bases.

Against these two Pirate outbursts the Giants had many scoring chances, but the pinch bit always was lacking.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)— Twenty thousands fans saw two good pitching performances as the White Sox and the Boston Red Sox split a doubleheader today. Chicago took the opener, 7 to 1, and Boston copped the second, 2 to 0.

Alphonse Thomas limited the Red Sox to four scattered hits in the first game, while his mates bunched their seven hits together with seven bases on balls of MacInnes and five errors. In the nightcap, Harriss also hurted a four hit game and the White Sox never threatened. Gerber's single followed by Hofmann's triple brought in the first Boston run in the third inning of second game, and in the ninth inning. Myer tripled and was brought home by Willias's long sacrifice fly.

RETAIL TRADE WAS RETARDED LAST WEEK BY SERIOUS DAMAGE TO CROPS

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—Business developments during the past week were generally constructive, although unfavorable weather in certain sections caused some damage to crops and retarded retail trade. The steel and automotive industries led the advance, while coal, railroad equipment and textiles still lagged. Crop prospects remained far in advance of last year, and higher prices for meat animals offset the low prices for cereals.

While the warm weather caused a slackening of retail fall buying, it hastened the corn crop to maturity, thus lessening frost hazards. Rains caused considerable damage to crops, roads and bridges in the southeast, and retarded threshing and marketing of spring wheat in the northwest. The corn crop has also suffered somewhat, but still promises to be the largest since 1923.

Indications of better earnings by several corporations together with payments of a number of extra dividends and several developments in the consolidation movement for the reduction of overhead were influential in causing one of the greatest bull markets in history on the New York Stock exchange. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and E. M. Hert, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., were among industrial and financial leaders seeing good prospects for the coming months.

The United States Steel corporation reported an increase in unfilled orders in August of 53,000 tons, although production was unusually heavy for the month. General advances were reported in scrap prices and pig iron was definitely higher. Steel production continued at 80 per cent in the Chicago and from 80 to 85 per cent of capacity in the Pittsburgh area. Continued activity in the automotive industry was reflected by a new high record in Detroit employment figures for the sixth consecutive week. There was some talk of 1928 becoming a record year in the industry, although in other circles some slackening of activity was predicted for October.

In the petroleum industry, an advance of crude prices was reported in Pennsylvania, and Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, returned from a conference of international oil heads in Europe expressing optimism over the possibility of limiting production to the requirements of world consumption.

The cotton textile industry was unsettled by the sharp drop in cotton prices resulting from the government's increased crop estimate.

Cement production and shipments broke all monthly records in August reflecting the heavy construction in many sections. Another monthly record was broken, crude rubber consumption, stimulated by low prices. In recent weeks copper sales have been at high records, the domestic sales surpassing 100,000,000 pounds for week ended Wednesday.

Car loadings in the first week of September were slightly less than for the like week a year ago, but the crop movement, delayed by rains and the reluctance of farmers to sell cereals at the prevailing low prices, has been slow in getting under way. Wheat export to date has been very light, but it is significant that a good part of the world's excess is centered in North America.

Rates for loans on stock collateral remained high, although the supply for commercial purposes was generally ample, and a small gold shipment from Great Britain, together with a temporary increase in federal reserve holdings of government securities, caused widespread optimism. Business failures were greater than for either of the past two weeks, and about the same as the like week of last year. Bank clearings exceeded those of a year ago by about nine per cent, reflecting in part the activity of the stock market.

SUBMIT ONLY ONE BID FOR RUNNING NEW LONDON FERRY-BOAT TO GROTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 16—Bids on operating the ferryboat Mohican, which runs between this city and Groton, were as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth, Saturday, the date City Manager Holt set for opening them. Capt. George H. Crandall and Capt. D. J. Sheehan, present operators, were the only persons to submit an offer. Their bid was $6,000, the same as last year. The figures will be submitted to the city council at its next meeting, for acceptance or rejection.

QUINN DEFIES LAW, IS CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 16—John Quinn, a cripple, and for many years engaged in dispensing liquor, was arrested Saturday afternoon charged with violation of the prohibition law, selling at his place of business, corner of Potter and John streets. He was locked up in default of bail of $1,000 and will be in the police court tomorrow morning. Quinn, who has been in business at his present location about six months, has escaped arrest since then, although he was known to have been selling liquor, but he could not be detected in the conduct of his business. Saturday afternoon Patrolman Dennis Murphy was passing the building and heard loud conversation from its patrons. The officer entered the building and found three or four men, one of whom had a glass of hooch in front of him on the bar. The officer seized the booze and brought his evidence of violation of the law to police headquarters. Acting Sergeant August Ray and Patrolmen Murphy and Henry Hick went to the building where a search was made, but Quinn evidently had disposed of his supply of liquor after Murphy left for the police station with the glass of booze seized. However, Quinn was arrested as were the three patrons found there, the men being held as witnesses. Quinn has a long police court record for violation of the liquor law and has served sentences in jail and state prison for the offense. When sentenced in the superior court here to a year in jail for selling liquor, Quinn attempted suicide by slashing his throat with a knife. The wound inflicted was not serious and a few days afterwards he was taken to Wethersfield. Immediately upon his release, Quinn returned to New London and started in business again.

Steamer Shinnecock, plying between New London and Montauk Point, Greenport, in leaving her pier here Friday afternoon was disabled by faulty mechanism of the engine and was forced to return to her pier while repairs were made. With these completed the steamer resumed the trip, about two hours behind schedule.

Joseph Holcspl, United States Coast Guard academy, was arrested this afternoon by State Police Officer Peter Busch charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law, and will be in court Monday.

Charles Reeves, 31 Lower Boulevard, was in the police court Saturday morning charged with reckless driving and was fined $25 and costs. Reeves was arrested at 4 o'clock by Patrolmen Henry Sylvia and Louis Tooker charged with driving under the influence of liquor, but the complaint was amended to that of the less serious charge. Another driver charged with driving under the influence of liquor and arrested by Patrolman George Cockell was not presented in court, having been discharged without facing trial.

Two cases of intoxication were also presented. One, who was arrested on Atlantic street by Sergeant Samuel Hick, was given a sentence of 30 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended. The other escaped penalty by a suspension of judgment being entered. A member of the United States Coast Guard was also arrested charged with intoxication, but he was turned over to the shore patrol and taken to the state pier for military discipline.

Joseph Keenan, 144 Winthrop street, rode his bicycle to Bank street Friday night and left it beside the curb and while he attended a motion picture performance. When he returned the wheel was missing. He reported the theft to the police and later in the night Patrolman Henry Sylvia found the cycle on Montauk avenue.

Patrolman Edward Skoczylas has discovered a rear window of the Maytag Washing Machine store, Meridian street, opened, but in each instance the officer was able to secure the place. The management of the store has been requested to see to it that its employes secure the place when it is closed for the night.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel Saturday ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of John N. Leverone, 28 Tilley street and Frank A. Epes, 41 Lee avenue. Both licenses were suspended a week ago.

JOY RIDERS TAKE CARS, AT ONCE GET INTO TROUBLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 16—Frank Bitzak, 121 Bradley street, New Haven, was in New London Saturday night and drove to Harrison street to visit acquaintances. While he was in a house the thief entered the car, a Hudson sedan, and started to drive away. As the car was descending Rosemary street, one wheel collapsed, the accident causing neighbors to run out of their homes. The thief was seen to alight from the auto as it came to a stop by former Chief of the Fire Department Charles H. Rose, but he was unable to give a description of the fellow.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Richard Barthelmess' most ardent admirers have their desires granted this week at the Breed theatre, where this highly popular star's latest feature, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," opened auspiciously last evening.

The novel by John Fox, Jr., has been given intelligent treatment and has resulted in a beautiful and dramatic screen story. Barthelmess has never been more lovable, nor have his histrionic talents ever been shown to better advantage. There is a dreamy, boyish quality in his interpretation that touches a responsive chord in every breast.

Broadway Theatre

Every dad who has ever had writer's cramp from making out checks for his family's bills is going to get a big kick out of "Adam and Eva." Guy Bolton's celebrated homespun family comedy, being offered by Norwich's own Garrick players at the Broadway theatre September 17-18-19.

And everyone in the family is going to get many hearty laughs out of this wholesome, clean comedy of a rich and idle family which finds itself unexpectedly with a new father on—its hands.

There is no record about how Adam felt about Eve's bills for fig leaves and apples. But how James King felt about the big bills for his family's little frocks is no secret—and in "Adam and Eva" Charles Hylott, as the victim of his family's extravagance, shows many hard pressed "dada" one solution totheir problem.

The Garrick folks are dad's family. Irving Morrow is the Adam and Helene ene Wesley the Eva (of course there is an Eden). Dad's son-in-law who spends all his energy in thinking how to avoid work is played by Harold Preston, while Uncle Horace whocame for a week end and has remained ever since as a "guest" is handled by George Duigan. Pearl Young, Mary Bryant, Sally Wall, Peter Ferguson, Bob Stevens all work hard to give you good laughs.

As a tip—Bob Stevens advises Norwich dads to sneak off by themselves and see "Adam and Eva"—the plan may work with their family.

Palace Theatre

Since the essence of a good picture is facile intermingling of drama and comedy, geared to sympathetic characters, Corinne Griffith's first United Artists Picture, The Garden of Eden, which opened yesterday at the Palace theatre, might will be called a Tincture of Entertainment. It is a saturated solution of laughter and novel emotional climaxes, and it is just about what the doctor ordered!

The Garden of Eden takes its name from the gardens of the Hotel Eden, near Monte Carlo, not from the original playground of Biblical fame. But there is a clever parallel to the original Garden of Eden which bobs up during the unfolding of the tale—even to the apples and the snake. The snake, in this instance, is one Henri Giessing, admirably played by Lowell Sherman. Charles Ray had the difficult part of Richard Spanyi, opposite the star, and he plays it in a manner which should add to his host of admirers. Louise Dresser is effective in the part of the indigent but good-hearted Baroness, while the rest of the supporting cast is up to the high standard set by the principals. Miss Griffith herself has rarely given so superb a performance. It is a role eminently suited to her talents.

BOY'S LEG FRACTURED WHEN HE RUNS INTO CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 16—Clarence Beille, a ten year old boy living on Hill street, is in Backus hospital, as the result of running into an automobile about 8:30 Friday evening. He was hanging onto the tire on the rear of a machine driven by Adam Bojeske up East Main street. Other children were with him. They saw another machine approaching from the opposite direction, and told him. Instead of running to the side of the road, he ran directly into the machine, so quickly that Andrew McNicol, the driver did not even see him. Mr. McNicol was driving slowly, and stopped his machine within its own length. Picking up the boy, he carried him into Dr. G. H. Jennings' office and later to Backus hospital. The boy has a compound fracture of his leg and his nose was bruised. No blame was attached to Mr. McNicol.

PACHAUG GRANGE FAIR WHIRL OF SPORTS SATURDAY

Saturday afternoon there were some kind of sports all the time at Pachaug Grange fair, under the direction of William Bromley. Steffie Roberts won two potato races and a 100-yd dash. Josephine Ruszenas and Romco Pepin ran a 50-yd dash, Pepin winning in a very close finish. Mary and Evelyn LaFramboise won the girls three-legged race and Isadore Couture and Woodrow Wilson the boys' three-legged race. In the boys' race around the quarter mile track, Maurice Harrington came in first and Wazil Yakubowski second. In the same running race for girls, Evelyn LaFramboise was first and Julia Parent second. The boys ran the race in three minutes and the girls in two minutes. Edward Bernhardt of Jewett City collapsed on the track from overstrained heart; but recovered later in the afternoon, after the attendance of a physician.

One of the most laughable contests was climbing the greased pole. The contestants were Ralph Donovan, Charles Minta, Frank Zavestoski, Calvin Thompson, Morris Harrington, Supe Marion, Armand Richards, Mary LaFramboise, Grace Lockwood, Michael Toper and Isadore Couture. The last named finally made it, winning the dollar bill. The greased pig caused much scrambling among the hundreds of spectators. He was finally caught by Joseph Minsky. There were many beautiful floral forms. The bearers were Thomas Phalen, John D. Nolan, James Daley, Patrick Shea, James Malone and Luke Moore. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery in Greeneville, where Rev. Father DesSureault read the committal prayers. Undertaker George G. Grant had charge of the funeral arrangements.

FULL DOCKET FOR CITY COURT FOR ITS MONDAY MORNING SESSION

The Monday morning session of the city court promises to have a full docket as the result of 14 or 15 arrests made over Saturday night and Sunday, eight of which were for intoxication.

Several automobile cases are in the list, one being on the charge of operating while under the influence of liquor. This is Myles Burgess of Waterford, who was driving in the Greeneville section when his car skidded and smashed a wheel. Sergeant Mathew Delaney and Officer Wotjkiewicz who investigated the accident found the man under the influence of liquor and brought him to police headquarters. Leo Grabowsky, who parked his machine Saturday night on the restricted side of Franklin street was found to be without his operator's license so that he has two counts against him. A Providence man paid the usual $2 for violation of a traffic ordinance.

A West Side man who was around the Central Vermont depot late Saturday night is charged with refusing to obey an officer because he did not leave the place when ordered to do so by Officer Gwizdowski, and had words with the policeman.

Accused of peeking into a window of the house at No. 19 Lorenzo street, after midnight Saturday, Ralph Baker, 19, who claimed to live at the Norwich state hospital, was arrested about one o'clock Sunday morning on a technical charge of breach of the peace. In default of bonds he was locked up at police headquarters over Sunday and will be presented in the city court this (Monday) morning.

While in a rear room of the house, listening to a radio program, Walter Thoma, a member of the family occupying the house, saw a man looking through a window in the room. He and his brother, Reinhold Thoma, a supernumerary police officer, investigated and when they got out of the house saw Baker walking down the street. They started to follow him and, Baker, seeing that he was being followed, started to walk slower. While following Baker, they met a friend in a machine, and getting into the machine continued to follow Baker. A few minutes later they met Emil Brosofske, who was driving a machine. Explaining the situation to him, Mr. Brosofske drove towards Central avenue where he met a police officer informing him of the affair. Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officers Peter Vuono and John Quinn intercepted Baker between 10th and 11th streets and arrested him. He was wearing white knickers and had no hat. Baker claimed to the police that he had been to a dance at Hill Top Saturday night and was on his way back to the state hospital.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE DRAWS UP SEVEN PLANKS

The Connecticut League of Women Voters will present to all parties offering a state ticket this fall the following planks:

Law enforcement—Obedience to law is a fundamental requisite of orderly government, and only by enforcement of existing laws can the nation command the respect of its citizens. Obedience to the Constitution and the written law of the land is the duty of every man and woman in the United States. Therefore we favor an administration which will use to the fullest extent the power conferred upon it for the effective enforcement of prohibition.

Jury service for women—Inasmuch as women now exercise all the privileges and duties of citizenship, with the exception of jury duty, and as they are now in the court room for every other capacity, we believe that women should be made eligible for jury service on the same terms as men with suitable exemptions.

Women in industry—We believe that the conditions under which women are employed are necessarily a concern of the state and must be safeguarded in order to protect the vitality of the race.

We urge the adoption of a shorter working day for women in industrial and mercantile establishments, and adequate provision for the enforcement of labor laws.

Preventive methods in public welfare—We believe that in safeguarding the welfare of the state special attention should be given to constructive treatment of dependents, defectives and delinquents.

We therefore support the development of a comprehensive preventive program with increased appropriations for the state departments and institutions responsible for carrying out such a program of public welfare.

Taxation—We urge the creation of a tax commission to investigate the entire system of taxation in the state and especially to compare the relative weight of taxes upon the different forms of capital, and to report, with recommendations, to the legislature of 1931.

State efficiency—We urge continued effort to determine what consolidation of the executive departments of the state will secure greater economy and efficiency.

Education—We favor such re-distribution of state aid as shall secure more equitable opportunities of education for all children in Connecticut. We also urge as part of a constructive program of public welfare, state aid for special classes and increased support for the division of special education and standards.

LEFT CANTERBURY FARM TO HIS TWO DAUGHTERS

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 16—Settlement of the contest over the allowance of the will of Charles L. Rawson of Oxford and Canterbury, Conn., one of the few old fashioned country squires in this section, has been recorded at the Worcester county probate court. Counsel has agreed, after considerable delay, to the appointment of Walter A. Lovett, a town official of Oxford, as administrator with the will annexed. Mr. Rawson had named Attorney John M. Thayer, who is now engaged as defense counsel in the Lalone-Raymond murder trial at Willimantic, but the lawyer declined to serve. The widow, Mrs. Lucie A. Rawson, had sought to be appointed administratrix, but the petition was contested by some of the sons and daughters.

Mr. Rawson, according to the terms of the will, left his farm known as the Bennett Farm in Canterbury, Conn., to two daughters, Mrs. Mabel McDowell or McDonald, and Mrs. Lulu E. Fletcher, in equal shares. According to the will, the widow is left as much of the residue as she is entitled to under the statutes. The remainder is to be divided among the children.

Mabell G. McDonald, one of the daughters, has brought a suit for $5,000 in the Worcester county superior civil court against Mr. Rawson's widow, Lucie A. Rawson, and another daughter, Mrs. Florence R. Barnes. She seeks to recover money which she claims was expended for the care of the parents.

NORWICH IN AREA OF GYPSY MOTH QUARANTINE

Under a revision of the gypsy moth and brown-tail moth quarantine announced by the plant quarantine and control administration, United States department of agriculture, that part of the quarantine dealing with the gypsy moth is modified so that the area designated as "generally infested" with this insect is being enlarged to include 50 towns of Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut heretofore designated as "lightly infested."

The revised quarantine becomes effective Oct. 1 and copies are now available for distribution.

The Vermont area affected by this change, totaling 245.66 square miles, includes the towns of Springfield, Rockingham, Westminster, Putney, Dummerston, Brattleboro and Gunford. The area in Massachusetts, amounting to 359.24 square miles, comprises the towns of Buckland, Ashfield, Goshen, Chesterfield, Williamsburg, Conway, gomery, Russell, Blandford and Granville, Westhampton, Southampton, Montville.

In Connecticut there are thus transferred to the generally infested area 976.44 square miles, including the towns of Suffield, East Granby, Granby, Hartland, Barkhamstead, Canton, Simsbury, Bloomfield, Windsor Locks, Windsor, Hartford, Wethersfield, Glastonbury, Colchester, Hebron, Andover, Columbia, Lebanon, Franklin, Bozrah, New London, Groton, Ledyard, Preston, Norwich, Sprague, Lisbon, Griswold, Voluntown, North Stonington and Stonington.

The revision also includes a modification of the regulation governing the interstate movement of Christmas trees and greens. The shipment of these articles will, in the future, be authorized under inspection and certification when they have originated in the lightly infested area and are transported into the generally infested area for shipment to points outside the territory under regulation.

AMERICAN LEGION HELD DISTRICT MEET AT MYSTIC

The monthly meeting of the Fifth district American Legion, held Friday night with Richard William Morgan post, No. 55, at Mystic, was one of the largest attended gatherings since the inception of the district gatherings. State Commander Earl Richards of West Haven was the guest of honor and he praised the gathering for the fine spirit of comradeship and for the interest in Legion matters that they were showing.

Several matters were brought up before the meeting for discussion but action was deferred until a later date.

Following the business session a buffet lunch was served in Grange hall, after which everyone journeyed to Willow Point Casino, where the Mystic post and auxiliary conducted a bazar and dance. All enjoyed a fine time until midnight. In addition to the posts and units of New London, Groton, Lyme, Norwich, Jewett City, Baltic, Colchester, Niantic, Stonington and Mystic, visitors were present from Moosup and Naugatuck.

WITHDRAWAL FROM COURT IN MORGAN'S APPEAL

The supreme court appeal taken from the judgment of the superior court which gave the city of New London $2,470 for back taxes against the estate of Elias F. Morgan, was withdrawn Saturday by Attorney George Curtis Morgan, according to papers filed with Clerk John H. Walker.

This withdrawal is in accordance with the agreement between Attorney George Curtis Morgan, as counsel for the estate of the heirs, and the city, when at the more recent trial of the case of Mrs. Annie R. Morgan against the city, the latter was given judgment against the city for more than $2,000 and it was stipulated that the appeal from the superior court decision in the city's case should be withdrawn.

The appeal was in the case in which the Morgan estate owed back taxes, the latter case was one in which Mrs. Morgan sued for breach of contract on the part of the city in cutting a proper road in Ashcraft road, after she had deeded property with that understanding to the city.

SEDAN AND TRUCK IN WILLIMANTIC ROAD COLLISION

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 16—A Dodge sedan operated by Ex-Congressman Edwin H. Higgins of 130 Union street, Norwich, and owned by his wife, Alice M. Higgins of the same address, figured in a collision with a Reo truck driven by William E. Bicknell of 50 Meadow street, this city, and owned by Ben Klashen of R. F. D. No. 1, Willimantic, at the intersection of the Windham Center-Willimantic highway with the North Windham back road at 6.30 o'clock Saturday evening. The Norwich man was turning out of the North Windham road to proceed south to Windham Center and the truck approached the intersection in a northerly direction. The Norwich car was to the left of the highway, it is claimed, and the truck was driven onto the grass to avoid a collision. The left sides of both cars were damaged, each driver claiming damages of $100. An agreement to settle through insurances was made. Officer William Hurley of the local police investigated the accident.

PREPARING FOR MISSION IN ST. PATRICK'S PARISH

Efforts of priests and people of St. Patrick's parish are bent toward making a success of the mission, which is to begin Sunday, Sept. 30, and continue until Sunday, Oct. 14. As was stated by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, addressing the large congregation at the 7:30 mass Sunday, all need spiritual regeneration. Many in the parish have grown lax and indifferent. As the preacher reminded his hearers, while it is the supreme duty of each to save his own soul, each is bound, also, to help Jesus Christ by helping save the souls of others. This latter object can be accomplished by speaking to those neighbors and friends who have in carelessness fallen away from the practice of their religion, explaining that the mission is to be held. There is always the consideration that for many, a mission may be the last call to repentance.

Monsignor May stated that each individual could have a personal part also by co-operating with the Passionist Fathers who are coming to preach during the allotted fortnight and who labor with two great ends in view—first, to help their listeners to gain salvation; second, because the offering made during the mission goes to the preachers to enable them to carry on their life-work of educating young men in their seminaries and colleges that they, also, may continue mission work in home and foreign fields. The prayers of all for the two weeks' success were earnestly besought by the preacher.

It was stated that on the opening Sunday, Sept. 30, all masses and parish activities will start on standard time.

Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of this week are Ember days, fasting days for those obliged to fast and days of abstinence from meat for all within the prescribed ages.

The Holy Name society will receive communion in a body at the 7:30 mass next Sunday. This society has requested a memorial mass this (Monday) morning for Michael A. Clifford.

Relatives have requested a month's mind mass Thursday for Mrs. Margaret Connelly

The offering at the four services of the day Sunday was for the new St. Thomas seminary, Hartford, where young men are educated for the holy priesthood, and for which a special appeal was made in the current Catholic Transcript by the auxiliary bishop, Rt. Rev. Maurice F. McAuliffe. The original seminary was founded when the late Bishop Tierney purchased the old Chinese college on Collins street, Hartford. In a few years expansion was necessary, the present seminary was erected and there the priests of the diocese have received their training for 27 years. Now Bishop Nilan has planned a beautiful Gothic structure to rise at the foothills of the Talcott mountains and to cost $2,000,000, to continue the work of the ministry.

MAN AND WIFE HURT IN UNCASVILLE CRASH

A Ford coupe driven by William Walsh, 19, of Uncasville, who was accompanied by his wife Edna, 18, was demolished and both occupants sustained severe injuries consisting of cuts and bruises, when it was struck by a Cadillac machine said to be owned in Yantic. The crash occurred opposite the trolley switch at Uncasville as Mr. Walsh was making a left turn as he and his wife were to make a call at a house opposite the switch.

The Cadillac was proceeding from Norwich to New London when it struck the other car and turned over. It was stated Sunday night at the state police barracks at Groton that an arrest was made in the case, but it was not known who was arrested nor whose machine the Cadillac was as the officer having these records was not on duty Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were attended by Dr. John J. Donohue of Uncasville. Mrs. Walsh had a long scalp wound which required six stitches and also had cuts on her face, while Mr. Walsh received a number of cuts on the face.

Verdict of Woman Who Tried Pinkham's Compound

Tully, N. Y.—"It hurt me to walk or sit down without help and I felt

The medicines that will do for me what the Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done are certainly worth their weight in gold. Talks on Electric Service

THREE-CENT ELECTRICITY AVAILABLE TO ALL CUSTOMERS

The present electric rate is 10 cents per kilowatt-hour for almost all of the residence customers.

The new rate consists of an energy charge of 3 cents a kilowatt hour, the rest of the revenue of the Department being obtained by means of a charge for the first five kilowatt-hours of $1.35 and upward, depending upon the number of rooms in the home of the customer.

Energy at only 3 cents a kilowatt-hour is available to all customers for additional uses, such as lighting, toasters, percolators, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, radios, refrigerators, ranges, water heaters and other appliances. This additional electricity, sold to the same customers through the same lines, meters and services, will add little to the overhead cost and so will not cost as much per kilowatt hour as the present supply.

As previously stated, the Department cannot prosper unless the new rate proves satisfactory to the customers and sales increase.

New and attractive rates are also being offered for power services. The stimulation of wholesale sales tends to lower our unit costs and therefore will tend toward lower future rates to all customers.

OLD RATE

10c per Kilowatt hour.

NEW RATE

3c per Kilowatt hour, plus the initial charge.

Board of Gas & Electrical Commissioners.

STORM WROUGHT HAVOC IN FLORIDA; PORTO RICO PICTURE OF ECONOMIC RUIN

In Florida There is General Devastation From Pompano to the Palm Beaches.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 17—(AP)—First fragmentary reports indicated tonight that Palm Beach and its vicinity had been dealt destruction assuming the proportions of a disaster by the tropical hurricane that smote the lower Florida east coast late yesterday.

Possible loss of life, injury to many persons, scores rendered homeless and tremendous property damage were reported by unconfirmed radio advices which brought the only direct word from the storm-swept area.

West Palm Beach, across Lake Worth from the exclusive winter resort, was believed to have been the hardest hit on the basis of these advices. Only one store on the chief business thoroughfare was said to have escaped serious damage. Military control was reported to have been established to prevent looting while the injured and homeless were crowded into temporary hospitals and shelter.

Situated on an island off the coast, Palm Beach proper was completely cut off from its sister city, according to the reports and the extent of the damage wrought and possible casualties there were not known. In a radio dispatch to the Associated Press from Miami, Hal Leyshon, news editor of the Miami Daily News, however, said there was general desolation from Pompano to the Palm Beaches, a distance of some 25 miles.

He said hundreds of refugees were housed in the Harvey House at West Palm Beach, where the full force of the hurricane struck at 5:30 p. m. yesterday at an estimated maximum wind velocity of 125 miles per hour. Coast guardsmen were summoned from Fort Lauderdale, which itself was believed to have felt the effect of the blow, to police the district.

Leyshon's message said that West Palm Beach police had received no notice of any fatalities, despite persistent reports of deaths in that vicinity. From Tampa, however, came a wireless dispatch from amateur station 4AFC that said two persons were killed at West Palm Beach while Key West naval station advices to Washington also reported two persons dead at Fort Lauderdale and unconfirmed advices that there had been greater loss of life.

The Key West station also intercepted a radio message late today from the naval radio station at Jupiter which reported considerable damage there. The docks at Jupiter were reported badly damaged and a large radio tower was blown to the ground while the weather bureau's quarters were demolished.

A call for doctors and financial assistance broadcast from station 4AFC and intercepted here was issued by Howard Shelby, chairman of the Palm Beach Red Cross chapter, who declared that loss of life at the time the message was sent was undetermined but that a careful survey led to the belief that the effects of the storm may surpass the Miami disaster of 1926.

Two telephone company workers who were the first to make their way out of the stricken Palm Beach sector reported on their arrival at Daytona Beach appalling conditions in the storm area. The men, an inspector, and J. P. Mason, lineman, said that hardly a place of business or residence escaped the hurricane's fury; that hundreds of persons with injuries had been quartered in the telephone office and hotels and that hotel guests were sleeping on cots in halls.

Members of an American Legion expedition who penetrated the affected district last night, today returned with an appeal for doctors, nurses and ambulances for West Palm Beach, Delray and Boynton, the latter two towns being a few miles south of the Palm Beaches. They reported an elderly white woman and five Negroes killed at Delray, which with Boynton, they believed felt the full force of the blow. At both places, Capt. Thomas J. Kelly, Lieut. Al Thomas and Max Myerson, estimated 90 per cent of the buildings were damaged, a large percentage seriously.

Storm damage also had reduced greatly the efficiency of the West Palm Beach hospital, they reported.

The food problem there was reported as serious.

Navy department advices from Washington said that Secretary Wilbur had offered the navy's co-operation to the storm-swept cities.

Meanwhile, the center of the hurricane last was reported moving across the state in a northwestward course toward the Gulf, with hurricane warnings flying south of Jacksonville to below Tituaville and on the west coast north of Cedar Keys to Apalachicola. Reports from central Florida and along the west coast, however, recorded little if any damage.

Miami, scene of a disastrous hurricane two years ago, experienced high winds but escaped damage.

DEATH LIST MOUNTS IN THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Sept. 17—(AP)—The hurricane death list in the Leeward islands mounted tonight as reports trickled in from the small spits of land devastated by the storm. Nevis island reported 13 dead and St. Kitts 6, in addition to the 25 dead and 40 injured earlier reported from Montserrat.

Antigua suffered no loss of life, so far as known, although the country districts still are isolated. Many large buildings were seriously damaged, while hundreds of small homes of the poor were wiped out. This island rushed medical stores, food and clothing to Monserrat where conditions were reported as very bad.

Dominica was another island to report no loss of life although communications were not yet restored with the country districts. Its seafront was heavily damaged. On St. Kitts the property damage at Basse Terre alone was estimated at $500,000.

The sea did more damage on St. Thomas than the wind. The waterfront with the newly constructed breakwater was destroyed. The navy yard suffered heavily. Many barges sank and warehouses containing precious supplies were laid in ruins.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS FOR RELIEF WORK IN ZONE SWEPT BY HURRICANE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—(AP)—An appeal to the American people to contribute "promptly and most generously" to the Red Cross fund for the relief of the Porto Rico and Virgin Islands sufferers, was issued today by President Coolidge.

"An overwhelming disaster has overtaken our fellow citizens in Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands as the result of a devastating West Indian hurricane," President Coolidge's appeal said. "Full extent of the damage is not available but several hundred thousand are known to be homeless and to be in instant need of food, shelter and emergency relief. Gov. Towner of Porto Rico has appealed for immediate aid.

"All possible assistance will be rendered by the executive departments of the government, but because of the widespread suffering which call for not only emergency aid, but some form of permanent rehabilitation, I have asked the American Red Cross to assume the task of rendering aid, acting as the agent of the American people.

"As president of the United States and as president of the American Red Cross, I therefore am urging our people to contribute promptly and most generously so that sufficient funds may be received to alleviate the suffering among so many thousands.

"All contributions should be forwarded to the nearest local Red Cross chapter, or to the American National Red Cross headquarters office at Washington, St. Louis or San Francisco."

SUMMARY OF REPORTS OF STORM RECEIVED FROM FLORIDA AND THE BAHAMAS

(By the Associated Press)

Reports of destruction in life and property mount in hurricane's wake along lower Florida east coast.

Unconfirmed radio advices say ten known dead and possible greater loss of life; scores injured, many homeless.

West Palm beach, largest city in affected area, believed to have born the brunt of the storm, with business district badly battered and town under military rule. Food problems here described as serious and appeals made for doctors, nurses and supplies.

Local newspapermen and Red Cross officials say city harder hit than Miami in 1926. Hundreds of refugees reported huddled in temporary quarters.

Public service facilities and power lines disrupted over area extending 100 miles as far south as Fort Lauderdale and as far north as Fort Pierce. Trains in storm sector unreported.

First reports from Bahamas by radio through Miami and New Orleans said no fatalities at Nassau the Colonial capital, but severe property damage.

New hurricane warnings ordered by weather bureau in Jacksonville section and northeast storm warnings north of Savannah to Georgetown, S. C., with northeast storm warnings continued west of Appalachicola, Fla. hurricane center at 9 p. m. and about 75 miles north of Tampa, moving northwestward.

The death toll in the Lesser Antilles was reported as follows: Monserrat (British) 25; St. Croix (American) 6; Martinique (French) 3.

Later reports said that thirteen were killed on Nevis island and six on St. Kitts, both British possessions.

DEATH TOLL WILL REACH 235 AT GUADELOUPE

PARIS, Sept. 17—(AP)—Guadeloupe, French West Indian island struck dumb by the hurricane last Thursday, emerged today from its isolation with reports of deaths and damage that proportionately, place it at the head of places devastated by the storm.

Its governor reported tonight to the minister of colonies that 235 bodies had already been recovered and that the toll would reach 300. He had just reached Pointe a Pitre, the chief town of Guadeloupe, and reported that city had been devastated with its suburbs completely wiped out. Since Pointe a Pitre contains nearly one fifth of the total population of 230,000 of the island, it was feared that when its wreckage is completely cleared away, the death list will again be sent skyrocketing.

There was no part of Guadeloupe, or of its small islets dependencies which escaped the fury of the wind. Bourg was completely levelled by a tidal wave which trapped many of the residents.

On the nearby island of Marie Galante almost all houses had collapsed with resulting toll of human lives. The island of Desirade reported similar damages.

A Serious Shortage of Foodstuffs is Reported From the Interior of Porto Rico.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 17—(AP)—Before the tropical hurricane struck Porto Rico four days ago, the economic situation was bad. The island now presents a picture of physical and economic ruin and badly shaken morale as a result of the twelve hour storm of an intensity and duration unparalleled here in modern times.

The insular and municipal government were in debt up to or beyond their legal limits and ability to pay readily. Sugar, tobacco and coffee farmers were in like or worse conditions and San Juan importers were loaded with the paper of retailers in the interior.

Collections were difficult and slow but they had shown some improvement in recent weeks at the beginning of the harvest of a tremendous coffee crop of fine quality. There was hope too for sale in December of the remaining tobacco stocks. Only the fruit and dairy farmers and the needle industries were fairly prosperous.

The storm is known to have caused great destruction in the eastern section of the island and two-thirds of the central portion. Authentic information has been received from the west, but the indications are that the damage was less there than elsewhere.

According to dependable information there has been incalculable damage to crops, livestock and buildings in the northern and central regions as far as humacao. It is safe to say that the coffee crop was largely lost and the trees severely injured. Citrus fruit trees were stripped of their fruit and foliage. The younger trees generally escaped other serious injuries but many of the older ones were broken off or uprooted.

The few canning plants which escaped destruction, are unable to handle the fallen fruit. They operate by electric current and that has been cut off. Mountain oranges, cocoanuts, bananas plantations maize and other minor crops important in the subsistance of the people will not be available for months.

Root crops were probably less hurt than others. The damage to sugar cane is probably not great as recent plantings were too small to fall and while the taller cane was blown flat it will "knee up" and produce a crop.

A traveler arriving from Humacao said that several sugar mills were flattened and authentic information stated that several towns in the central region showed only a few houses standing. One large farmer from Ciales reported that his stock buildings, including tobacco and dairy barns, fruit sheds and tenant cottages had all been destroyed. This region also reported large losses in dairy and other livestock which was drowned in overflowing streams.

Complete information as to losses of tobacco in storage is not available. It is known, however, that these losses were large. Lumber stocks are still apparently adequate, but roofing material has already been exhausted and prices are soaring.

A serious shortage of foodstuffs has been reported from the interior. Information is not yet available as to the extent of food destroyed in collapsed or unroofed warehouses. Retailers are showing some disposition to profiteer, especially in coffee which jumped overnight from 45 to 60 cents or more a pound.

A pressing need exists for an incalculable amount of construction materials, furniture, clothing and other equipment to replace losses to the government, industries and people. But the ability to buy and pay for these remains ungauged.

Such disasters generally uncover unsuspected resources. To what extent this will be true of Porto Rico remains to be seen. It is, however, safe to say that much of the damage will not be paralleled for years because of lack of means to do it earlier.

The general situation is complicated by the state of the public finances. The loss of crops and the crippling of commercial and industrial effort will cause a decline in tax revenues and force a curtailment in government activities. The necessary repairs to roads, bridges, hospitals and schools will so burden the governments that they will not be able to extend more than temporary relief to individual sufferers.

So far there has been no organized relief work. The local Red Cross is reported as without funds and unable to cope with the situation.

Friday morning found San Juan largely unroofed and water-soaked. Now, after three days of tropical sun without water or garbage removal, the city offers sights and smells reminiscent of the walled city of Shanghai.

Some relief will come from hurricane insurance on crops and buildings. It is impossible to estimate any accurate amount but I have a dependable report from one source that this insurance amounts to about $7,000,000 on the coffee crop. This was placed mostly with British companies and is held by the larger and more progressive growers.

The only other sources of immediate income now visible are the needle industry and the possible remittances to their families from Porto Ricans who are resident on the mainland.

London, Ont, Brewer Has Been Kidnaped

Was Abducted in Detroit and Was Released Upon Promise to Pay $35,000.

DETROIT, Sept. 17—(AP)—Samuel J. Low, president of the Carling Brewing company, London, Ont., one of the largest exporting concerns in the dominion, was kidnaped here and held for $35,000 ransom, it became known today coincident with an unsuccessful attempt by local police to trap the extortioners.

The ruse failed when a taxicab driver who had accepted a dummy package given as the ransom was lost in traffic by two Detroit detectives assigned to the case.

Low was kidnaped on September 8, police said and held until last Sunday when he was released in Windsor, Ont., after promising his captors to obtain and turn over to them the $35,000. According to police Low was held in a lonely cottage somewhere in the vicinity of Thamesville, Ont. He was kept blindfolded and shackled to a bed.

Low was instructed to register at a Detroit hotel and to await instructions as to how to dispose of the money. He conferred with his attorney, Major J. H. Clark of Windsor, and it was agreed that the money would not be paid but an attempt be made to capture the kidnapers. Another man was obtained to register at the hotel designated, under Low's name and the telephone wire to the room was tapped. The man was told to hand the money to a taxi driver who would receive it in the lobby.

After receiving the package the driver jumped into his car and disappeared so quickly in the heavy traffic that the officers lost him.

The kidnapers, police believe, are members of the same band that has been preying on liquor dealers and gamblers of the Detroit area over a long period. Their operations have come to the attention of police scores of times but few of their victims have been willing to assist police in an investigation.

AMERICAN RED CROSS EXPEDITES RELIEF WORK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—(AP)—The American Red Cross turned its attention to storm-swept Florida and its refugees today after dispatching nearly 2,000 tons of food and 1,500 tons of tents and blankets to Porto Rico where the extent of suffering from last week's West Indian hurricane increased with every report.

Late today, President Coolidge issued an appeal to the American people to contribute "promptly and most generously" to the Red Cross fund for the relief of Porto Rico and Virgin Islands. He characterized the hurricane devastation as "an overwhelming disaster" in those Islands and pledged "all possible assistance" of the government. The Red Cross, he added, would assume the task of rendering aid "acting as the agent of the American people."

Miss Elizabeth G. Fox, chief of Red Cross nurses and an assistant enlisted for Jacksonville, Fla., tonight to direct a staff of six workers from national headquarters who left here yesterday in anticipation of disaster there.

While Florida chapters received orders to marshal their relief facilities and rush them to danger points as the need arose, other chapters throughout the country responded to the appeal for funds. Several chapters sent money from their operating funds and immediately broadcast the urgent need for more.

President Coolidge took personal charge of the organization's program upon arrival at his office, and directed the army and navy to extend all possible assistance. He ordered army transports, loaded with foods, diverted from their destination, the Canal Zone, to San Juan, Porto Rico.

These ships, the St. Mihiel and the Kenoyis, carried the major share of foodstuffs to be distributed by Henry M. Baker, national relief disaster director and his four assistants who left for the island Saturday aboard a navy destroyer.

Member organizations of the chamber of commerce of the United States were asked by President William Butterworth to give all possible assistance to the Red Cross in raising funds. He said the probable need would be "millions."

FOG PREVENTS HOP-OFF OF THE ROMA FOR ROME

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Sept. 17—(AP)—Postponing their proposed take-off for Rome because of a heavy fog here this morning, the crew of the Roma spent the day in a final check-up of their plane and its instruments. A clogged fuel line was repaired today and the plane brought from Scarborough field to the Hazzard hangar on the beach here.

Cesare Sabelli, flight commander, said tonight that the plane would be fuelled in the morning and would take off before noon providing the fog permitted. A wreath of flowers will be dropped in mid-Atlantic, he said, in memory of Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Mirror, who met death when the Old Glory plane was lost in an attempt to make the eastward passage.

Calvin Proctor Boston, who has been host to the aviators at his summer home at Grand beach, today presented them a silver cord as a good luck token. Roger Q. Williams, co-pilot, said to newspapermen as he fastened the charm on the Roma's cowl, "I hope I will take this off in Rome."

Frank Stashak, a mechanic, has recommended that the propeller be replaced by a new one. He says that the propeller is one eighth of an inch out of true and that the strain and vibration of the long flight might cause it to spring still further out of line. Sabelli, however, will not permit the delay. He contends that all propellers are out of true to some extent and claims that the Roma's is in good condition.

BRIDGEPORT HOTEL REMAINS PADLOCKED

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The Lincoln hotel, at 79-81 Gold street, remained padlocked today, when counsel for the owners of the building failed to file with the superior court a $1,000 bond required by the court as assurance that the premises would not be used for the sale, storage, manufacture or trade of intoxicating liquors for one year.

On September 14, Judge Edwin C. Dickenson of the superior court granted the request of State's Attorney William H. Comley that the padlock be enforced. The action was decided upon the question as to whether or not the fact that owners of the building, Samuel Silver, Louis and Charles Levin, of this city, did not know of the conditions existing at the hotel precluded the court from granting the injunction.

The hotel was the scene of a sensational raid on August 25, when squads of state police, acting upon information in the hands of the state's attorney descended upon it and arrested several frequenters and the alleged proprietor, Samuel Lavit of this city and three employes.

Bennett and Faries were arraigned before Judge Edwin O. Lewis and admitted to bail for a hearing next Wednesday. The accusation against the three detectives is that they took $1500 from Barney McNicol, who the district attorney's office says, admits he is a bootlegger.

HOOVER'S LABOR VIEWS MET WITH ACCLAIM IN NEWARK

Republican Presidential Nominee Received a Great Demonstration—Burst of Applause Swept the Hall as Mr. Hoover Said Government Aid For Labor is Necessary Until There is a Full Time Job For Every Man Who Will Work—Criticised Democratic Position on Tariff and Immigration.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 17—(AP)—Receiving the greatest demonstration he has witnessed since he was chosen to bear the presidential standard of the republican party, Herbert Hoover tonight delivered the first stroke of his campaign to win the east.

Speaking here after an automobile tour through a dozen or more smaller towns in the vicinity the republican nominee described the tariff and immigration stands of the democrats as serious threats to the program of labor or a full time job for every man.

A throng of people that occupied every available inch of space had jammed itself into the 113th Regiment armory to hear the nominee. As he arose to begin his speech, expanding his labor views, a wild burst of applause swept through the hall. The cheering continued for several minutes.

The position of the democrats on tariff and immigration, he said in his address, might constitute a barrier to the onward sweep of the progress which he said had been made during the last seven and a half years.

Although, he said, labor through collective bargaining may improve working conditions and wages, government aid is necessary if the country's works are to be so operated that a full time job will exist for every man who will work.

He described the activities of the republican administration toward leading America out of the unemployment bog into which the country had fallen in 1921, adding, however, that there still were two industries, coal and textile, which had not yet climbed over the top. He pledged himself to carry forward diligently the task of aiding them "to their full recovery by every assistant the government can afford." A burst of applause greeted his tariff pronouncement and as he proceeded, the candidate interpolated into his prepared speech the declaration that "what I and the republican party want is a tariff that will protect American labor."

FIVE FROM NORWICH IN STORRS FRESHMAN CLASS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Sept. 17—Five students of Norwich are included in the list of 157 young men and women enrolled to date in the freshman class of Connecticut Agricultural college this Thursday when all new students will be requested to register. The number is small in comparison with other freshman classes but due to the increasing number of returning upperclassmen and because the enrollment of the state college is limited to five hundred by an act of the general assembly, it has been necessary for Registrar David L. Greene to be very keen in the selection of new students, thus turning back a large number.

The Norwich students are John H. R. Bell, Carl Chafits, Harold D. Disco, Delmas C. Hinrichs, and Mary Peckham. Friday will be devoted to examinations for freshmen to determine the class rating and in the evening they will be under the control of the sophomore class who will entertain the new men students with various forms of traditional ceremony. The annual pajama parade for the male students will be staged which will wind its way all over the campus to end at doorsteps of the women's dormitory where entertainment will be offered by the freshmen.

On Sunday the entire freshman class will be entertained in groups at the homes of various faculty members where they will be given an opportunity to meet the teachers with whom they are to deal during the four years at Storrs.

RULING MAY HANDICAP SHIPPING AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The port of New York will lose shipping and the city will be handicapped in handling freight for the southwest, unless the recent date order of the interstate commerce commission in the Consolidated Southwestern cases is rescinded, representatives of the commission were told today.

William Simmons, traffic manager of the Morgan Steamship Line, was the principal witness today, testifying on behalf of all the gulf steamship lines, he introduced exhibits in support of his contention that these lines are losing business to other lines not regulated and not obliged to publish rates.

H. P. Wilmer, general freight agent of the Merchants and Miners Transportation company of Boston, testified that he approved the reports of the commission fixing the rates in question, but that he believed specific rates should be fixed for freight shipments out of Boston and Providence on the same basis as for those out of New York.

JUDGE DECLINES TO IMPOSE DEATH SENTENCE

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Sept. 17.—(AP)—Judge R. D. Bailey of the Mingo-Wyoming county circuit court who was recently ordered by the state supreme court to impose the death sentence upon Clyde Beale, a convicted slayer, in accordance with the verdict of a jury, today was quoted as saying he would resign rather than carry out the order of the higher court.

The judge, who has said he believed Beale not guilty, declared he would "commit a judicial murde by having the blood of an innocent man on my hands through imposing a death sentence."

Judge Bailey, in leading the case before the supreme court, said he was convinced Beale was convicted upon perjured testimony.

Beale was sentenced to life imprisonment by the judge and the supreme court ordered that sentence fe reimposed.

GREETING FOR SMITH AT CLEVELAND AND TOLEDO

GOVERNOR SMITH'S TRAIN, Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 17—(AP)—Governor Smith hopes to convince the voters of the agricultural west that the democratic platform on which he stands is sound, constructive, and that the declarations of his republican opponent on public questions of the day are weak and evasive.

When the crowd clustered around the rear of his train at Cleveland, four women, one of them gray haired, kept chanting "We Need Al to Succeed Cal," and attempted to sing "Put On Your New Brown Derby" to the tune of "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet."

Smith stood bare headed on the observation platform, but at Toledo, he had his derby in hand, and finally put it on.

At both Cleveland and Toledo, Smith held to his determination not to make rear platform talks. He shook hands with those who pressed near him, and kept up a running fire of exchanges but all in a conversation tone.

At Toledo those who gathered near him refrained from cheering, but broke into applause when the nominee appeared on the platform. Later they applauded again when Mrs. Smith appeared, and broke into laughter when the governor, looking around, remarked, "Oh, I thought that was for me."

At Elkhart, the first stop in Indiana, there was cheering and applause until the democratic nominee, smiling and holding aloft his derby, showed himself. One of the first things that caught his eye were banners which assured him that both "St. Joe and Elkhart counties are "All for Al."

SHANTUNG PROVINCE TROOPS BEING DISARMED

TIENTSIN, China, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Foreign military advices today were to the effect that Shantung province troops were being disarmed by Mukdenite forces in the vicinity of Shihman, five miles east of Hantsien, Shansi province. The Shantung forces, a remnant of the northern allies which were defeated by the nationalists had been attempting to get past the great wall into Manchuria.

White Russian forces attacked the Mukdenites east of Lanhsien with infantry and armoured trains and threw back the Eighth Mukdenite army. A Mukdenite counter attack the next day cut off most of the Russians who were made prisoners and taken to the rear. The timely arrival of Mukden forces from Yungpingfu was stated to have assisted in completion of an enveloping movement which gathered in the Shantung forces.

U. S. MAY BE INVITED TO REPARATIONS CONFERENCE

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The belief prevailed today that the United States undoubtedly would be asked to participate in the deliberations of the commission of experts that will work for a complete and definite settlement of the reparations problem. After a series of conversations, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan reached an agreement to name the commission and an accord in principle for special official negotiations looking to evacuation of the Rhineland.

In some circles the opinion was held that discussion of reparations would lead to a discussion of war debts in general.

MOLLEY IS JAILED FOR TRANSPORTING LIQUOR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 17—The police court was the center of the day's public activity today with a total of 17 cases on the docket, all cases being disposed of in a lengthy session with the exception of two. Judge Frank H. Foss was on the bench and after court had been underway for some time Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher was relieved by Assistant Prosecutor Frank P. Fenton, the former being called home by the illness of his son.

In the first and most important case of the day, John Molley, 28, of 50 Perry street, Central Falls, R. I., was fined $200 and costs, amounting to $209.15 when found guilty of a charge of transporting illicit liquor. Molley pleaded guilty. Being without funds Molley was sent to jail. Molley claimed ownership to 16 gallons and one pint of alcohol found in a Ford roadster occupied by the accused and two male companions when the roadster was halted by Police Officers Montie and Piche who were impelled to chase it up West Main street and search it early Sunday morning by a "hunch."

Molley's companions, George H. Burlingame, 43, and John McNamara, 20, both of 81 Buckingham sreet, Hartford were charged with being accessories to the transportation of the liquor. McNamara, who said he was owner of the car was also charged with failure to have a registration certificate. He was represented by Attorney W. A. McNamara pleaded guilty to the motor vehicle law violation and was fined two dollars and costs, amounting to $13.15.

BIG VOTE EXPECTED IN TOWN ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 17—The word is being passed about that Killingly is likely to cast the largest vote in its history a week from next Monday at the annual town election. This forecast is based on the fact that there are so many new voters and that this is to be a year of widespread interest in things political. Aside from the contest for places on the board of selectmen, there is no great incentive in the annual town election to bring about a big vote, yet a record vote is forecasted. There are practically 400 new voters in town this September, and this fact alone would account for a considerable increase in the vote.

"OVER THE COUNTER"

DEAR DOT:—

Of course I am delighted and flattered to be the one you chose to help you select the draperies for the new home that you are building, and when I received your note I began looking around for suggestions. In the RHODE ISLAND TEXTILE STORE I found an excellent assortment of materials, including Cretonnes, Chintzes, etc. They showed me a pretty glazed Chintz that is used for draperies, upholstering and covering and it is made in Wauregan. I know you'd like it. They also feature the Keneco Rods, as they do not sag and are reasonably priced besides. I saw, too, some of that Velour Valancing that you mentioned and I think you will find just the colors you are looking for there.

While I was there Mr. Little, the manager of the store, called my attention to the Blankets they are selling. They have the all and part wool and single blankets in many pretty patterns, including the plaids and plain colors. Of course the Beacon Blanket is the one they feature. You should see the old Kentucky Quilts they have there, too. They are faithful re-creations of the antique patterns and express the charm of early American bed coverings. They certainly would adorn any bedroom and I am going to buy one myself. The patterns include the Turkey Foot, Pine Tree, Twinkle Star, Crazy Quilt and Pennyrile.

THE RHODE ISLAND TEXTILE carries one of the largest lines of Domestics I have ever seen, consisting of Linen Tablecloths, Sets, Towels, etc. You can get very fine remnants there that are always useful.

When you go in to select your Draperies I just know that you will pick out a new Fall McCall pattern and some dress material as it is so hard to resist the pretty fabrics and Light O' Day prints not to mention the large assortment of Percales that make such pretty house dresses.

Remember, I am at your service when you go buying and I am sure you will find Mr. Little and the RHODE ISLAND TEXTILE CO. very pleasing to do business with.

Yours 'til then

YOURS, JANE.

THE BEAUTY OF THE NEW COATS WILL SURPRISE YOU

The cloths are unusual and the furs are better than ever.
There will be no better time this year to select a new coat than now, while the assortment is complete.
One reason is because the coats were made during recent months when there was a plenty of time for care in workmanship; the coats which will be made later will be hurried through the process, with the usual result of haste.
The furs on the coats are better than on those which will be used later because there is a limited supply of the better grades.
At this time it will be possible to accept orders for "special measure" coats; later there will be difficulty in obtaining the better cloths.
It will be profitable for you to see the coats as early as possible, when we have plenty of time to show them all to you.
If you should select one, we will lay it aside until you are ready for it; come in and take a good look at them.
The prices are $25.00 and better.

DISARMAMENT DISCUSSIONS

Whether the agreement that has been negotiated between Great Britain is going to be the means of halting the disarmament discussions at Geneva will soon be disclosed. It is evident that it has created much discussion in England and among other countries. The British people want to know what it is all about. They are told that it is not harmful, but they are not satisfied. They do not like the manner in which it has been put through, and certainly the effect which it is having at Geneva is not helping the situation.

The official expression of the United States is against the agreement. It is the sentiment of the British government as expressed by Lord Cushendun that the proposed disarmament conference be put off until spring.

It is shown that Germany is not favorable to the understanding between Great Britain and France, but Germany is of the opinion that there ought to be a continuance of the discussions concerning the reduction of armaments.

France isn't disposed to pay much attention to the American attitude and urges immediate discussions at Geneva. It is favored by the agreement and it doesn't like the indicated attitude from across the channel where, as the result of the reaction, it is believed that the British would welcome its termination.

Thus the matter hangs in the balance. If the discussions are delayed until next spring perhaps the British figure that time will serve to change the situation somewhat, that a different attitude may be expected at that time and that in the meantime some substitute might be arranged for the agreement or its elimination accomplished.

France isn't willing to look in such a direction. It may insist upon a full hearing at this time, but there is no indication that it is disposed to allow the British to back out of the compromise. Thus the outcome is awaited with interest for there is no little concern in the question of disarmament in other countries as well as this. This country in the meantime is not disposed to neglect its problems of self defense carried on, of course, under the existing naval agreement.

OVER LAND OR SEA

Cross country flying for the purpose of demonstrating the endurance of pilots and machines has been repeatedly advocated. It is believed that this offers the greatest degree of safety inasmuch as the chances of getting out of difficulties alive in case a landing is made necessary are much better than when flying over the ocean.

This is set forth in an interesting manner by the recent non stop flight attempted by Art Goebel He came east across the country in less than 19 hours. It was a record breaking trip and he was duly credited with the accomplishment. When, however, he undertook to make a return trip he encountered different conditions. His gas supply was not sufficient to get him back to the Pacific though it was equivalent to what was required to come east. It was necessary for him to land and refuel before proceeding and then he was four hours longer in going west than in coming east, while the stop prevented a non-stop flight.

What happened to Goebel is similar to what has happened to ocean fliers. In going east conditions were for the most part favorable. In going west troubles were many and serious as the record of fatalities among those who have attempted to cross the Atlantic from the east to the west shows. Goebel was obliged to face unusual conditions and that is probably what happened to the ocean fliers. The advantage was with Goebel, however, for he had a place to land and replenish his gasoline. Those who were forced down in the ocean whatever the cause may have been, had provided for certain measures of safety but they had no control over weather conditions.

The flights across the ocean will be a matter of common occurrence in time, but at the present time the long distance flying is bound to be much safer when undertaken across the continent instead of the ocean. The chance to deal with emergencies as they develop favors the land fliers although, as indicated in plenty of cases there is no real assurance of safety then.

DISFIGURING BILLBOARDS

Sooner or later a state comes to the realization of the need of preserving the natural beauty along its highways, and in doing so it invariably arrives at the decision that the many billboards along them must go. They not only disfigure the much traveled highways but they shut off views of the countryside and in some places have been so constructed as to cause confusion in the minds of vehicle drivers concerning the highway.

Some states have legislated them out of existence. Others have made provisions for taxing them so that effective regulation may be accomplished and others have not as yet taken action.

One of the most recent instances where renewed efforts are being made for the elimination of billboards is in Montgomery county, Maryland, where the civic federation is endeavoring to have the billboards and obstructive signs which feature the roadside eliminated. This is one of the states which permits the county commissioners to tax the signboards even to the extent of bringing about their removal, but some doubt has been expressed concerning the constitutionality of some part of the measure with the result that the federation proposes to have this cleared up in the interest of better conditions. If it cannot be done in such a manner new legislation will be sought.

In giving its approval to this movement, the Washington Star points to the fact that "at present the roads leading into Washington are disfigured and inplaces rendered hideous by great structures *. * * The natural beauties of the country are hidden and in sections the driveways are lined with offending and consusing placards and signs. However neatly structured and artistically decorated these signs may be, they are an offense to the eye * * * At the present rate of development there will soon be a continuous line of them for many miles outside the District."

Clamor for improvements grow as the practice of erecting unsightly boards increases. Evidently it has gone on until one county in Maryland is willing to stand it no longer, and in its movement it is assured of much sympathy from states which have gone through the battle and others which are anticipating it.

FLORIDA AGAIN

While assistance is being despatched to Porto Rico for the relief of those who have suffered from the severe hurricane, it becomes distressingly evident that the havoc wrought in Florida may also require extensive relief measures in that state. Till it is possible to get into communication with the area which has been swept by the storm uncertainty will prevail as to the extent of the damage. Indications point to a serious situation and coming so soon after the 1926 visitation will prompt much in the way of contributions and sympathy for the stricken territory.

At least what appears to be one appeal for assistance discloses not only the handicaps which are still existing in that state as the result of bank conditions, but the fact that outside aid will have to be depended upon.

Extensive will be the area over which relief measures will have to be spread if all reports are confirmed. The appeals for contributions put forth by the American Red Cross must contemplate work not only in Porto Rico and possibly other islands in the West Indies but in Florida as well. Whatever is done will not have to wait until the contributions are made for emergency measures are doubtless being taken at the present time, but the disaster is of a size that will tax the resources of the organization, and as in former instances the people of this country should and unquestionably will be eager to do what they can to reduce the distress, prevent disease and provide food and shelter.

Whether it is for Florida, Porto Rico or other regions, the call for aid never gets a cold shoulder from the American people.

FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS

Nothing is more gratifying than proof of the success of long continued warfare against disease. The ravages of the white plague have been so extensive that it was easy to enlist aid of various kinds in giving battle to it, but there is satisfaction in knowing that desired results are being accomplished.

According to figures which have been issued by the Prudential Insurance company it is shown that there has been a large decrease in the deaths from tuberculosis in the past 17 years. In 1910 there were 174.4 per 100,000 while in 1927 there were only 73.7 in 59 cities which have a population of 30,000,000 and the population of these cities was undergoing a decided increase during that time.

This improvement reflects the excellent results obtained from the persistent attacks and the modern methods employed in dealing with tuberculosis. Efforts have been concentrated upon checking the white plague as never before, and Connecticut stands forth as a conspicuous example of what is going on generally in educating people to guard against the spread of the disease as well as demonstrating to them the importance of early and effective treatment. Not only are highly commendable results being obtained in dealing with the actual cases of tuberculosis but even more valuable is the work in behalf of prevention through better living conditions, better nutrition, better homes and better workshops. The best fight that can be made against consumption is that which insists upon better health conditions and the protection of the well against the carelessness of the afflicted.

MISS FANNY'S IN HATS

Now this is the story the way I got it from Tessie, who's in notions and trimmings:

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Lane," said Tessie, "this pin's /the 'deernlair cree,' the way them French would say, an' it'll go swell on that jungle green felt you bought last week. Somethin' absolutely new an' I saved it out for you. Thought you'd like it.

"Yeh? You don't say? So you've noticed it, too, how good she looks? Well, lemme tell yuh the straight o' that story, you that ain't been in fer months.

"Old Man Howitzer gets a bug in his bean one day, he's gonna put class in his millinery department. He gets hisself a brand-new French buyer.

"This Person, we girls couldn't call her anything else but, picks first off on Miss Fanny; says she's too old, ain't got any class, an' spends too much time with the lower price hats.

"Now, I ask you, can you think of the millinery departmnt without Miss Fanny? There ain't hardly a person's bought a hat in Howitzer's don't know Miss Fanny. They come in here for a hat, but really they comes to tell Miss Fanny what's ailing them, an' she sees they gets the right hat that's good for it. She's done the doctor outer many a customer. How do I know? Say, they spills it all mostly in there, but they got a little bit left yet for all of the walk two aisles over, and li'l Tessie gets an earful, too.

"Say, she's got as much to do with folks as they have themselves. Yuh know old Scheinheimel's girl, her father that's got the delicatessen? Well, she comes in one day fer a hat to wear to a party she was goin' to with her feller, Joe. He wasn't really her feller then, but it wuz kinder understood.

"She tells this to Miss Fanny, an' Miss Fanny fixes her up with one of those nice floppy hats that kinder half hide the face, an' darned if he didn't propose that night. She told us later it wuz the hat that did it. He said he liked a girl that wuz modest, that a feller couldn't just stare at her an' get away with it.

"Sure, Miss Fanny's helped folks out a lot, an' just between you, me an' the lamp-post, that's why folks keep gettin' their hats here. The Person don't see it that way, though, an' has her—say, I'm tellin' this story, not you—naw. Miss Fanny ain't fired —she's transferred to housefurnishings, but the millinery don't make out no better. In fact, business gets worse.

"It goes on like this fer a month. Howitzer throws cat fits, an' the Person says she's given the department class but folks is too dumb to see it. Maybe they is dumb not to know the diff between just a 'hat' an' a 'chapeau,' but they're willin' to die happy fer their no-account tastes in wantin' a friend an' adviser instead of a dizzy who don't know her stock because her head's full o' what he said last night an' what she's gonna tell him tonight.

"I guess you seen it in the papers the governor's daughter's here fer a visit wit' some old friends. Yuh know the governor wuz born in this district, so maybe because she likes 'em, or maybe because her pa needs votes, his daughter comes back to visit folks as lived next door to him before he moves up to the capital.

"She comes in here one morning for a hat an' Howitzer an' the Person follows her aroun' like a bad penny. The Person, lookin' like her life depended on satisfyin' her, showed her this an' that but nothin' sooted her.

"All at once she turns to Howitzer an' says: 'Mother an' I wuz in here before we went away an' the dearest li'l old lady waited on us. She wuz all in black crinkly silk, an' she seemed to know just what we wanted. Isn't she here any more?'

"Well, that wuz two weeks ago. When the boss sees it takes ol' Miss Fanny an' not the Person to sell the governor's daughter, he fires the Person, an' good riddance it wuz, too, an' puts Miss Fanny back in the millinery.

"Oh, hello, Mis' Schwartz. 'Scuse me a minute, Mis' Lane. Yes, Mis' Schwartz, these pins here are the very latest, the 'neerniair cre,' like the French say, an' it'll go swell wit' that hat. Huh? Yuh went an' got that hat in the Bon Ton shop 'cause yuh don't like the saleagirls we got over here? Say, ain't yuh heard she's back? Sure, Mis' Schwartz, Miss Fanny's in hats!"

VISITING THE SICK

By John P. Sawyer, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio, Member, Gorgas Memorial.

No one who has felt the kindly cheer of a tactful visit in the depression or weakness of the sickroom fails to hold in grateful remembrance the friendship wisely exhibited. But the physician and nurses are too often compelled to observe not only the failure of the well meant effort, but that in many instances even positiv harm results. Considerations occasionally overlooked may, if specified, make for better results when we obey the injunction to "visit the sick" and to "grieve with them that mourn."

First of all, inquire whether or not the patient is ready to receive a visitor Very many times the best intentioned and otherwise desirable visit finds the patient fatigued or, for other reasons, not in condition for a visit, and so what was planned as a help may become an injury which the visitor would not wish to inflict. The knowledge of the call having been made will in itself often prove more gratifying to the patient than a visit under unfavorable circumstances.

Secondly, no one should make a long call on an acutely sick person. Nurses and doctors often feel indignant and wonder at the lack of understanding when the visitor settles down for an hour, or even several hours. It should be borne in mind that attention by the patients and courteous effort by them to respond to the visitor often causes a fatigue which hinders recovery. No one should feel offended if informed that the patient is too ill or, for any reason, unable to receive the caller. If there be fever, a few minutes only should be spent in the room, and the speaking of a few kindly words of sympathy and cheer should usually be the limit for the caller, and only the least possible acknowledgment by the patient should be allowed.

Thirdly, avoid the narration of similar cases and discussion of what different doctors are reported to have said. Do not seek to learn and pass judgment on the measures employed, nor to pronounce unasked opinion. Unless you can leave an effect of comfort and reassurance, stay away. The sick one has troubles enough without having killjoy callers add to already heavy burdens.

Fourth, dietary restrictions may prevent enjoyment of certain fruits or delicacies and their receipt may add to the annoyance of the prohibition Flowers may give an odor not agreeable in the sickroom and are often an added labor for the caretaker. If found desirable, gifts of the kind often give great pleasure and are much more helpful than any prolonged conversation.

Long observation of the effect of visitors to the sick has led to the regretful conclusion that to comparatively few is it given to be wisely kind and considerately helpful in the calls they make. To put oneself in the patient's place is the first requirement of becoming a welcome visitor, and serves as almost the only needful guide for a tactful and helpful sick call. The acutely sick need fewer visitors than the chronic "shut-in" to whom several calls are peculiarly grateful.

IN THE DAYS NEWS

Spalato

Spalato, appearing in headlines and date lines as the scene of recent rioting, is a name that will not be found on a map made in Yugoslavia.

"Like many other places in what was formerly Austria-Hungary, the city, since the post-war Austro-Hungarian divorce, has reverted to its maiden name, the Yugoslavian form, 'Split'," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"History supports the Italian name, 'Spalato,' because of the long period during which the city was under Venetian control; but the character of the population makes 'Split' fitting, for more than 90 per cent. of the population is Yugoslav.

"Split is often referred to as "a city in a pasiice." The phrase is true enough in part, for nearly ten per cent. of Split's inhabitants live inside the walls of the old palace of Emperor Diocletian and for a long time the palace was the city.

"Diocletian built the huge palace about 303 A. D. and moved there in 305 when he abdicated as emperor. It inclosed nine and a half acres of great rooms, long corridors, and courtyards. Diocletian lived only nine years after he entered his sumptuous residence.

"The palace was built several miles from the great city of Salona where the emperor's father had been a slave. Salona was destroyed in 639 by barbarians from the north, and the survivors took up their residences in the palace. This was the birth of Spalato, then called 'Aspalathos.' Courtyards became squares, some corridors were made into streets and other corridors and great rooms were divided into small houses and apartments. Tenements were built one above the other against the outer walls, some reaching eight and nine stories.

"It was only after centuries that the city within a palace' split over, and began to develop outside the old palace walls. This newer development is New Town or Novi Grad as distinguished from the Stari Grad inside the walls.

"The Stari Grad is still the maze of dark, narrow, crooked ways, and tiny tenements and shops that it became soon after the surviving Salonians crept into its walls. This is the slum section of Split, this 'city within a palace,' a far cry from the almost eastern splendor that reigned within those walls during the brief life there of their builder. In front of many of the shops hang quaint, symbolical signs, a huge shoe for the cobbler, a basin for a barber's shop, and go on.

"To the visitor, the most interesting place inside the old palace is the former mausoleum of Diocletian which for centuries now has been the Christian cathedral of the city. All about the dark little structure are symbols of paganism and secular activities. One of the cathedral's ornaments is a great black sphinx with its tracery of hieroglyphics, supposedly brought by the emperor from Egypt to stand guard over his last resting place.

"The Novi Grad is a city of parks and squares and reasonably wide, well ordered streets, faced by relatively modern structures. Among the buildings are numerous old Venetian palaces built during the long regime of Venice from 1420 to 1797.

"Modern Split, with its good quays and mole, is commercially the leading port of the eastern shore of the Adriatic. It is particularly noted as a wine market. One may sit in one of the numerous cafes that face the Gaspodski Trg and review the vintages—provided he is careful enough to allot a sufficient number of meals to the experiment, and provided especially that he looks not too long on the heady wine of Brazza, one of the most famous of the Dalmatian wines. Passing to and fro he will see native peasants in colorful garb smoking their long stemmed pipes. Some of the farm women he will see wearing trousers the better to perform the tasks that husbands and fathers leave to them. There are, besides, gypsies, Italians, Greeks, Albanians and a sprinkling of Austrians still lingering on after their regime is ended."

Little Talks on Thrift

MONEY HOARDER NOT TRUE EXEMPLAR OF THRIFT

A disproportionate amount of stress often is laid upon having money as a part of thrift. In fact, it is not unusual to read statements which create the impression that thrift and saving are synonymous.

While it is recognized that every importunity and exhortation made in behalf of saving money will, perhaps, result in the accomplishment of some beneficial results, the fact cannot be gainsaid that false conceptions of thrift often result in real harm. This has particular bearing in connection with the guidance of children and young persons.

Thrift in reality is not a dry subject though many persons consider it as such because they do not think deeply enough into it to realize its significance to their own personal lives and habits.

Much of the popular idea of thrift, as a result of false teaching, is that it means depriving one's self of all comforts, conveniences and pleasures in order to hoard money in a bank. While self-denial and sacrifice are virtues necessary to real personal progress the scheme of thrift involves much more than saving money. Otherwise, the more money one could hoard in one's bank account, like a miser, the more credit one would be entitled to for being thrifty.

To be thrifty is to thrive, to make the most of one's opportunities, to keep in health, to know how to play as well as work, to be of the greatest usefulness to humanity and to make the most of one's life.

To accomplish these things one cannot, to be sure, be wasteful in money matters. But to emphasize saving money to the exclusion of all the other things that are a part of true thrift, is indeed a dangerous philosophy.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Standard Time?

Joan's mother and daddy were visiting one evening and discussing the happenings of the day.

"That little Ralph across the street, who is two years old, hasn't cried as much as usual today," observed the mother.

"Well," replied daddy, "if they'd put him to bed at a Christian time, instead of 11 every night, he'd probably be good."

"What time is 'Christian time'?" asked Joan, "standard time?"

Vacation Echo

Buddy had listened with interest to the vacation story of the family next door, consisting of the mother, father and four rather small children, who enjoyed a trip which caused them to travel much of the night.

"Where did you sleep?" curiously asked Buddy.

The mother carefully explained that there wasn't any sleeper on the train.

"Oh," exclaimed the astonished Buddy, "did they sit up all night to go to bed?"

A Hoodoo Cathedral

Mainz cathedral was built and burned down in 1037, rebuilt and again destroyed by fire in 1081; since then it has been burned and sacked and pillaged and bombed, though "it remains today the most stupendously imposing and bizarre cathedral of all the Rhine valley." Now it is falling down again, and the inhabitants of Mainz are called upon once more to assume the burden of their ancestors.

This triumph of the famous German architect Neumann stands perilously, a tribute to human indefatigability in the face of more than a century of adverse fate. But it will be protected for whether through fire, lightning, or the ravages of enemies it has gone down before, the good citizens of the town have built it up again. This time the fourteenth in its history, its pile foundations are rotted, but engineers are already studying to replace them and continue the battered temple's existence.

One cent spent for paint enabled J. M. Knight, at Severy, Kas., to design an aviation marker which won a $250 prize.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Gas and Electric Department

Mr. Editor: The city of Norwich is to be congratulated on the 24th annual report rendered to the board of gas and electrical commissioners of the city of Norwich by the Norwich gas and electric department. The report covers the year ending April 30, 1928, and upon the approval of the court of common council of the city of Norwich it was ordered printed and is now being distributed to citizens of Norwich.

The report is a very comprehensive, concise accounting of the city property, telling the story of the management of the gas and electric department, and he who can read between the lines can only admire the supervision of the board of electrical commissioners of the city of Norwich, the efficient management of the department, and approve its value as a great asset to Norwich and the citizens whom it serves. The report shows a healthy growth and a virility in every branch of the gas and electric department, with an underlying fundamental object of safeguarding the property of the citizens and of rendering the best possible service to the consumer at a reasonable rate.

The state of the Norwich gas and electric department, as evident from the 24th annual report, is an outstanding tribute to the business efficiency and progressiveness of the supervision and management of the city owned utilities. One of the outstanding factors of the report is the new hydro-electric plant put in operation in August, 1927, which during the first year of its operation, produced 5,000,000 K. W. H. of electricity, augmenting the capacity of the plant and materially lessening the cost of production of electricity. The addition of the hydro electric plant made possible for the Norwich gas and electric department to distribute $14,000 in consumers dividends during the month of April and May, 1928.

The Norwich gas and electric department also has to its credit improvements to city and plant consisting of valuable equipment and additions during the last few years. Some of the most recent improvements of note are: Removing the unsightly steel poles from Main and Franklin streets and replacing them with steel poles and the institution of the modern system of "white way" street lighting, placing Norwich on a par with other modern and progressing cities. The new hydro-electric plant is also making for more efficiency of service and for improvement in rate to the consumers. These improvements in facilities show an increased property value, for the year of 1927 alone, to the amount of $167,000.

Norwich is showing constant healthy progress in the efficiency of supervision and management of its utilities and in good government. It therefore has a claim upon the interest and enthusiastic support of all citizens living in its realm and enjoying the benefits of its good government.

NORWICH MERCHANTS COMPLETE PLANS FOR FALL OPENING WINDOW DISPLAY

The Retail Merchants bureau at a supper meeting Monday evening at the Wauregan hotel decided to offer an additional prize in the window display contest which will mark the annual fall opening Thursday of this week. In addition to the prizes already offered and announced through the press, there will be a prize for the person who picks out the largest number of prize winning windows in the dozen classes. The amount of the prize will be announced in the press before the official opening day.

The merchants met at 6:15 o'clock for dinner after which the business meeting was called to order by J. E. Caron, who presided in the absence of President Abner Schwartz. Max Hanover spoke in an enthusiastic vein of the coming merchants institute to be held next month.

Mr. Caron spoke of the credit pooling system which has been favorably acted on by the burea's executive committee and called on Secretary Walter H. Pilcher of the Norwich chamber of commerce to explain the system. After Mr. Pilcher's explanation of the proposed system, it was announced that a committee is now working on the project.

Thep rincipal business before the meeting, the preparations for the annual fall opening, was then taken up. Mr. Caron urged all the merchants to cooperate in making the event the success it ought to be. He introduced as the speaker, Edward Frink, display manager of Albert Steiger's nc., of Hartford, who is cooperating with the merchants in arranging for the window displays and automobile procession on the opening night. Mr. Frink told of the window display system used by the Steiger store in Hartford. Practically all of his life has been devoted to window display work and he has served as a judge in many window display contests in various cities.

Mr. Frink said that people judge a store by its window display. He said that the combination of colors, lighting effect, arrangement of the display and the eye appeal are the principal things that enter into the attractiveness of a window display. In the local contest the various window displays will be judged on those points.

Automobile Bridal Procession

Mr. Frink spoke of the plans for the automobile procession. This will take the form of a bridal procession and the interior of the automobiles will be brightly illuminated. Nearly a score of machines will participate and the procession will be headed by a band. The procession will start promptly at 8 o'clock from Preston bridge and will proceed through the principal streets of the city.

Suggestions as to how various merchants could best display their merchandise in the automobiles were offered by Mr Frink, who also answered numerous questions, regarding not only the procession but the window display contest as well.

From 7:30 to 9 o'clock.

The meeting voted to have the stores open from 7:30 o'clock until 9 o'clock to afford the general public an opportunity to inspect the various displays in the stores. No goods will be sold, however.

It was also voted to offer, in addition to the prizes already announced, another prize, to be awarded to the person who selects the largest number of prize winning windows. The selections will be written on a slip, according to the clases in which the stores are entered and the slips left at the chamber of commerce rooms in the Thayer building during the evening, up to 9 o'clock.

The merchants just previous to adjournment, voted not to close their stores on the opening day of the New London county fair. The executive committee of the bureau, last week, voted not to close the stores, and their action was upheld by the merchants meeting Monday evening. The meeting adjourned about 9:30 o'clock.

GARRICK PLAYERS PRESENT COMEDY IN CLEVER STYLE

The Garrick Players struck a popular chord in presenting Guy Bolton's home spun comedy Adam and Eva, Monday night at the Broadway theater, giving the three-act play in spirited style before the well filled house. As Irving Morrow, in the male lead, Helene Wesley, playing opposite him, Bob Stevens, Charles Mylott, Sally Wall and Mary Bryant and other members of the cast each made their first entrance they were greeted with warm applause that expressed the place these players are winning with their Norwich audiences. In response they gave a presentation that was thoroughly pleasing and the well balanced cast gave an evening of genuinely pleasurable entertainment which ensure large houses for Tuesday and Wednesday.

Adam and Eva is a play worth seeing and the Garrick Players present the comedy an an altogether delightful way.

ENCAMPMENT OF GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

DENVER, Col., Sept. 17.—(AP)—The Grand Army of the Republic, shriveled by the inroads of the 62 years since its founding, was gathering here tonight for another annual encampment.

No sooner were registrations started than the business of electing a new commander in chief paled other matters into insignificance. Four candidates were in the field to succeed Elbridge L. Hawk, Sacramento, Calif., retiring commander.

Samuel P. Town, Philadelphia, assistant quartermaster general, was the only eastern man aspiring to head the civil war veterans for the coming year. Three westerners were in the race: R. H. Mowhorter, Coffeyville, Kansas; John Reese, Broken Bow, Nebraska, and James A. Jewell, Fort Morgan, Col., all past department commanders.

Only preliminaries were on the day's program.

For entertainment a fife and drum corps from Wichita, Kansas paraded through the lobby of the convention hotel, and a veteran from Nebraska did a buck and wing in the wake of the musicians.

The corps drew up shortly near the marbled entrance to a spacious dining room. The ranks of the spectators parted and into the circle jumped W. S. Manbeck from Des Moines, Iowa. He seized Mrs. Mary Nielsen from Livingston, Montana, and while the corps played a medley of "Nellie Gray" and "Old Log Cabin" the couple danced "Turkey in the Straw".

RESIGNS PASTORATE OF PARK CONG. CHURCH

After a service of 45 years as pastor of Park Congregational church, Rev. Samuel H. Howe, D. D., who was 90 at his last birthday in December, has resigned. Rev. Dr. Howe's resignation was read at the Sunday morning service at Park church. In the absence of the senior deacon, Oliver L. Johnson, the resignation was ready by Henry A. Tirrell. The preacher Sunday morning was Rev. Ernest Lignon, professor of psychology at Connecticut college. Rev. Mr. Lignon has been in charge of the young people's work at Park church for nearly a year.

As soon as Dr. Howe's resignation was read by Mr. Tirrell, Dr. William Tyler Browne, one of the oldest parishioners of the church, made a motion that the resignation be referred to the church committee which will hold a meeting next Sunday. The committee's action will be referred back to the church on Sunday, Sept. 30.

The prevailing opinion is that Rev. Dr. Howe will be made pastor emeritus of the church. He has been confined to his home on Williams avenue for the last week by illness.

Rev. Dr. Howe submitted his resignation as pastor of the church five years ago but at that time was prevailed upon to reconsider and withdrew the resignation. In November, Rev. Dr Howe will have completed 45 years as pastor of the church. In November, 1923, Rev. Dr. Howe preached his 40th anniversary sermon and at that time was presented a purse of $610 by the members of the church.

Rev. Dr. Howe is a native of Fleming county, Ky., and was born there Dec. 18, 1837. He is a graduate of Hanover college, Illinois, class of 1861. Before his graduation from Hanover college he taught Greek and mathematics in McNair's academy for two years. He studied theology at Princeton, graduating there in 1864. The next year he was ordained to the Presbyterian ministry and afterwards occupied four pastorates in Presbyterian churches.

In 1877 he received his degree of D. D. and in November, 1883, became pastor of Park church. He is one of the oldest preachers in point of service in New England and is revered by men and women of all creeds. His numerous friends deeply regret the news of his resignation.

CHICAGO POLICE SEARCH FOR OTHER ABDUCTORS

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Confident that they have in custody three of the six men who kidnapped ten year old Billy Ranieri twelve days ago, police tonight were engaged in what they termed a race with death—an attempt to find the three other abductors before they carry out their threats to kill the boy and send his head to the frantic parents.

The abductors who at first demanded $60,000 from A. Frank Ranieri, Italian sewer contractor, for the return of his son, today sent what they called final demands, in these they asked for $15,000 and threatened to decapitate the child and send the parents "a little package" if their wishes were not acquiesced in.

Three separate searches for the lad and his abductors were being made. The Chicago police were conducting a hunt after arresting three men who they said comprised half the kidnaping ring.

Watch Tongue For Signs of Illness

Your tongue is nothing more than the upper end of your stomach and intestines. It is the first thing your doctor looks at. It tells at a glance the condition of your digestive system—and physicians say that 90 per cent of all sicknesses start with stomach and bowel trouble.

Look at your TONGUE every morning!

A white or yellowish coating on your tongue is a danger signal of those digestive disorders. It tells you why the least exertion tires you out; why you have pains in the bowels, gas, sour stomach, dizzy spells.

And it's a sign you need Tanlac. This good old reliable medicine has helped thousands who were physical wrecks. See how the first bottle helps you.

Tanlac contains no mineral drugs; it is made of barks, herbs and roots—nature's own medicines for the sick. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

52 MILLION BOTTLES USED

What Will you do When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grownups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for every-day ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

SEVERAL NORWICH BOYS REPORT FOR AGGIE FOOTBALL PRACTICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 17—The 1928 football season swung under way this afternoon at the Connecticut Aggies when 36 gridiron prospects reported to Head Coach Sumner A. Dole for the initial practice session. Included in this number were 13 varsity lettermen of last year, all of whom appeared in fine condition and ready to take on the uniform of the gridiron warrior. There are only four lettermen of last year's squad that were found missing from this season's list. Capt. Willard Eddy of Simsbury, Arthur V. Williams of Danielson, Carl Geissler of Mansfield and Howard Kennedy of New Haven. All of these men except Williams were graduated from the college last June. The star Aggie 210-pound back Williams has resigned from the college and announced that he will not return to complete his course. The loss of Williams who has been for the past two years a bulwark on the offense and defense will be keenly felt when the season gets under way soon.

Norwich was well represented among the list of men who reported to Manager Thomas E. Mullane of Hartford for uniforms this morning. Seraphino Tombari and Martin J. Gilman, both of Norwich, are expected to play regular as they did last season. The former will be of use either as an end or better in the backfield because of his kicking and forward passing ability to take the place of Willard Eddy, last year's triple threat man. Gilman will play his usual position as guard on the Nutmeg eleven, a berth he has held for the past two seasons. Frederick Schwartz, James Moore and James Williams, all of Norwich, and members of last year's yearling eleven, are expected to give the varsity men a good run for their positions. Schwartz played guard and center for the freshmen while Moore was used as an end last season. Both men earned their numerals. Williams showed great speed and ability in the yearling backfield last year and should display better form this year as varsity timber. Edward Gulomb, another Norwich boy, is out for a berth on the line and although he did not earn his numerals while on the yearling squad last year, due to his inability to play in the early half of the season, he is expected to make a good showing on the varsity squad.

Unusual interest is being shown in the possible form of attack the Aggie mentor is contemplating for the 1928 campaign but it is thought that he will depend mostly on the aerial form of offense with a great deal of running plays intermingled, due to the speedy backfield he is sure to have. Practice sessions will be held twice daily with occasional evening sessions for talking over plays. The drills for the most part will be light during the next few days but a scrimmage game is in the works with the Coast Guards of New London for this Saturday at Storrs. Such a contest would be impossible this early date if it were not for the fine condition that Coach Dole's charges are in as a result of the work done during the summer vacation.

GIANTS BEAT PIRATES TO HOLD PLACE IN LEAGUE

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—The New York Giants held their pace in the exciting three-cornered National league pennant race here today, when they defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 9 to 2.

The Giants knocked out Erwin Brame in three and a third innings, getting to him for seven of their nine runs.

Homer Blankenship, who followed Brame, was quite an improvement.

Walsh and Ott, young Giant outfielders, led in the assault on the Pittsburgh pitchers. Each hit a homer and two singles and batted in three runs. The Giants also fielded brilliantly.

It became evident as early as the second inning that it wasn't Brame Day when New York clipped him for four runs, due in a measure to poor support, but also to his ineffectiveness.

Terry walked as a starter and Jackson scratched a single to the infield. On Reese's grounder, Paul Waner made a wild throw to second, filling the bases. Hubbell forced Jackson at the plate, but with the infield playing in Welsh pushed a single between Adams and Paul Waner. Hogan and Reese scoring. O'Doul grounded out, but Ott beat out a single to Wright, Hubbell scoring.

A home run attack netted three Giant runs in the fourth and knocked out Brame. Welsh hit a homer into the right field stands. O'Doul's speed gave him an infield hit and then Ott lifted a homer into the right field stands.

Pittsburgh scored its only two runs on young Hubbell in the sixth, when Lloyd Waner singled and was forced by Paul. Traynor followed with a home run into the left field stands.

The Giants picked up a few extra runs on Blankenship late in the game. Bunched singles by Welsh, Ott and Lindstrom and a forced play scored a run in the sixth and Terry carried in the ninth. New York run in the seventh on his double, Jackson's sacrifice and Hogan's infield out.

WORLD'S SERIES WILL OPEN ON OCT. FOURTH

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—The world series of 1928 will begin on Thursday, October 4, with either the Yankees or the Athletics playing at home. Because of the closeness of both races, the Thursday date was agreed upon in preference to the tentatively set Wednesday opening. Contending clubs feared a late decision in the league battles might make it impossible properly to distribute the vast number of reserved tickets for a Wednesday game.

The schedule and other points were settled here today at a meeting of Commissioner Landis with the presidents of the two major leagues and representatives of contending clubs.

Three schedules were drawn, covering every likely outcome of the pennant fights. If the Cardinals or the Cubs win, the following dates will obtain:

October 4 and 5—At New York or Philadelphia.
October 6—Open for travel.
October 7, 8 and 9—At Chicago or St. Louis.
October 10—Open for travel.
October 11 and 12—At New York or Phila, (if needed).

October 4 and 5—At Yankee stadium or Shibe Park.
October 6, 7 and 8—At Polo Grounds.
Oct. 9 and 10—At Yankee Stadium or Shibe Park (if needed).

The most remote posibility is a Pittsburgh victory in the National. The Pirates would play as follows:

October 4 and 5—At N. Y. or Philadelphia.
October 6 and 9—At Pittsburgh.
October 10 and 11—At N. Y. or Phila. (if needed).

Each club will order tickets printed in strips of three, and the eventual winners will dispose of them only in such numbers. The American league winner will sell cardboards for games No. 1, 2 and 6, while the National league rival will sell strips for games 3, 4 and 5.

Box seats will retail for $6.60, or $19.80 a set, and reserved seats for $5.50, or $16.50. General admission will be $3 and bleacher accommodations $1, neither being taxed.

YANKEES SMOTHER BROWNS UNDER BARRAGE OF HITS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17—(AP)—The New York Yankees went on a big batting spree today and went into a lead of a full game over the Athletics in the American league pennant race by taking the third game of the series from the Browns by a 12 to 2 score. The Athletics were idle today and gave New York its chance to pick up half a game.

Waite Hoyt pitched his nineteenth winning game of the season against only six losses. He allowed seven hits and had a shutout in sight when Kress hit a home run in the ninth inning, driving in Schulte who had singled.

The Yankees pounded the offerings of four St. Louis pitchers, Ogden, Stewart, Strelecki and Coffmann for 16 safeties. Lou Gehrig got three of these hits, while his rival Heinie Manush went hitless. Six errors by the Browns added to the carnage all of them coming in the 6 23 innings that Ogden occupied the box. The Browns' starting pitcher gave 11 hits in that period and allowed nine runs to score. Score:

CUBS TAKE HECTIC BATTLE FROM BRAVES

BOSTON, Sept. 17—(AP)—Chicago won a wild and wooly game from Boston today by a score of 15 to 5, making six of their runs in the second inning against Pitchers Delaney and Edwards.

The last of the five Boston pitchers officiating was Ray "Lefty" Boggs, who worked in the ninth inning, in which he hit three batters, made two wild pitches and walked a man.

Hartnett and Wilson led the Cubs at bat and Walter "Dor" Gautreau returned to the Braves from Providence to work today at shortstop. Score:

COCHET TAKES NATIONAL TENNIS BEATING HUNTER IN THRILLING MATCH

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 17—(AP)—In one of the most memorable matches of tennis history, Henri Cochet of France today defeated Francis T. Hunter, 34 year old veteran from New Rochelle, N. Y., in the final for the United States national singles championship.

The Frenchman came from behind to win the gripping five set struggle 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3. With the aid of as deadly and spectacular a net attack as this historic tennis battleground has ever seen, Thus, for the third time in the last 3 years, France triumphed over the home country in this American courts classic and the title goes again to France where it was borne in 1926 and 1927 by Rene LaCoste, just now a Paris business man.

In overcoming a commanding lead filed up by Hunter in the early sets, Cochet proved himself one of the greatest of champions.

With the count two sets to one against him at the intermission Cochet appeared to face a super-human task. The crowd of 6,000, strongly for Hunter, was howling and shrieking at the almost totally unexpected hope of victory for the American. Few had believed he would be able to threaten the great Cochet, a French super-star fully on a par with Lacoste in this season's play.

Hunter however, had a vicious forehand drive, and his service was strong, his volleying accurate. He charged in at the psychological moment behind those bullet like drives for kills at the net. His drives had accuracy as well as power. Cochet found this out more than once in the first set when Hunter, winning it, at 6-4, out played him 14 to 9.

Cochet is reputedly a slow starter and a deadly finisher in a five set match. Hunter had shown he could prod and parry even with Cochet, the master fencer of the courts. After losing the first game on two errors and two Cochet placements, Hunter had taken his service, had pierced his opponents delivery twice in running out the set. He had made more earned points and fewer errors.

Cochet rose to the emergency in the sallies to the net and won the second set. Hunter again forged ahead to lead by two sets to one as they left the court for the ten minute rest period.

The fourth set saw the turning of the tide. Cochet clicked off the first four games before Hunter could check him by winning his own service.

Still another game went to the Frenchman and his lead five games to one.

Hunter then won four successive games and tied the score.

Here Hunter stood just two games away from victory It was the climax of the match. In the crisis, Cochet had just a little in reserve. Again he stormed in to the net to take Hunter's flat drives on the wing he broke through the American's service and then took the deciding game of the set despite a brilliant brace of Hunter placements.

From that point on the Hunter fortunes waned, faster on his feet, Cochet was beating his opponent to the net and although he is slight in stature and short of reach it was virtually impossible for Hunter to get the ball past him for placements.

BOTTOMLEY'S HOMER IS FACTOR IN CARDS' VICTORY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17—(AP)—A home run by Sunny Jim Bottomley, his 29th of the season, gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 5 to 2 victory over the Phillies here today.

This fourth consecutive conquest of the tail enders while the New York Giants were taking the Pittsburgh Pirates, enabled the Cards to retain their two-game lead in the National league pennant race.

The battle was a draw at two runs each when Bottomley came to the plate in the seventh and after High and Frisch had singled to right field, the St. Louis first sacker, with the stage set for a sacrifice, as no one was out, drove the ball over the right field fence.

Clarence Mitchell, veteran southpaw spitball artist who was released by the Phillies in June, held his old team in submission in all but the sixth inning. In this frame two singles, a pass and a forced play that permitted Thompson to scamper home with the tying run while Klein was being thrown out at second gave the Phillies their two runs.

Earl Caldwell, rookie right hander, was tagged for 11 hits during the seven innings he pitched. Claude Willoughby worked the last two innings for Philadelphia.

DODGERS EVEN SERIES BY DOWNING REDS

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 17—(AP)—A rally in the eighth inning that netted them five runs, enabled the Brooklyn Robins to even their series with the Cincinnati Reds today by a 7 to 3 score. A walk, four hits and a pair of sacrifices accounted for the five Brooklyn runs. Gilbert's double with the bases full drove in three tallies and was the feature of the rally. Pete Donohue pitched the whole game for the Reds and yielded 14 hits although he held a lead when the Robins started their batting spree. Jake Flowers made three of the hits and scored three runs. Jim Elliott started for the Robins and gave only six hits before he was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Koupal pitched the last inning and held the Reds hitless. Score:

SYLVIA IN FOR TOUGH BATTLE WITH SMITH

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—Tiger Teddy Sylvia is in for the toughest fight of his career when he tackles the Bridgeport "bearcat," Steve Smith, at the Hamilton street arena, Thursday evening. The New Bedford boy looked very impressive against Georgie Day recently, but in Smith he is tackling a far more formidable opponent. Smith has fought Day 14 times with the score being even, a decision apiece and the rest of the contests ending in draws. When comparing the records of these two sterling ringmen fans should take into consideration the fact that Smith is a natural featherweight and had to "build up" for his fights with Day. Goin into the ring, the New Haven Tornado probably had as much as from ten to 12 pounds on the Bridgeport blond.

At the present time Smith is now traveling on high, while Day seems to have hit the downgrade. One of the most recent examples of this is Smith's victory over the Albany buzz saw, Frankie Lafay, right in Lafay's home town. The Albany battler has defeated among others Joe Glick of Brooklyn who at the present is an outstanding contender for lightweight honors. The fight took place in Syracuse a few weeks ago and Lafay won handily, having the Williamsburg tailor on the floor several times. Phil Goldstein, Freddie Mueller, Joe Kauffman are others who met defeat at the hands of Lafay.

The fact that he was entering the ring on the short end of five to one did not daunt the Bridgeport lad in the least and he went about his work in business-like fashion. He ripped and tore into Lafay from start to finish and his butting aggressiveness and fighting fury had Lafay all at sea and he was subjected to one of the worst lacings of his career. Although Frankie is a local product, the Albany fans gave Smith one of the greatest ovations a fighter ever received upon leaving the ring.

DIEGEL LEADS FIELD IN QUALIFYING ROUND

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Leo Diegel, crack Fenimore Country club star led the field in the qualifying round today of the Metropolitan Professional Golfers' association championship.

Diegel turned in rounds of 72 and 70 for a total of 142, four strokes to the good over his nearest competitor, Willie MacFarlane, of Oakridge, who had a 7 and a 71.

Third place went to Craig Wood of Forest Hill with 147, and a stroke back was Joe Turnesa, Elmsford. Tied at 149 were Henry Cuicui, Mill River, Bobby Cruickshank, Progress, and Johnny Farrell, national open champion. Cuicl turned in the best 18-hole total of the day when he turned in a 68 for his afternoon round. Gene Sarazen, Jim Barnes, Cyril Walker and Bill Mehlhorn were among the 25 other qualifiers although Mehlhorn had a close shave with rounds of 77 and 83, only two strokes within the qualifying limit of 162.

HARVARD IS FACED WITH PROSPECT OF WEAK LINE

By WILLIAM R. KING
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 17—(AP)—Though Harvard has the best looking varsity football squad that Arnold Horween has gathered together since he became head coach two years ago, indications were that it would have its usual weak line unless "Eskie" Clarke and "Dule" Dunn, the center and line coaches, performed miracles with their green material.

Horween had 103 varsity candidates including 11 letter men who played against Yale last fall, working out in the stadium today but observers were able to count his likely looking line prospects on the fingers of their hands.

There were backfield candidates galore, including three who performed brilliantly as regulars last year and about a dozen who served as varsity substitutes in the 1927 campaign. Besides these, there were several impressive looking youths who played on Eddie Casey's strong freshman team a year ago.

One of these, however, was put out of the running for the season before the practice session was half over. John Holbrook, freshman quarterback last year and who was out for that berth on the varsity, broke his collarbone this afternoon while practicing failing on the ball. Sam Burns, a capable end candidate, injured his shoulder attempting the same stunt and will probably be inactive for two weeks.

Though Horween refused to admit it, Holbrook's injury was expected to force the changing of Captain Arthur French, one of the best halfbacks in the east a year ago, into a signal caller.

French, a Harvard sprint champion, is an excellent ball carrier and strong on the defense. He is also able to throw and receive the edadly short pass over the center of the line and handle the laterals, a brand of aerial attack which Horween favors.

He is also able to act as the defensive back, a duty which Horween claims, should be carried out by the quarterback. Elliott Putnam, who called the signals for a part of the 1926 Yale game, was also on hand today. He is rather small and his size would prevent him from being much of a factor backing up a weak line.

The other three places behind the line will probably be filled by Joe Potter, Garnaccia, Mason or Harer, each of whom won his "H" in the last Yale game.

Horween has plenty of backfield replacements including many who served as varsity substitutes in other years, and several promising youths from the last freshman team.

The varsity end squad was also impressive. Besides Burns, it included Johnny Price, Jim Douglas, R. S. Ogden, A. S. Bigelow, Johnson and Edwards, of last year's freshman team, and Lewis and Puckard, of the second team. Eddie Bradford, the end coach, however, is inexperienced in that position.

The forward outlook could not be much darker. Dudley Bell, the only capable center in the squad, has been placed on probation and will be idle for the season. During the next three weeks which remain before the season opens with Springfield college, "Eskie" Clarke must not only discover a likely ball passer but also train him in the Harvard manner.

Clarke has a number of huskies in his squad but every man of them is shy of the experience necessary for intercollegiate competition. Bell's fall from scholastic grace was expected to put a frightful crimp in the Crimson's football hopes.

REPUBLICAN PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE OPENED CAMPAIGN IN EAST AT NEWARK

Real wages and standards of living of our labor have improved more during the past seven and a half years of republican rule than during any similar period in the history of this or of any other country.

When I speak of wages I refer both to those who work at the bench and those who work at the desk. Nor is this addressed to men alone. More than ten million women march to work every morning side by side with the men. Steadily the importance of women is gaining not only in the routine tasks of industry but in executive responsibility. I include also the woman who stays at home as the guardian of the welfare of the family. She is a partner in the job and the wages. Women constitute a part of our industrial achievement.

The Prerequisite of Labor Progress is Full Employment

I wish to lay down the proposition that the very prerequisite, the very foundation, of economic progress to our industrial and business employes is full and stable employment. A continued surplus of unemployed workers means decreasing wages, increasing hours and fear for the future. To protect labor, to maintain its prosperity, to abolish poverty, we must so organize our economic system as to provide a job for all who have the will to work. Full employment depends not only upon a strong and progressive economic system but upon the sound policies of and the vigorous co-operation by the government to promote economic welfare. Labor in its collective efforts has contributed greatly to the maintenance of proper wages and to improved conditions of labor. But collective bargaining cannot overcome the forces that make for unemployment. I, for one, am willing to trust the proved ability of employes to take care of their rights if there is employmento be had. And our workers as citizens at the ballot box have a large part in the determination of these economic policies.

Keeping Our Economic System in Tune

The problem of insuring full work all the time is a problem of national concern. It is one to which government must give its attention. It is one which government may contribute to solve. Behind every job is a vast, intricate and delicately adjusted system of interlocked industries dependent upon skilled leadership and upon finding a market for their products at home or in foreign lands. The forces of credit, communications, transportation, power, foreign relations and what not, must all be kept in tune if steady employment is to be assured. A failure in any part imposes a penalty upon labor through unemployment. Break this chain of relationship at any point and the whole machine is thrown out of order. Close down a New Jersey factory because of inadequate transportation or inadequate tariff and its effect is felt by the New Jersey truck farmer. Cease exporting automobiles to South America or Europe, and automobile workers are thrown out of employment in Michigan. The sufferings does not stop there. It only begins. The steel mills slacken in Pennsylvania and Indiana. The mines employ fewer workers at Lake Superior. And every farmer in the United States suffers from the diminished purchasing power and enforced stringency in thousands of homes.

The modern relationships of government and industry are a tangled mass of economic and social problems. They are neither abstract propositions nor statistics. They are very human things. They can make for the happiness of every home in our country.

The republican party has performed unparalleled service to the employes in our commerce and industry throughout its history and notably during the past seven and a half years. Continuous employment and prosperity of labor depends upon the continuance of those policies. It is these wide issues of governmental responsibility in laying broad and deep foundations of employment that I wish to discuss tonight. The republican party recognizes this responsibility. The machine had been stripped of two tires, battery and tools, but otherwise was not much damaged, only by exposure. Mr. Lyon, who had lately purchased a new car, has had the old one brought back. Proof of this rests upon its actual record of accomplishment. That record can be tested by examination of the situation of labor in the country today.

The Unemployment of 1921

When we assumed direction of the government in 1921 there were five to six million unemployed upon our streets. Wages and salaries were falling and hours of labor increasing. Anxiety for daily bread haunted nearly one-quarter of our 28,000,000 families.

Their Relief

The republican administration at once undertook to find relief to this situation. At once nation-wide employment conference was called. It was made up of representatives of both employers and employes. I had the honor to be chairman of that conference. We set up a program for the systematic organization of the whole business community to restore employment. By means of immediate institution of public works, the extension of financial aid to industry during the critical period of readjustment, by co-operation of employers, and by a score of other devices, we started the wheels of industry turning again. We did not resort to the expedients of some foreign countries, of doles, subsidies, charity or inflation—all of which in the end are borne by the people.

The Foundations of Permanent Employment Laid

Within a year we restored these five million workers to employment. But we did more. We produced a fundamental program which made this restored employment secure on foundations of prosperity, as a result wages and standards of living have during the past six and a half years risen to steadily higher levels. This recovery and this stability are no accident. It has not been achieved by luck. Were it not for sound governmental policies and wise leadership, employment conditions in America today would be similar to those existing in many other parts of the world. None of the larger countries engaged in the great war have as yet restored full employment. Does to the idle and other devices of desperation still exist abroad.

There have been assertions of wide unemployment at the present time. There was a temporary dip of employment last winter. From this we are now rapidly recovering. Its causes were local and temporary. They were the combined effect of the Mississippi flood, a great shift in the motor industry and the collapse of real estate speculation. An accurate survey of the department of labor showed that even including the usual winter seasonal unemployment, about 1,800,000 employes were out of work as contrasted with five to six million in 1921. During the past two months there has been a higher record of production and consumption of goods than during corresponding months of any previous year. There could not be such a record unless employment was steadily recovering.

There are two industries which have only partially recovered to our general industrial prosperity. They are the bituminous coal and textile industries. Here the difficulties of recovery from over-expansion during the war have been increased by a duplication of part of both industries in the southern states. They have also been affected by changes in use of textiles on one hand and by the increase of electricity on the other. We have a duty to continue effort to their full recovery by every assistance that the government can afford. This will be carried forward diligently.

Wages Today the Highest in History

Despite these rare exceptions, the average of real wages are higher today than ever before. And the arduous hours of labor have decreased. We can easily prove this. As a standard of comparison let us take the purchasing power of wages in 1913 or before the war. In purchasing power we consider both the dollar and the cost of living. Taking this standard we shall find that real wages at the height of the war inflation were about 30 per cent. over 1913. Despite the great after-war slump they have risen until today they are over 50 per cent. greater than before the war. Viewed in another way, while the cost of living today is about 60 points on the index above pre-war, wages are 127 above. Parallel with this increase in real wages the average hours of labor have steadily decreased.

Our Real Wages the Highest in the World

Moreover, our real wages and our standards of living are the highest in the world. And I am again speaking of the real buying power of wages. To compare ours with foreign wages we must find a common denominator, because translation of foreign currencies means but little. If we say that 5 percent. of butter and 95 per cent. of flour form the basis of that useful mixture called "bread and butter," then the weekly earnings in each country would buy at retail in those countries the following total of this useful compound. Please note these figures carefully:

WEEKLY WAGES IF APPLIED TO THE PURCHASE OF "COMPOSITE POUNDS OF BREAD AND BUTTER."

(Each pound 95 per cent. wheat flour and 5 per cent. butter.)

	Railway Engineers	Carpenters	Electricians	Coal Miners	Weavers	Day Labor
United States	717	731	778	536	323	308
United Kingdom	267	262	267	267	168	103
Germany	257	273	168	120	108	102
France	209	91	120	106	72	68
Belgium	160	96	76	91	91	68
Italy	108	181	102	93	73	150
Sweden	261	256	221	189	135	162
Japan	104	125	90	69	86	46

Of course, the American employe does not use his higher income to buy unnecessary pounds of bread and butter. He uses it to diversify and expand his consumption of all things. It spells better homes, automobiles, radio and a thousand things for the family that were utterly unknown a generation ago, and are utterly unknown to the average citizen in most countries of the world. Fear of poverty has been reruced. Fear of loss of employment has been lessened by stability. Fear of old age and for the future of the family has been lessened through increased payments to the savings banks and to the insurance companies and to our labor benefit societies.

Before I discuss the policies by which this has been brought about let me say that the republican administration makes no claim to credit which belongs to the enterprise, energy and character of a great people. Education, prohibition, invention, scientific discovery, increase in skill in managers, and employes have contributed to magnificent progress. But all of these efforts would be incomplete and the margin of employment would have been less had it not been for the co-operative actions taken by the government. And it is this margin of employment which makes for the safety or the danger of labor.

Tariff

The first of our policies which have given security and expansion of employment has been the enactment of the protective tariff. The protective tariff has been a fundamental policy of the republican party ever since the party was founded. Against it the democratic party has battled for these same seventy years. Two months ago their platform hinted that they thought we might be right. However, they declared for a tariff that would maintain effective competition. That must mean a tariff which will maintain effective competition of foreign against American goods. That is not protection. That this is the meaning is borne out by references to the Underwood tariff of the last democratic administration as the ideal. The reenactment of that tariff would let in a flood of foreign goods, destroy employment and lower wages and demoralize our farmers all over the United States. I would suggest that the employes of industries in New Jersey and the country should directly investigate as to what would happen to their employment with lowered tariffs.

Immigration.

The republican administration imposed restrictions upon immigration largely to protect the American workman. With the bars of immigration down the flow of those seeking relief from the poverty of Europe would create a horde of job hunters around every employment office and every industrial gate in the United States. The pressure of this flood would break our wages toward the levels of Europe.

No one places a higher worth upon the foreign-born citizen than I do. He brings many elements of great value in our cultural development. We welcome his help in building our new civilization. The immigration laws should be amended to remedy the hardships to families. I have urged before that this be done. In my acceptance speech I stated my opposition to any increase in immigration. The restriction upon immigration is a boon not only to those of my hearers who were born on American soil but to those who have come from the old countries, for every one would suffer equally by the lowering of our wages and standards of living.

The enactment of this law was opposed on economic grounds. I do not here propose to enter into the arguments which were advanced in perfect good faith that production in America would shrink because we would have too few workers that the cost of living would thus increase, or that it would destroy America's ability to compete in the shipment of her goods into foreign markets. I did not agree with these arguments. I believe that the maintenance of higher standards of living stimulate the development of labor-saving devices, increase skill in our workmen, and in our managers, and that in this way we compensate for higher wages. It is proving itself so today. We are exporting more goods abroad than ever in our history. We are gradually lowering the cost of living by greater efficiency.

There is no measure on our statute books today that represents a more fundamental, sound and important step in true progress than does this new charter of American labor. It is the necessary and natural companion piece of protective tariff. In the one instance we protect the American worker from the goods of foreign factories, made under their labor standards of living. In the other case, we prevent the excess labor flooding through our doors to reduce the American wage.

Expanding Foreign Trade.

When at the beginning of the republican administration we were determining those measures which would restore and increase employment, one of our first decisions was vigorously to build up our foreign trade. We determined that we must sell more products abroad if we would have steady and assured employment for labor in our industries. We realized that we must energetically promote the sale of our farmer's surplus abroad both in their interest and in the interest of labor. By so doing we increase the farmers' buying power and in turn his demand for the products of labor.

When we came into office, we were confronted with a total disorganization of the world trade due to the war. We had been exporting great quantities of munitions. This business was finished. World trade was demoralized to such an extent that the actual movement of commodities between all nations was some twenty per cent less than before the war.

We set out upon a definitely organized campaign to build up the export trade of the products of American labor and of the American farm. We reorganized the department of commerce for the promotion of American trade abroad on a greater scale than had ever been achieved or ever attempted by any government anywhere in the world. We mobilized our manufacturers and exporters; cooperated with them in laying out and executing strategic plans to expand our foreign trade in all directions. That this great part played by the government is no hypothetical assertion is amply evidenced by the fact that the daily applications for assistance by exporters to the department have steadily increased from 500 daily in 1922 to an average of 10,000 a day in 1928. In the last year before the war our total exports were a little under $2,500,000,000. In 1922 the first year of the republican administration they were $3,750,000,000. The dollar since the war has not been as valuable a dollar as in 1913. If we make a correction so as to estimate them on a quantity basis we find that our exports for 1922 were in pre-war dollars about $2,720,000,000. During the year 1927 our exports were $4,150,000,000 and if for comparison we convert this figure to the pre-war value of the dollar they were $2,540,000,000. Thus on any calculation our exports have increased by over one billion dollars during the past seven years. This is an increase of 41 per cent. since 1922 an dan increase of 58 per cent over pre-war.

Now I want to clearly show what this means. It was not due to world recovery. If we make a survey of the world's trade today, we shall find that the export trade of all countries is only 10 per cent above pre-war, while ours is 58 per cent. Also, if we make a survey of what has happened to the other great trading nations, who were engaged in the war we find that their foreign trade for the year 1927, when it is similarly adjusted for the depreciation of money, shows only a bare recovery of pre-war bases. It is no accident which has brought about this unique situation in the United States. It is not chance that has brought this added employment for American workmen, and added markets for American farmers. Things like that don't happen.

More than two million families in the United States earn their living today producing goods for export, and another million families, earn their living in the manufacture of raw materials which we import in exchange for our exports. This increase in exports has brought a living to five hundred thousand families. This means more than statistics. It means higher standards of living—more jobs make more wages. Foreign trade is no artificial stimulant to employment. Its development is a vital contribution to the welfare of the American workman and the American merchant and the American farmer. I propose that we shall continue this service to our people.

One of the large opportunities for the further improvement of labor lies in the further improvement of agriculture. Some of its most important branches have lagged behind industry in its advance since the war. This is not an occasion to enter upon that question but by sympathetic policies we should materially further increase the farmers' buying power and thus add to the security of employment in the industries. This becomes one of our first duties in common interest.

Increasing National Efficiency

American labor has been the first labor body in the world that has had the intelligence and courage to realize and express the fact that increased wages and salaries must in the long run be based upon a sharing of labor in the savings made through industrial and commercial efficiency. Within the past few months British labor has followed this lead of American labor. That is, if we are able by labor saving machinery and reduction of the wastes in industry to decrease the cost of production of an article, we know by long experience that a train of consequences of the highest importance follow. Wages in that industry will rise, prices decrease, consumption increase at home and in our foreign markets, the demand for labor is enlarged and our standards of living improve. The ancient bitter opposition to improved methods on the ancient theory that it more than temporarily deprives men of employment which is still maintained in some parts of the world has no place in the gospel of American progress.

Eight years ago I caused a nation-wide investigation to be undertaken of the whole subject. I felt that it was in the interest of our country to know what opportunities we had to improve our methods. It developed that there was great opportunities for increased efficiency in our whole industrial machine. We have the highest ingenuity and industrial machine. We have the highest ingenuity and efficency, in the operation of our individual industries, of any nation. Yet there were great wastes which were not the fault of individuals, employers or employees. These wastes were due to seasonal unemployment and to unemployment during depressions; to speculation and overproduction during booms; to labor turnover and labor conflicts; to intermittent failure of transportation, of supplies, of fuel, of power and credit to synchronize with demand; to lack of simplification and standardization in many of our commonly used commodities; to losses in our processes and materials and scores of other directions. They all combined to represent a huge deduction from the goods and services and employment we might all enjoy if we could but eliminate these wastes.

We adopted a new policy in government. That was, that the Secretary of Commerce should co-operate with industry in organization against such waste, not by law or regulation, but by purely voluntary action in which the joint service of the associations representing the managers of a given industry, its employees, its distributors and its consumers were all enlisted in a common purpose. We have had magnificent co-operation from the leaders and the employees of American business. I will not take your time to recite the literally thousands of co-operative actions undertaken and carried through with beneficent results, but I will give an illustration.

From time immemorial the building industry has been a seasonal business. It was idle a large part of the winter. The first conference upon reducing its seasonal character was called under my chairmanship in 1923. It was participated in by manufacturers of building material, by contractors, by engineers, by real estate men, by representatives of the employees. An exhaustive examination by this body resulted in the conclusion that the average seasonal unemployment in the building trades was about 100 days out of the year. A number of specific remedies were initiated by organized co-operation in different centers. By this cooperative action and by improved methods the average days of unemployment have been decreased by nearly one-half.

There has been no decrease in daily wages. In fact there has been increase in wages, but far more important, the annual income of workers in the building trades has been substantially increased by the decrease in idle days. It has enabled us to increase the total annual volume of building with the same complement of labor and equipment. It has decreased the unit cost of building and contributed to the expansion of building generally. Nor are the benefits confined to the construction industries. They give greater stability to all the manufacturers of building material and to transportation.

As another instance of an action of fundamental importance to labor I might mention the organization of measures in the government to mitigate the violence of the so-called business cycle. That is the recurrent periods of boom and false hope, waste and extravagance followed by hard times with their hideous unemployment, decreasing wages, bankruptcy in business and ruinous prices to the farmer. These booms and slumps have occurred periodically for 75 years although less than half as often under Republican as under Democratic administrations. The great unemployment period of 1921 was the direct result of war inflation and the boom of 1920. No one has suffered more from these movements than our salary and wage earners.

Time forbids a discussion of the intricate problems involved or the remedies which we have inaugurated. They include better organization of credit, advance information as to demand for industrial products, as to volume of their production, as to the use of public construction in slack times and many other methods. As a result of co-operation with industry and banking and public officials we have greatly mitigated this most dangerous of all disasters to our bread winners. The period of stability in industry and commerce and the far greater security of employment than ever before in our history.

Use of Public Works to Assure Employment.

In my speech of acceptance I outlined our national programs of prospective public works, including the development of water resources, public roads, and the construction of public buildings. In that speech I pointed out that these projects would require upwards of one billion dollars within the next four years. I there recommended that, so far as practicable, this work should be carried on in such a way as to take up the slack of occasional unemployment. While the judicious arrangement of government construction work can aid in wiping out the unemployment caused by seasonal fluctuations in business activity, the Federal government can do more. The Department of Labor should be authorized to undertake the collection of regular statistics upon seasonal and other unemployment. We must have this fundamental information for further attack upon this problem, from the further solution of which will come still greater stability and prosperity in the world of employer and employee.

We have gained enormously in efficiency in our whole economic machinery in the past seven years. I cannot take the time to recite to you the extraordinary evidence of this. I hesitate to express it statistically lest I appear to exaggerate. Taken as a whole we have swelled our production on a quantity basis by nearly 30 per cent. Parallel with it wages have risen and the prices of manufactured goods have fallen.

Increased Efficiency Contributes To Employment.

I have heard voices raised in protest that the effect of these activities is to destroy employment. This is a re-echo of a century ago. As a matter of fact we have gone through an extraordinary industrial revolution in seven years and we do not find any such unemployment as would be implied by these protests. There are individual cases of unemployment in these shifts but wise policies and co-operation with industry have rendered them but momentary. The reasons why no dangers lie in store are simple enough. As we transfer the burden from the back of men to machines we increase the wages of workers. We increase their buying power. We create a demand for new commodities and new services. By the energies and capital which we have released through increased efficiency of the older industries we have been able to expand other industries, and to create new ones to further employment, and to supply new additions to the comfort of every home.

From here and other causes we see a great expansion in the automobile industry, in telephones and electric lights. In seven years we have seen the radio industry emerge from a few hundred thousand to hundreds of millions in its product. We have seen the aeroplane industry develop from almost nothing seven years ago, to a most potent industry today. Due to increased efficiency hundreds of thousands of men and women have been transferred from the factories to our expanding insurance and banking to take care of enlarged savings, other hundreds of thousands have been transferred to our filling stations, our garages, our hotels and our restaurants. We have in this period seen a half million families find occupation in increased export of goods, and, above all, we have seen an increase of nearly two million youth taken largely from the potential ranks of labor and placed in institutions of education. This is proof of real progress. It is the road to further progress. It is the road to abolition of poverty.

Relation of Employer and Employe

I have already stated the position of the republican party in positive support of free collective bargaining. I have stated that it is necessary to impose restrictions on the excessive use of injunctions. It is my desire and the desire of every good citizen to ameliorate the cause of industrial conflict, to build toward that true co-operation which must be the foundation of common action for the common welfare. The first requisite to less conflict is full employment. By full employment we are steadily reducing conflict and loss.

The whole relationship between employer and employe has shown great improvement in these past seven years. During these years there has been a revolution through shifting of basic ideas on the art of both business and labor. The large majority of both sides today willingly accept the fundamental principle that the highest wages are the road to increased consumption of goods and thereby to prosperity. Both accept the fundamental fact that greater efficiency, larger application of mechanical devices and full effort are the road to cheaper costs, lower prices and thus again to wider consumption and larger production of goods. Both discard the ancient contention that labor is an economic commodity. Both realize that labor is entitled to participation in the benefits of increased efficiency by increased wage, either directly or through the decrease in living costs. Both have joined in repelling socialism, and other subversive movements.

He would be a rash man who would state that we are finally entering the industrial millenium but there is a great ray of hope that America is finding herself on the road to a solution of the greatest of all her problems. That problem is to adjust our economic system to our social ideals. We are making progress towards social peace and contentment with the preservation of private industry, of initiative, and full development of the individual. Working out of this ideal cannot be attained by compulsory settlement of employee and employer conflicts by the hand of the government. It cannot be attained by placing the government in business and reducing our people to bureaucracies.

It is idle to argue that there are no longer any conflicts of interest between employee and employer. But there are wide areas of activity in which their interest should coincide, and it is the part of statesmanship to organize and increase this identity of interest in order to limit the area of conflict. Conflict dimishes and common purpose flourishes only in prosperity and in an encouraging atmosphere of sound governmental policies.

At such a time as this a change in national policies involves not—as some may lightly think—only a choice between roads by either of which we may go forward, but a question also as to whether we may not be taking the wrong road and moving backward. The measure of our national prosperity, of our stability, of our hope of further progress at this time, is the measure of what we may risk through a change in present policies. More than once in our national history a change in policies in a time of advancement has been quickly followed by a turn toward disaster.

Our economic system has abuses; it has grave faults in its operation. But we can build toward perfection only upon a foundation of prosperity. Poverty is not the cause of progress. Enduring national life cannot be guided upon the bowed and sweating backs of oppressed and embittered men and women. It must be uplifted and upheld by the willing and eager hands of the whole people. They will uphold it if our economic life be built for the whole people, not for any special group.

Leadership

To assure this sort of progress our necessity is to assure the ability and character of our leadership. It requires that we secure into its ranks all of the intelligence with the life of our race—that it be sympathetic with the life and aims of the whole of our 23,000,000 homes. At no time have we had more able leaders in economic life than today. At no time have we been more certain that the fiber and intelligence of our people furnishes a vast reservoir of such leadership adequate to the future. But able administrators, skilled workers, professional and moral leaders cannot be made by birth or money. They cannot be selected by divine right or through bureaucracy. Nor can their ranks be filled from a limited class. Our leadership can be found and it will be sympathetic to our ideals if we maintain the decency and dignity of family life through a stable economic system; if we maintain free and universal education and thus provide them the open stair to leadership; if we maintain for every individual an equality of opportunity to attain that position in the community to which his character and his ability entitle him. Then our supply of leadership will stream forward of its own impulse. It is in this insistence upon an equal chance and a free road to rise in leadership that our great American experiment has departed from those of history. It is our sure guarantee of the future. In its vast possibilities is the hope of every mother for her boys and her girls.

Under such leadership replenished constantly from the great mass of our people we can aspire to a democracy which will express a common purpose for the common good. We can build a civilization where national conscience is alert to protect the rights of all, curtail selfish economic power, and hold to the ideal of distributed contentment among the whole people.

GEN. MOTORS AND U. S. STEEL COMMON SOLD AT NEW HIGH PRICES FOR YEAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—Establishment of new high prices for the year by General Motors and U. S. Steel commonefeatured the resumption of the upward price movement in today's stock market. Buying orders were again distributed over a broad list with the airplanes, coppers, oils, foods, motors and steels presenting the outstanding points of strength. Although there were several blocks of 10,000 shares or more, the bulk of the day's trading was in relatively small lots, with the ticker half an hour or more behind the market during the greater part of the session. The day's sales were 4,226,400 shares.

Lowering of the call money rate from 7 to 6 1-2 per cent., due largely to the temporary surplus of funds resulting from the September 15 turnover, helped to create bullish enthusiasm. The August foreign trade report, showed an export excess of $84,000,000, with the gold movement showing a small balance of imports for the first time in eight months. There was no change in time money and commercial paper rates. Sterling exchange held around the point where further gold shipments from London to New York might be expected.

U. S. Steel common touched a new peak price at 160 3-8 and then dropped back to 159, unchanged on the day. General Motors closed 1 3-4 points higher at 208 1-2 after establishing a new peak at 211 1-4, with buying influenced by the publication of the August retail sales report, showing a gain of 18 2 per cent. above the same month last year, and by expectations of a substantial extra cash dividend at the November meeting of directors.

Heavy accumulation of the copper shares was in direct response to the increase in red metal prices on Saturday. Federal Mining & Smelting soared 23 points to a new peak at 157 and then eased to 155 1-2 and Cerro de Pasco was bid up 6 5-8 points to 100 1-8, both new high records. Other coppers to better their previous 1928 tops were Anaconda, Chile, Granby, Kennecott and Calumet & Hecla.

Oils changed hands in tremendous volume, as a result of the efforts being made to bring about a world curtailment of crude, but some of the active issues lost their gains and closed fractionally lower. Pierce Oil preferred ran up 8 points to a new high at 32 1-2 and closed at the top. Atlantic Refining, Skelly, White Eagle and Richfield also moved into new high ground.

Studebaker and Chrysler climbed to new high prices, but were unable to retain all their gains. Motor Products showed a net loss of 3 points at 183 after having soared to a new peak at 192. Briggs, Timken and Murray corporation also recorded substantial gains.

Among the many stocks to sell at their best prices of the year were Advance Rumely common, Brooklyn Union Gas, Case Threshing, Central Alloy Steel, California Packing, Household Products, Johns Manville, Kroger Stores, May Department Stores, National Enameling, Purity Baking and Westinghouse Electric.

Metal quotations also disclosed a fairly long list of net declines, but most of these were held to a point or two. Brown Shoe, Continental Baking A, Cuyamel Fruit, Gillette Safety Razor and Transue & Williams Steel were conspicuously heavy. Selling of Porto Rican Tobacco A and South Porto Rican Sugar was inspired by reports of heavy property damage and large loss of life in the tropical storm which swept over that country.

Rails lost ground after an early outburst of buying had carried Missouri Pacific, Kansas City Southern and St. Louis Southwestern into new high ground for the year.

Commodity markets were mixed. Wheat lost a fraction of a cent a bushel and cotton advanced 75 cents to $1.25 a bale. Coffee showed little change. Raw sugar was slightly firmer and refined sugar a shade lower.

Foreign exchanges held steady in quiet trading, with sterling cables quoted around $4.85 3-32

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—The optimism of the stock market spread to the bond market today and a few favorite issues led the general list to higher price levels in the heaviest day's trading in months. Today sales exceeded $10,000,000.

Easier money, as evidenced by reduction of the call loan rate to 6 1-2 per cent, and favorable individual developments, contributed to the strength of the bond market.

Coppers were among the strong spots. Andes 7s soaring nearly 3 points to a new year's peak at 141 3-8 and Anaconda 7s climbing 3 1-2 points to a new year's top at 138 on buying evidently encouraged by steadily increasing prices for copper and brass products. Brooklyn Union Gas debenture 6 1-2s also were prominent in the advance, heavy buying lifting the issue to a new maximum for 1928 at 308 1-2, up more than 5 points net on the day. Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s moved up a point, but other utilities showed only fractional gains.

Oils advanced under the leadership of Barnsdall 6s with warrants. That issue, however, closed fractionally off after having established a new year's high at 115 3-8. White Eagle Oil 5 1-2s and Sinclair Consolidated 7s gained about a point each.

Leading rails showed fractional gains, but the Seaboard Air Line and Seaboard All Florida issues were under pressure, probably through selling inspired by news of storm damage in Florida. New York Central 6s and Atlantic Coast Line 4s were prominent with gains of around a point each.

The foreign list was rather inactive. Most of the trading was in Kingdom of Italy 7s, which sagged, and Republic of Chile 6s, which closed unchanged.

U. S. government obligations improved in light trading.

Public offering will be made tomorrow of $5,000,000 Utilities Service company first lien 6 per cent. gold bonds, proceeds to be used in acquiring the stock and consolidating of 27 power, telephone and ice companies serving 70 communities in northern Ohio.

An Unusual Opportunity

To Own Your Own Home in a Good Healthy Community

A number of Single and Two-family Dwelling Houses, located in Voluntown, and owned by The Briggs Manufacturing Company, are being offered the public at a cost of a little more than building a good private garage.

Dwellings are ready for inspection and at the prices asked we do not believe they will last long.

Nearly every dwelling has a lawn and large shade trees with land enough for a large garden. Some have over an acre of land while others have land running back to Beachdale Pond.

There is plenty of nearby land available that can be bought right if more is wanted.

How he turned my failure into success

"B.O."—my trouble? For a moment I saw red.

But Atkinson was a decent sort and I knew he was talking for my own good. Besides, I was slipping. I worked like blazes. I had plenty of good leads—but no orders. It just seemed that every time I called and had a prospect warmed up, he'd suddenly lose interest and want to be rid of me.

It had me worried. But I never suspected the truth until Atkinson tipped me off. Today I'm not handicapped by "B.O."—you know, Body Odor. Let me tell you the little secret that changed my whole future and helped me win success.

No fear of "B.O." now

Like every normal, healthy person, I perspire. But I never noticed any unpleasant odor about me, so I just assumed I was all right.

That's where I was fooled. When we get used to an odor, we don't detect it. Unknowingly, I did offend.

But since I've changed to Lifebuoy, I've said goodbye to "B.O." worries for good. A Lifebuoy bath certainly makes me feel clean and fresh. Its antiseptic lather deodorizes pores. And now that I've gotten rid of "B.O.", I'm getting ahead faster than ever.

Great for skin, too!

I like the way Lifebuoy lathers and keeps the skin so nice and smooth. My wife loves it for her complexion. The youngsters all use it, too. We feel that Lifebuoy really saves us lots of sickness by removing germs. Lifebuoy has a nice clean smell that rinses away completely.

Use Lifebuoy a week and you'll use it for life. Get some today.

A New Victory Six By Dodge Brothers

SMARTER, ROOMIER, MORE COMFORTABLE

With Famed Victory Performance Made Still More Brilliant

Striking improvements in beauty, comfort and roominess, set Dodge Brothers new Victory Six apart as a distinctive and impressively attractive motor car.

Seat dimensions are more generous; cushions deeper and more luxurious; doors higher and wider; and passenger vision materially increased.

New Victory lines sweep gracefully forward to a radiator that expresses new ruggedness and power; and improved fenders further accentuate the vigorous and arresting charm of Victory Six design.

Moreover, new Victory Six construction insures many unique and vital advantages.

The wide Victory chassis frame, flush with the body lines, provides a foundation for the body—which is directly mounted without sills. This remarkable construction lowers the all-important center of gravity, increases the head room, and eliminates the customary body overhang.

And as a consequence, the new Victory grips the road at the curves, travels rough pavement with incredible smoothness, obeys the four-wheel brakes instantly—yet with no discomfort to passengers. And provides a quality of pick-up, flexibility and fast flashing action that we urge you most earnestly to investigate.

ALSO DODGE BROTHERS STANDARD SIX $895

Greater beauty, comfort and convenience with speed, gas-saver, smoothness and dependability more remarkable than ever. Four fashionable body styles fully equipped.

MAYOR J. A. MAY'S VALEDICTORY TO NEW LONDON COUNCIL SNAPPY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—At the meeting of the city council this evening Mayor James A. May bade the members farewell, his term of office expiring before another meeting of the council. Incidentally, he threw some hot shots into the gathering. He said his retirement from the position of presiding officer of mayor would be like taking a vacation but that his membership in the council will still exist and that his efforts would be toward the promotion of a bigger and better New London. He had been opposed by members in many of his efforts, sometimes consistently, perhaps, and often inconsistently, but they were within their rights and he assumed, acted according to their consciences. He stated that the result is the answer. He declared it was his purpose to pursue 1928 methods, rather than to continue along the lines of 1648 when the town was founded. It seemed to be the motto of the council, he said, "Go get the taxes," and that then the taxpayers were notified they must pay an increased tax on increased taxes. The council dictated to them where they should maintain a single or double dwelling upon the land they had bought and paid for, which was equivalent to a rule or ruling policy. A long puerlod of reconstruction and extensive improvements had been made at tremendous expense to the taxpayers but the increased taxation did not furnish the money to pay the bills. The course had been met by the creation of an additional half-million bonded indebtedness. He declared the remedy is good government which shall include economy and he claimed that if the voice and sentiment of the taxpayers was to be heeded, radical changes will soon be made. He trusted the incoming councilors would bend their energies toward encouraging the present industries and seeking new ones. He advocated diplomacy in the collection of taxes and scored the tax collector for proceeding against the small taxpayers in a way of putting them in jail. He pointed out that the Ship & Engine Co. was without any business to speak of, other places were on half-time and the business of the Connecticut Power Co. was slack.

The council granted permission for the erection of six dwelling, six garages and fourteen improvements in additions to other properties.

The perfection of the lease of the Groton ferry to Messrs Sheehan and Crandall, was continued still further until an arrangement can be made with Groton for 25 per cent of the expense incurred.

The council voted to name the square in front of the Thomas Hose company in memory of Arthur E. Hodges, who lost his life on the S-4 off Provincetown.

The ordinance concerning the sale of fireworks was amended in order that the council could give authority to Italian societies to use Morgan park for a fireworks display on Oct. 12, when the Columbus statue will be unveiled.

It was voted to lay a sewer in Morton street at an expense of $850. The council voted to permit the petition for a dance, to secure money for the textile workers of New Bedford. Council adjourned until Oct. 1, when the new council comes in.

Charles Halock, a member of the crew of the yacht Thelma, undergoing repairs at the plant of the New London Ship & Engine company, reported to the police this evening that three weeks ago he lost his wallet containing $25, driver's license, registration and passport.

The residence of Joseph Shapiro, Denison avenue, was damaged by fire to the estimated extent of $500 Saturday night when flames were discovered in the attic. An alarm was sent in from Box 512, corner of Montauk avenue and Denison avenue. On the arrival of Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and several pieces of apparatus two streams of water were necessary to subdue the fire. The blaze was in a quantity of apparel and clouds of smoke poured from the building gave the impression that a serious blaze existed.

JUDGE CALKINS CHANGES MIND ABOUT RUNNING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—Arthur B. Calkins, judge of probate, now at his camp at Deer Isle, Me., and who recently announced that he would not accept a renomination for the office on the democratic ticket, comes forward with a reconsideration of his declaration for in a telegram to Joseph Keefe, chairman of the democratic town committee, Judge Calkins has stated that he would agree to all his name to be placed on the democratic ballot. It is generally believed that the republicans, as they have done in the past, will endorse the nomination of Judge Calkins,although J. James Floyd was a candidate for the office. Mr. Floyd announced that he would not be a candidate for the office if Judge Calkins would accept a renomination on the democratic ticket. In the event that Judge Calkins contiued to refuse to accept a renomination for office, United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran was in the field for the nomination. Whether Judge Calkins' nomination will be unanimous will be determined when the probate convention is held at the Hotel Mohican Saturday next. Judge Calkins will return from Maine Thursday.

GAS LEAK IN PIE OVEN RESULTS IN EXPLOSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—An explosion of gas in Ye London Grill, State and Main streets, early this morning and a slight fire that followed, threatened to cause serious damage to the building, but because of the alertness of employes the fire was extinguished without the aid of the department, although an alarm was rung in. A leak in the supply pipe to a gas oven that is used for baking pies, was not discovered by employes of the kitchen and when the burner was given the match the gas that had accumulated exploded. A blaze followed and an alarm was rung in from Box 232, but before the firemen arrived the fire was extinguished. All the windows on the floor where the kitchen is located were open and but for that condition the interior of the building must have been damaged by the explosion.

The hearing on the admission to probate of the will of Judge William Belcher, which was scheduled for this afternoon has been postponed to next Thursday afternoon.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—John H. Quinn, a cripple who has a long court record for violation of the prohibition law and who has served terms in jail and state prison for the offence, was in the police court again today on a charge of selling liquor at his establishment, corner of John and Potter streets. Probable cause was found and Quinn was held in bail of $3,000 for trial at the next criminal term of the superior court. In default of a surety on his bond, Quinn was committed to jail to await trial. Quinn was arrested Saturday afternoon by a raiding squad consisting of Acting Sergeant Augustus Ray and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy and Henry Hick and after Officer Murphy had entered the saloon and seized a glass of hooch that was on the bar in front of one of Quinn's customers. A search of the building, however, did not reveal the hiding place of the liquor, Quinn probably having destroyed his stock for Officer Murphy after seizing the glass of liquor, left the building and went to headquarters for assistance. In court were the three frequenters found in the place, Einer Habvosen, Peter Perry and Alfred Hoagland, the last named also charged with intoxication. ANNOUNCEMENTS

New London County Fair

Very little more remains to complete all arangements for the big county fair. The new horse barns are practically complete and ready to house the fine list of horses that will furnish fast racing for the three days ending next week. Arthur Small, assisting Speed Secretary Burns, states that the list of entries will make up an aggregation of horseflesh equal to the best turnout at any track in New England.

County Agent Clark reports entries of more herds of cattle than have been on the grounds in several years. Storrs college will have the fine Devon herd which shows in Springfield this week, at our county fair under the personal attention of Austin B. Lathrop. Mr. Lathrop is one of the brightest youngsters in the cattle world, having already achieved distinction in judging at Chicago and other live stock shows. Other cattle entries include Reuben Manning of Lebanon. J. B. Avery of No. Stonington, Thomas Wood of Waterford, Oscar Dimock of Waterford, Intervale Farms of Vermont, as well as many other excellent herds. With the 4H club coming in 100 per cent strong, a real cattle show will be seen.

Supt. Ricker reports the largest and best poultry entries he has ever handled and his enthusiasm of the make-up of his department is brimming over.

In every other department optimism prevails, a spirit throughout that this year's fair will truly be bigger and better than ever seen during the 74 years of the fair's history.

Strand Theatre

There is a great audience appeal in Columbia's "The Scarlet Lady," which is being featured at the Strand theatre. Lya de Putti, Don Alvarado and Warner Oland come into their own in exceptionally fine roles. The production has been made on an elaborate scale giving a magnificent spectacle of the Russia of the Czar and the same country immediately following the revolution.

Into the plot has been woven an intriguing love story of a revolutionist and a prince. The fate of rebellion causes them to change places and develops new phases in their characters. At first Lya is the crude, uncultured product of the lower classe, who amuses the prince with her wild naturalness. Later she becomes the domineering red leader wellding a whip hand and making life miserable for her lover prince. Then she experiences an awakening and the transformation in her character is one of the outstanding features of the production.

Lya de Putti has a role in which she rises to great heights while Don Alvarado and Warner Oland are sure to win new friends through their powerful performances.

Alan Crosland has made a great picture out of "The Scarlet Lady," and has indelibly stamped himself as a director of the first magnitude. He has introduced human interest touches which make the picture ring true to life and fix it in the mind as a truly great production.

Breed Theatre.

Richard Barthelmess has never had a finer vehicle than First National's "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," showing at the Breed Theatre today for the last time. It provides a role that Barthelmess plays with sincerity and great dramatic power, and will be remembered as one of his finest.

UNITED MUSIC FORCE CONFERS AT PROVIDENCE

Providence was the scene last Tuesday night of the annual sales conference and banquet of the United Music company stores. More than 150 members of the organization were present.

Maurice Feldman of Norwich opened the meeting, presenting Benjamin Gross of the Stromberg-Carlson company who gave a very interesting talk on "Radio Merchandising." Charles Popkin then outlined the selling campaign for the coming season. The various store managers were then called upon and each one laid out plans wereby the coming season will be the banner year for the United Music company.

Maurice Feldman then spoke on installment selling and announced the bonuses that were to be given to managers and salesmen reaching their quota of sales.

A very fine dinner was served and entertainment furnished by Roy Cooper of the Fall River store at the piano and William Ives of the Taunton store gave vocal selections.

The meeting adjourned with community singing by the entire organization.

Those present from the Norwich Branch were: Maurice Feldman, Manager, Mitchell Wolfe, Asst. Manager, Leroy Stephenson and Sigmund Anderson of the Radio Service Department, and Herbert Fellman, Chas. Rutman, Clarence Dennison, and George Wainwright of the Selling force.

Champion Coffee Drinker.

The King of the Belgians is said to be the champion coffee drinker among European monarchs. His majesty, so it's reported, takes a cup of coffee before breakfast, one after breakfast, another cup with his noonday meal, one in the afternoon, still another after dinner, and the last cup during the evening.

Knowing how scornful a man without a single claim to royalty can be of a cup of poor coffee, one shudders to think of a king's wrath at being offered an inferior brew.

What responsibility rests upon the royal coffee maker. But it is to be hoped that he is as canny in his selection of a brand of coffee to serve the king as hundreds of American wives are of the one they serve their husbands.

Millions of these women know that the making of a tempting beverage is not altogether a matter of boiling and brewing. Coffee must have flavor and aroma to be sure, but if the roasted bean does not possess these qualities, then no magic of the housewife can extract them.

But there is a certain fine, old brand of coffee, White House, in which all the precious natural aromatic oils have been preserved in the roasting. The Dwinell-Wright company, producers of this coffee, experimented for over 80 years before they developed and flavor of the bean. Even the packaging and sealing of White House Coffee is done in such a way that not a bit of the aroma is lost.

Thus present day methods of "roasting the flavor in" provide housewives with a product which is even better than the coffee "that mother used to make."

NOANK

CAPTAIN PALMER GOING TO FISH NEAR LABRADOR

Capt. Walter Palmer has bought a new fishing boat and named it "How". He is getting it fitted out at Rogers' boat yard by painting and putting on heavy plank on the side for salmon fishing near Labrador. He will be gone for 90 days and is taking along his cook Hadley Fitch, who was with him on a 25,000 mile trip to many parts of the south two years ago. The heavy plank is for the ice that is thick in that part of the continent and is hard on the boats. Cook Fitch says that he will put on his sheepskin coat, so not to get cold. Talking to an old sea captain who spent a winter up there he said he has seen it so cold that he was having a shave and the lather froze to his face so he had to go without a shave. It is a trip with adventures and thrills that will last any fisherman a life-time and he can tell no end of stories about it. Capt. Palmer got the extra ship's log that Capt. Sidney Longfield had, telling everything, so a skipper can't go wrong. The Flat Fish club members are planning a farewell party for the crew of Capt. Palmer on his boat How. He has followed the sea since he was a boy of 14 and was across the pond during the war on the battleship Minnesota, also has been around the world, never has been seasick. His hobby is salt water and fishing. He'd rather do that than eat! In a week the good ship How will sail from the fishing village.

EGGS ON RUNNING BOARD THROUGH 14-MILE TRIP

Lewis Grant has a Ford coupe and leaves it in the yard until his garage is finished. Some kind hen laid two eggs on the running board, but driver Grant did not notice them and jumping in the car, rode seven miles out in the country to a farm house, after three bags of potatoes for the winter. It was over a rough road and coming back home, getting the potatoes into the house he saw the two eggs on the running board and wondered what made them stay on after traveling 14 miles. That's some stunt for eggs. Mr. Grant is hunting for the hen so he can thank her for his breakfast. It doesn't happen very often that a hen will pick out a Lizzie for a nest. All his friends on Board street were kidding him about having a hen to find the coune and to lay his morning breakfast. He said that hen knew it was a Ford and picked out a good car. Some one threw him the bird cage!

Edward Morgan is boss painter at Rogers' boat yard.

The three selectmen of the town of Groton, Clark Whaley, Henry Latham, Conrad Kretzer met in the town hall Saturday morning for 2 hours to make voters for the coming election. A record was broken as 65 voters were made. It took only 45 minutes to make 45 voters. The smallest fireman in the state, Charles Ellis lost out to become a voter, forgot what day the selectmen came but he was disappointed being a strong rooter for Smiling Al Smith to win. John Ashly said: "You lost out Charles, but you will have another chance next month to become a voter!" It is the largest number of voters made in Noank since Grover Cleveland won for president in 1892.

Roy Scaplen is a clerk at the A. & P. store. A customer came in the store for 1 1-2 pounds of pork. The champion cutter got out the long knife looked the pork over but in some way the knife handle was slippery and the knife went into his left hand cutting deep gashes.

Howard Martin was a caller in Ocum Sunday.

Fred Clark of Westfield, Mass., has set up a portable sawmill in the woods of the Highland farm. Railroad ties are turned out and lumber is shipped out to different parts of the state. Twenty-five men are employed and it is the first portable saw worked in the village, making it handy for the lobstermen to get out their timber for their pots instead of going out of town to get work done.

Miss Puth Fitch, who has been dismissed from Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London, where she was a patient for many weeks, is spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Thomas Pollard, in Mystic.

Frank Carpenter has been in Hartford recently.

HEALED HIS VARICOSE VEINS NO OPERATION

"For many years I suffered from varicose veins; and to such an extent that in order to keep on my feet at all I had to have my legs continually bandaged. Doctors advised an operation as the only relief. About a year ago I heard of Rabalm. Although without faith in it at that time or any hope of help from any such source, I tried it, and had used it only a short time when I was relieved of the intense pain, and the bunches of knotted veins were almost entirely reduced. Today, one year after use of Rabalm, there has been no recurrence of varicose veins, although I am on my feet continually about my store. I am pleased to offer this testimonial that others who are suffering from varicose veins may know of this wonderful Rabalm." Mr. Henry A. Mayer, Grocer, 274 Washington Street, Gloucester, Mass.

GROSS NEGLIGENCE IN MOST GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENTS

During the past ten years 20,427 persons have been killed and 57,625 seriously injured in highway grade crossing accidents on major steam railroads. The figures do not include grade crossing accidents occurring on smaller steam railroads or on electric and oil lines.

These figures were made public by the American Road Builders' association as part of its national highway safety campaign. The association points out that while the number of fatalities has increased steadily since 1918, the comparative number of deaths has been decreased. In 1918 a total of 1,852 persons were killed in these accidents as compared with 2,371 in 1927. In 1927 there were 94 persons killed per 10,000 motor vehicles as compared with 1.84 persons in 1918.

The decrease in highway grade crossing fatalities has been the result of educational measures taken by railroads and co-operating organizations, the American Road Builders' association declares. "A continued reduction is dependent upon the practice of caution on the part of motor vehicle drivers. Courtesy and caution are the two fundamentals which will eventually bring a noteworthy decrease in all types of highway accidents."

"It is a regrettable fact," the American Road Builders' association continues "that 238 persons were killed at grade crossings last year as a result of running into the side of moving trains. This demonstrates the gross negligence on the part of some drivers when approaching dangerous crossings. Most inexcusable deaths result from attempts to beat trains to a crossing or approaching at a high speed where the view is obstructed in some degree."

In summarizing grade crossing conditions on major steam railroads, the American Road Builders' association stated that at the beginning of 1927, there were 208,533 unprotected crossings in the United States; 6,148 crossings were protected by gates, 7,760 were guarded by watchmen, 6,421 had both audible and visible signals, 5,308 were guarded by audible signals only, and 2,204 had visible signals only. Of the 235,128 grade crossings in the United States, only 27,747 had any kind of protection.

DIES WHILE LEARNING TO DRIVE AUTOMOBILE

Conrad Hester about 55, a life long resident of Quaker Hill in the town of Waterford, died Monday morning at the wheel of his automobile which he was learning to drive on the Norwich-New London highway about opposite the office of the Uncasville-Shelton company. The excitement under which Mr. Hester labored while driving the car brought on a fatal heart attack.

With him in the machine at the time was Duncan Roberts, a sailor from the submarine base who had been teaching Hester to drive and they had come to this city and were on their way back. Hester suddenly called out to Roberts: "Take the wheel, quick," but before the sailor could do anything the machine ran off the road into a stone wall.

Hester was first taken to the office of Dr. H. N Rasmussen, who was out, and he was then taken to Dr. John J. Donohue's office where the physician soon arrived and found the man dead.

Permission was given by Acting Medical Examiner Donohue to have the body removed and it was taken to Hester's home in Quaker Hill. Coroner Edward G. McKay in this city was notified.

Besides his widow, Hester leaves eight children, Mrs. Mildred Hallisey of New London, William, Esther, Matilda, Ernest, Raymond, Margaret and Catherine, all of Quaker Hill; three brothers, Jacob and George, also of Quaker Hill and a sister, Mrs. Jane Tourgee of New London.

Teacher Not Involved

The mother of a Laurel Hill boy who was beaten by schoolmates for wearing a Hoover button denies a previously published report that his teacher in the Laurel Hill school refused to let him come into the school room until the button was taken off. The boy is now wearing a Hoover button to school, just as other boys in the school wear Smith buttons.

The giraffe's chief weapons are his heels.

MISSIONARY SPEAKERS AT HANOVER MASS MEETING

An audience of about 175 men and women welcomed Miss Sylvina C. Norton and Miss Carolyn D.Simley at a mass meeting at the Hanover church Sunday evening. Miss Gertrude Ladd presided. William G. Park led the singing. Announcement was made of the four coming meetings of special interest to Congregationalists. On Tuesday, Oct. 2, at Center church, Hartford, there will be organized a new Council of Congregational Women of Connecticut, which will combine the branches of the old Woman's Board of Missions and the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary union. Every church in the state is to send representatives. On Oct. 6, 7, 8, an all New England Regional meeting, the first of its kind, will be held at Manchester, N. H., to promote the denomination's world wide interests. On Oct. 16, 17, 18, the annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions will be held at Bridgeport and in November the state conference at Greenwich. Miss Norton gave an illuminating resume of the effective work carried on in different parts of this country, helping individuals and communities to attain high ideals and service. Miss Simley graphically related conditions in India where she lived for eight years. Both speakers imparted a vital interest in world service, illustrating in themselves the sentiment of the commission on missions which is "Our whole constituency back of our whole enterprise with its whole heart, mind and will."

The second meeting in a series of six to be addressed by these speakers is to be held today (Tuesday) at Danielson.

FATALLY STRICKEN IN FRANKLIN SQUARE STORE

Mrs. George E. Campbell, 44, of 176 Norwich avenue, Taftville, who was employed at the Lincoln store on Franklin street, as a saleswoman, was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while waiting on a customer at the store about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and died in the hospital about four hours later without having regained consciousness. When Mrs. Campbell fell unconscious behind the counter, Dr. Paul H. Gadie was summoned and he at once had her taken to the Backus hospital.

Mrs. Campbell was the daughter of Adam and Caroline Echert and was born in Pennsylvania on April 30, 1884. She was united in marriage with George E. Campbell at Yantic on July 16, 1902. For the past 17 years she had been a resident of Taftville where she was very well known.

Surviving her are her husband, mother, two daughtgrs, Mrs. Harry Bowers and Mrs. George Kinder, both of this city, a brother, John Echert of Taftville and three sisters, Mrs. E. Larkin, Mrs. Philip Baumgartner and Mrs. Charles Kern, all of Norwich.

PAYS FINE AND COSTS ON "PEEPER" CHARGE

After he had pleaded guilty to a technical charge of breach of the peace, Ralph Baker, 19, an employe at the Norwich State hospital, accused of looking into a window at the Thoma residence, No. 19 Lorenzo street, was fined $20 and costs in the city court Monday morning. He denied that he was peeping. He was arrested early Sunday morning after he was said to have looked through a window at the Thoma house. Occupants of the house followed him down Boswell avenue as far as 10th street where he was arrested by the police.

Baker was detected looking through a window by Walter Thoma who was sitting in the room listening to the radio. Thoma and Leo Couture followed Baker down along Boswell avenue and North Main street towards the city until policemen were secured who arrested the man. Through error it was reported that Reinhold Thoma, who is a supernumerary policeman, accommanied his brother, but the man with Walter Thoma was Couture.

Baker paid his fine and costs.

SMALL WILLIMANTIC BOY HAS HIS LEG BROKEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 17—Anthony, 2 1-2 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Russo of 18 Wilson street, sustained a fracture of the right leg just above the knee shortly after 7 o'clock tonight when run over by a sedan which was being backed out of a driveway on Wilson street by the owner, Euclid Pimpare, 29, of 1221 Main street. Pimpare backed the car out to allow another machine to use the driveway and the first that he and others at the scene knew of the presence of the child was when it was run over and screamed. The right rear wheel of the car passed over the leg. The boy was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital and attended by Dr. Charles A. Jenkins. The accident was investigated by Officer Lariviere.

PRESTON CITY BAPTISTS' NEW COMMUNION TABLE

An interesting part of the services at the Preston City Baptist church on Sunday was the dedication of the new communion table bought and presented to the church by the Woman's Bible class. The class motto, "Stand Fast in the Faith," was used as the text of the morning by Rev. J. A. Smith, the pastor. The church was attractively trimmed in red and white, the class colors. The class slogan, "Unity Is Strength," in gilt letters occupied a conspicuous place in the center of the decorations.

THREE-CENT ELECTRICITY AVAILABLE TO ALL CUSTOMERS

The present electric rate is 10 cents per kilowatt-hour for almost all of the residence customers.

The new rate consists of an energy charge of 3 cents a kilowatt hour, the rest of the revenue of the Department being obtained by means of a charge for the first five kilowatt-hours of $1.35 and upward, depending upon the number of rooms in the home of the customer.

Energy at only 3 cents a kilowatt-hour is available to all customers for additional uses, such as lighting, toasters, percolators, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, radios, refrigerators, ranges, water heaters and other appliances. This additional electricity, sold to the same customers through the same lines, meters and services, will add little to the overhead cost and so will not cost as much per kilowatt hour as the present supply.

As previously stated, the Department cannot prosper unless the new rate proves satisfactory to the customers and sales increase.

New and attractive rates are also being offered for power services. The stimulation of wholesale sales tends to lower our unit costs and therefore will tend toward lower future rates to all customers.

OLD RATE
10c per Kilowatt hour.
NEW RATE
2 per Kilowatt hour, plus the initial charge.

SMITH FAVORS "PRINCIPLE" OF THE M'NARY-HAUGEN BILL

In His Address at Omaha the Democratic Presidential Candidate Attacked the Republican Party For Its Action on Farm Relief—Favors the Bill Twice Vetoed by President Coolidge, But Would Not Limit Himself "to the Exact Mechanics and Method Embodied in That Bill"—Would Have a Non-Partisan Commission of Farm Leaders and Students of the Problem Determine the Exact Method of Relief.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 18—(AP)—Leveling an attack on the republican party, President Coolidge, and his opponent Herbert Hoover, for their stand on farm relief, Governor Smith in the heart of the grain belt, to open his speech-making campaign for the presidency, declared tonight that he stood for the "principle" of the Mc. Nary-Haugen bill, twice vetoed by President Coolidge.

"What remains of the McNary-Haugen bill is a mere matter of method," the democratic nominee asserted in an address prepared for delivery in the auditorium here, "and I do not limit myself to the exact mechanics and method embodied in that bill."

"This is my first speech of the campaign. It is however, not a new experience to me. In the state of New York I have led the democratic party in five state campaigns.

"New York for the major part of the time for the past 30 years, was a strong republican state. That in four of those campaigns I led to victory is in no small part due to the fact that I talked frankly to the people of that state, in very plain and understandable language. Beginning here tonight and continuing throughout the national campaign I propose to continue that policy.

"The function of a political party is to ascertain the popular will on the subjects pressing the country for solution. It is the expression of that popular will as it is understood by the parties, which brings about the adoption of a platform which, aside from defining fundamental issues is a promise, that if entrusted with power, the party will attempt the solution of these problems along the lines laid down by the declaration.

"If we accept that as true, and as a sound doctrine, then this battle for the presidency of the United States demands consideration of the issues set forth in the platforms of the two great parties.

"In the discussion of these issues it is fair to look back over the years and compare performance with promise, to the end that the people may have before them the record, and be able to appraise the sincerity of the platform and the party in its true light.

"The republican candidate for president in his speech of acceptance, referring to the republican administration, said:

"The record of these seven and one-half years constitutes a period of rare courage and leadership and constructive action. Never has a political party been able to look back upon a similar period with more satisfaction.

"Here in Omaha tonight, in the center of one of the great farming regions of this country, I propose to discuss that republican record of over seven years and a half on the important question of farm relief.

"I challenge the statement that there has been courage or leadership or constructive action on farm relief. I assert that there is not the slightest basis upon which the republican party can indulge in any degree of self-satisfaction, in looking back over its record of seven and a half years on the question of agriculture.

"On the contrary, I charge that they violated their platform promises, that they deceived the farmers, that they did nothing whatever to contribute in the slightest degree to relieve the distress or promote the welfare of the farmers.

"As far as the president himself is concerned" he said, "Senator Norris (republican independent of Nebraska) sums it all up in a few words: 'He stood against congress in the measures that they offered but made no constructive suggestions himself, even after the exhaustive study he claims the administration gave the subject.'"

"He might well have added," Governor Smith went on, "that Mr. Hoover as chief adviser of the last two administrations upon the subject of agriculture, assumed a direct responsibility for the hostility and inaction of the administration and continues to assume that responsibility by his full-some indorsement of the record of the Coolidge policies."

In preparing an advance draft of his speech tonight, the democratic nominee deviated from his usual practice of not doing so to give newspapermen accompanying them material for their first editions. He told them that while he did not expect to read his text, he proposed to deliver it in substance, at times probably modifying the language but not the thought.

On his arrival here this morning for the first of six speeches he will deliver in the west and northwest before he returns to Albany two weeks hence, the New York governor was cheered by a throng that jammed the Union station and lined viaducts nearby. He was taken in a roundabout way to his hotel through noisy crowds that lined the streets along the 26-block route through the business section.

Various democratic leaders from Nebraska and Iowa called at his suite during the day to report on political conditions in this section, and for a few minutes the nominee was present at a luncheon given in Mrs. Smith's honor at the Fontenelle hotel by democratic women of this vicinity. He also made an automobile tour through the stockyards district where he was wildly acclaimed by workmen, and through a suburban residential section.

Governor Smith's departure for Oklahoma City where he will speak Thursday night, before going to Denver and swinging into the northwest, has been set for 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Stops will be made at Lincoln and Topeka, the capitals of Nebraska and Kansas, and at nearly a score of other points in the two states. Topeka is the home city of Senator Curtis, the republican vice-presidential nominee.

B. J. BURTON COMMITTED SUICIDE IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Spt 18—(AP)—Burton J. Baldwin, former tutor of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and until last year owner of the Muenchinger-King hotel in Newport, ended his life by taking poison in the Dreyfuss hotel early this morning.

His body was discovered this afternoon when a maid, Mary Capponcalli, saw a ray of artificial light under the door of his room and became suspicious. She summoned the owner of the hotel and after finding Baldwin stretched lifeless on the bed he notified the police.

Lieut. John A. Murphy of the central station and Dr. William H. Magill, medical examiner, found a quantity of poison in Baldwin's room. The former hotel man had left stamped letters addressed to friends and members of his family. Baldwin came to Newport first as a tutor to Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Later he became manager of the Muenchinger-King hotel when it was owned by Mrs. Amanda S. Muenchinger. At her death she deeded the property to him. Baldwin operated the hotel until last year when it became involved in financial difficulties and was placed in the custody of Cornelius C. Moore, Newport attorney, who represents its creditors.

Mrs. Martha Ekeberg Baldwin divorced her husband in 1921 when she was given a decree in the superior court of Newport on grounds of extreme cruelty. Two minor children were allotted to her care. With their mother they now live in New York.

Baldwin registered at the hotel last Sunday night. He seemed preoccupied, according to the clerk, who registered him.

SEEKS TO BE ACKNOWLEDGED AS AN ILLEGITIMATE CHILD

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Mrs. Aimee Henry Morecroft, divorced wife of Prof. John Harold Morecroft of Columbia university, through counsel today argued a motion for a judgment to compel Mrs. Mary Martha Parker Taylor to acknowledge her as an illegitimate child. Mrs. Taylor is the widow of Archibald H. Taylor, Port Chester, N. Y., and Boston lawyer.

Mrs. Morecroft claims a remainder interest in the estate of the late James Parker, Mrs. Taylor's grandfather, and Richard T. Parker, Mrs. Taylor's father, and an interest in deeds of trust made for the benefit of Mrs. Taylor.

She is seeking to have Mrs. Taylor execute a birth certificate to be filed with the bureau of vital statistics in New Brunswick, Canada, where Mrs. Morecroft alleges she was born in Rothesay in June, 1891. She names Allen Thorndike Rice, a first cousin of Mrs. Taylor, who was then Miss Parker, as her father.

Supreme Court Justice Callahan, who heard the motion, expressed doubt as to the legality of the proceedings but ordered counsel to submit briefs Friday.

Mrs. Morecroft was divorced in Mexico. He married Miss Marian Patterson last April and is now living in Palisade, N. J.

REP. CANDIDATE HOOVER RETURNING TO WASHINGTON

HOOVER TRAIN ENROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—Turning from an appeal to New Jersey republican leaders to make the present political campaign one based on issues and not a duel of personalities, Herbert Hoover tonight sped back to Washington to await the time for his second sally into the country.

The appeal, made in a speech made extemporaneously by the candidate at Newark, was coupled with a laudation of the virtues Hoover said that President Coolidge had brought into government. The nominee also spoke of the need of having only two major political parties and added that he would "leave it to you to remark what has happened to our political opponents, through lack of unity."

From Newark, the candidate moved quickly by automobile through Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Princeton and a dozen smaller places to Trenton where he boarded his train to return to Washington.

Western Railroad Dispute Unsettled

Federal Board of Mediation Has Withdrawn From the Controversy.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18—(AP)—The federal board of mediation this afternoon had terminated its efforts toward bringing about an agreement between the western railroads and the trainmen and conductors unions.

Samuel E. Winslow, chairman of the federal board, issued the following statement:

"In behalf of the board, the mediation proceedings have been terminated for the reason that the carriers and the employes' organizations were unable to reach an agreement."

E. P. Curtis, president of the Order of Railway Conductors and A. F. Whitney, head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said no immediate action on the strike vote could be taken and indicated the next move should come from the government. They promised an official statement shortly of labor's position in the wage controversy. J. W. Higgins, chairman of the board of railway managers, had no statement to make concerning the carriers attitude.

When the mediation board had been in session with union and railway committees several days without reporting any progress toward an agreement, the feeling grew that failure of the attempting at mediation would result in submission of the controversy to President Coolidge for arbitration. The president, it was believed, might appoint a fact finding commission to consider the demands of the brotherhoods for wage increases ranging from 10 to 18 per cent. The roads had countered with offers of about 7 1-2 per cent increases.

The brotherhood delegates are said to have behind them the club of a strike vote taken before the parley commenced, with a walkout of 70,000 trainmen on the 55 western railroads a possible eventuality.

SEARCHING FOR SURVIVORS OF CATTLE SHIP MANASOO

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Sept. 18—(AP)—Airplanes flew above Georgian Bay in Lake Huron today in vain search for more survivors of the cattle ship Manasoo, which sank as though yanked beneath the stormy waters by some mysterious monster of the deep.

Five survivors were recovering in a hospital, saved after pitching on a leaking raft for two days and a half. One member of the crew was known to be dead, and 17 other men were believed to have been lost.

The Manasoo, a converted passenger ship formerly known as the Macassa, had made its last regular trip for the season but was pressed into service for a special trip to transport 46 head of cattle from West Bay, Manitoulin Island, to Owen Island.

Early Saturday morning a storm was encountered, but the boat rode easily and no concern was felt. The cattle were in special stalls to prevent their shifting, and most of the crew went to bed.

Suddenly Captain John McKay, on the bridge, noticed a loss of buoyancy and a distinct list and sent First Mate Oliver Long down to investigate. Before Long could report back, or even determine the nature of the trouble, the ship was plunging down into the water with all hands who did not chance to be on deck.

MYSTERY RESULTED FROM CONFUSION IN HOSPITAL

DETROIT, Sept. 18—(AP)—A few moments confusion in a hospital five years ago that changed the destiny of the life of a two weeks old child and gave rise to a mystery which never has been solved, was described today in circuit court.

The incident which may mean the separation forever of a father from his son, forms the basis of a $200,000 suit brought by Willia mC. Greatrex, Detroit, against the Evangelical Deaconess hospital for the loss of his child.

Testifying in the trial today Mrs. Purcell Vernier, the nurse who gave Greatrex's boy baby to Alfonso Viemminck, Belgian immigrant, in the belief that she was placing the infant in the arms of its father, told of the tragic incident.

It was in September, 1923 that the mistake occurred, she had been on a vacation, the nurse recalled. While she was away the Greatrex baby was taken to the hospital for an operation following the death of its mother at its birth. About that time a son was born in the hospital to Eva Viemminck, unwed mother.

State Rests In Trial Of "Ice Box" Bandits

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 18—The state completed the structure of evidence against Albert J. Raymond and Roland G. Lalone of Worcester, Mass., alleged "ice-box" bandits and murderers of State Policeman Irving H. Nelson in Pomfret on the evening of April 6, in establishing its case the state used the testimony of 69 witnesses, several of whom were recalled since the trial got underway at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon of last week.

The state rested at 4:40 o'clock and in the intervening ten minutes to the time of adjournment until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, the defense called to the stand Lieutenant Rose V. Urquhart of the Danielson barracks. He was under questioning by Attorney Moynihan of the defense at the time of adjournment.

The evidence of the state as it now stands is based on a sequence of incidents and identifications aimed to show that Raymond and Lalone, with one other male companion, were in possession of a Willys-Knight sedan, similar to one bearing the Massachusetts registration markers 401976 stolen from Walnut street in Worcester on the afternoon of April 4, and the property of Frances J. Higgins of Worcesters.

About that time there was a series of hold-ups in and about Springfield in which the clerks and proprietors of markets were locked in ice-boxes while the robberies took place.

Two identifications of the accused were made by Springfield residents. One was by Officer Raymond P. Gallagher who figured in a shooting affray with alleged bandits in Springfield on the afternoon of April 6, and the other Mrs. Bessie B. Ascher, proprietress of a haberdashery where two young men answering the description of the accused purchased caps. The caps have been introduced in court for identification.

Rev. Felix O'Neill testified to the effect that he saw a Willys-Knight sedan coming toward Stafford Springs from Springfield and the machine was next seen at the filling station conducted on West Main street, this city, by Harold Lester, son of the proprietor. Lester claimed identification of Raymond. The presence of the sedan in Pomfret and the shooting of Officer Nelson, who was stationed there to apprehend the occupants of such a machine and the passing of the machine through the city was testified to by several witnesses including local police. The car was next seen by at least three witnesses travelling through Putnam and again taking a back road toward Webster, Mass., by two witnesses. The car was seen in Webster, or its immediate vicinity, just prior to and shortly after it had been abandoned on Brandon road, near Dudley. Witnesses testified that Raymond and Lalone were seen in the U and I lunch cart in Webster later that evening and that they subsequently engaged a taxicab in which they were driven to Worcester. The state introduced a wealth of testimony, practically all of which was subjected to cross-examination, as to the identification of Raymond and Lalone as the two men seen in various localities under question and in police line-ups at the Springfield headquarters.

The state called to the stand one of its outstanding witnesses today in the person of Roy B. Pettingill, member of the Connecticut state police headquarters at Hartford. Officer Pettengill, who was a former police officer in Marlboro, this state, said that he was placed in a cell at the county jail at Brooklyn in following orders by Commissioner Robert T. Hurley, on the afternoon of Friday, May 8. Later on that afternoon Raymond and Lalone, who had been extradicted from Massachusetts to Connecticut here, were brought in and placed in cells on either side of the witness so that he could hear their conversation. They told him that they had "stolen a horse and buggy" and asked him if he had ever heard of the "ice-box" bandits. They then proceeded to tell him that there were two such bandits and described the manner of robberies perpetrated by the bandits. Raymond said "These bandits also shot a Connecticut state cop. Don't you think they are bad?" Witness did not reply and Lalone said, "I'll say they are." Something was then said about it being "easy to shoot a gat at 50 feet." One of the youths taunted: "You were not so good. You missed once," and the reply was, "I didn't get the first one but what about the second?" The trend of subsequent conversation was concerned with "two" who went to New York and wonder as to whether they got "knocked off." Mention was made of "jobs" in Clinton and Providence and Oxford and the number of times they were chased by cops in Worcester.

The following day, May 19, Officer Pettengill, who read from his notebook and stated that the conversation of the two men was verbal insofar as it related to the case, stated that Lalone said he was afraid the state had more evidence than was given in Boston, this evidently referring to the extradiction hearing before Governor Fuller. Raymond asked witness if he knew the disdence from Springfield to Willimantic. Lalone said: "I'm sorry Gallagher did not get what the other fellow got." Raymond mentioned that the officers said he had stopped in Willimantic to get gas and Lalone said, "One sure thing, that kid in Willimantic didn't see me." One of the accused said: "God help Gallagher if we ever get out," and both agreed they would take the Ford and drive all the "dicks" in Springfield off the sidewalk. There was also conversation, accordin gto the witness, that the lawyers had promised that the true story would go no further, and doubt expressed if the Connecticut police would bring in the shots and gat from the stonewall. The notes quoted Lalone as saying that he was going to have his sister say she saw him at 8:15 o'clock on "that" night. Raymond said he had better make it later and Lalone replied that he would tell her differently when he saw her. One of them said that "if our lawyers win this case they are going some" and they would "show" those cops in Springfield. They expressed some fear of the woman who sold them caps in Springfield. There was also talk as to the kind and speed of the Connecticut state police motorcycles. Lalone said, "How fast did we go in the car?" and

11.42 INCH RAINFALL WITH WIND STORM AT SAVANNAH

Wind Approximated 50 Miles an Hour at Savannah—Both Charleston and Savannah Are Almost Isolated by Disrupted Wire Service—Weather Bureau Predicts That the Storm Will Pass to Sea Near Hatteras, N. C.—National Guard Has Been Called Out in Florida and Porto Rico.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 18—(AP)—The tropical disturbance passed up the Georgia and Carolina coasts today toward Hatteras, N. C., where the Atlanta weather bureau predicted it probably would pass into the sea.

A tremendous rainfall accompanied the storm. Savannah, Ga., with 11.42 inches, appeared to have gotten the worst of the deluge, although Charleston, S. C., reported a rainfall of 7.18 inches in 20 hours.

Winds of approximately 50 miles an hour at Savannah and 48 at Charleston, were reported. Both cities were almost isolated by disrupted wire service.

Charleston reported its waterfront strewn with wreckage of small craft, small piers and with many trees blown down in different parts of the city.

Savannah and Brunswick said only minor damage was suffered from winds. The shipping held close in harbor, having been warned in advance of the coming of the storm.

The approach of the storm was heralded at Wilmington, N. C., by a heavy rain which had been falling since last night.

The observation bureau at Cape Henry thought that the storm would strike the Virginia capes late tonight or early tomorrow morning. Warnings had been sent to all south-bound vessels to stay within the capes until the storm passes.

The forecast issued by the government weather bureau today at Atlanta declared that the "dangerous storm will move northeast along the coast line."

C. F. Von Herrman, forecaster of the Atlanta weather bureau, said the storm had done the unexpected and instead of holding the course which would extend across Alabama and Georgia, it turned just north of Tampa.

He described it as having swept towards the northeast in a wide area, passing west of Jacksonville and swirling up the Georgia coast. He said that every storm that comes out of the southeast across southern Florida turns again in that direction before reaching the 30th line of latitude and that the weather men had expected that this storm would turn near that line, which strikes across Florida just south of Jacksonville, and running through Apalachicola, on the Florida west coast.

Member papers of the Associated Press along the coast and in Florida, which were cut off because of wide devastation, sent news dispatches through radio stations at Atlanta and Charlotte, N. C.

FOOD RIOTS INCREASE ON ISLAND OF PORTO RICO

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 18—(AP)—Food riots are increasing in this hurricane stricken island. This was the word given to Henry M. Baker, national director of disaster relief for the Red Cross, soon after his arrival here today. Mr. Baker brought five assistants with him on the U. S. destroyer Gilmer and they at once plunged into the work of organizing relief measures.

Mayors of a dozen towns were among the first to await upon Mr. Baker. They told him of the desperate plight of the communities and of the despair of the people who have thus far lacked relief. They begged for something, either money or food to take back with them.

"We cannot go home empty-handed. The people will mob us," was their common statement.

The relief party found that reports which had come through from various sections of the island tended to confirm the first estimates of a death list of 1,000 and a property loss of around $100,000,00. With about one-third of the island heard from, the list of known dead was 314. Some of the worst hit sections had not reported.

Tales of unusual tragedies began to come in from all directions. At Cayey a mother was found with a child in each arm. All three had been almost cut in two by flying sheets of zinc roofing. Lieutenant Pollard of the U. S. navy, who was in Cayey through the storm, said today that the known dead there total 64. Previous estimates had placed the number at 50.

The boy was unharmed, except for one discolored eye which he said resulted from a blow one of the kidnapers struck him just before they released him.

He was found by a filling station attendant to whom the boy had gone after his four abductors had turned him loos from their automobile near Lockport.

REPORT OF FINANCES MADE BY SELECTMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON Sept 18—Interesting figures relative to the financial condition of the town, just ahead of the annual town meeting, were made available at the office of the selectmen today. While the town, following a fixed policy providing for the annual retirement of a certain percentage of its bonded indebtedness has paid off $5,000 in school bonds and $7,000 of prior bond issuees in the past fiscal year, a total of $12,900, the past year has not been one in which a net reduction of debt has been possible, due to unexpected appropriations for improvements not provided for in the annual budget, and to the fact that rebates from expected tax money was made to Powdrell and Alexander and the Connecticut Mills company in adjusting matters in dispute.

The following statement prepared by Arthur A. Dean, clerk in the office of the selectmen, relative to town finances likely will be of interest to all taxpayers:

1927-1928 current operation $154,-969.41; retirement of bonds $12,000; capital outlay $2,961.89; tax refunds $1,651.43; total $171,582.73.

Raised by taxation, March 1928 budget $172,229.69; school street drain, not provided by tax levy $2,344.54; total $173,927.27.

The town balance account, current assets as related to current liabilities show a reduction in the debit balance of $6,839.96. Tax revisions and abatements as shown in the report, account for a loss in the current assets of $3,-793.09; the School street drain, not covered by tax levy for this report, is accountable for a further reduction of $2,344.54; and a new, twenty year roof necessary for the town hall building, presents a capital outlay of $875.00 that was not provided for in the budget. These amounts with the above balance $6,839.96 make $13,852.59, which, as will be seen, is over $1800, more than the $12,000, which it is the intention of the town to pay on its indebtedness. The bonds have been paid, but other indebtedness has been taken on by town vote which must be covered by later tax levies.

Property tax collections for the current year show $177,378.24 and interest of $1,779.61; oiling streets accounts for $995.22 and fees for $56.60, of collected revenue, which is considerably over $5,000 more than the budget property tax money and the credits allowed. The property taxes show collections for the years 1923-1926 of full 98 per cent. and the 1927 tax is collected (July 31st) 1928 to better than 91 per cent.

There are no personal taxes due. The cleanup of personal taxes early in the year, after charging off (abatements and erasing by the selectmen) $426.00 of back years uncollectible, moved aways, worthy poor and other-wise and the usual percentage of current year corrections and adjustments $956.00, making a total of $856.00 in collection of personal tax assets, still shows a net gain of $81.78 over the $526 credited in the 1927 report as due from personal taxes, $7,737.75 becomes the total income from that source. The personal tax penalties, at one dollar each, for payment delayed beyond January 14th (60 days) amounted to $295.00 and are included in above gross amount.

SEN. BINGHAM TO SPEAK AT THOMPSON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 18—United States Senator Hiram Bingham, one of Connecticut's delegation in congress, is to deliver the address of the day when Quinebaug Pomona grange meets with Quinatisset grange at Thompson next Saturday. The meeting is to be an open air one, starting at 10 a. m., standard time, and the morning period will be given over to such business matters that await attention. There is to be a basket luncheon at 11:30, lemonade and coffee to be served by the committee. The formal program is scheduled to begin at 1 p. m. In addition to the address by Senator Bingham, who is a granger, there is to be a special musical program, including some selections by a professional quartet. The orchestra that is to play during the afternoon is to be available for dancing at the conclusion of the afternoon's program. At this meeting members of the grange are permitted to invite their friends.

Chief John McFarland shared with others who were in touch with the matter last night, the opinion that two men picked up as suspicious characters in the business section Monday evening were here for no good purpose. These men giving their names as James Murphy, 22, of Worcester, and Pasquale Jacobi, 30, of Boston, visited so many different stores and acted in such an unusual manner as to arouse suspicion, and they were taken into custody by Night Officer Hosea Greene.

Before Officer Greene picked them up they had visited a men's furnishing store, in company with a third man that eluded being taken into custody for questioning, a jewelry store and a tire shop, buying nothing, but looking and trying on and inquiring. When Murphy and Jacobi were given a search by Chief McFarland and Officer Greene nothing was found upon their persons that did not appear to be properly theirs. Murphy had $28 and Jacobi $20. Their having money prevented their being held as vagrants and after a long verbal grilling they were released upon their agreement to leave town immediately. They hired a public service car to take them to Worcester, leaving here just before midnight. What became of the third man in the party remained unexplained today, but it is believed he made a quick getaway when he found the police were interested in the doings of himself and his companions.

Stories Murphy and Jacobi told Chief McFarland, as to being given a ride from East Hartford to Danielson by some motorist who happened along did not dove-tail very well with their quest of automobile tires at a place in Union street, and there were other lame details in their explanation of how they happened to be in Danielson and their strange actions during the time they were visiting local stores.

This was a busy day for the entry clerks at the Brooklyn fairgrounds, which will be seething with life Wednesday and Thursday, the exhibition days of the Windham County Agricultural society. Entries today insured the show being up to its usual standard. Granges and business men will have exhibits as will scores of individuals. Many of the exhibits were in course of preparation this afternoon. The early displays would indicate that the rainy spring and summer did not operate against the production in the county towns of as fine vegetables and fruits as have been shown at Brooklyn in a number of years.

The midway this year promises to be as varied in its attractions as ever and to hold a great deal to interest patrons of the fair. However the long standing rule that questionable games of all sorts are barred at the Brooklyn fair will be as rigidly enforced this year as ever in the past, and state police officers will be on hand to see that now concession man oversteps the bounds set by the fair management.

About 60 women came out this afternoon for the missionary rally at the Westfield Congregational church. During the rally Mrs. Herbert E. Keech sang two solos, with Miss Amelia Hutchins as accompanist at the piano. Mrs. Harding W. Gaylord led the responses, while the hymns were announced by Mrs. Helen S. Lowe. Miss Marion D. Chollar was leader of the meeting.

Miss Sylvina C. Norton, president of the Home Missionary union of Connecticut, spoke on the subject of the Council of Congregational Women of Connecticut, and explained relative to plans for the formation of the new council of Congregational women to be formed in Hartford in October. Another speaker was Miss Carolyn D Smiley, one of the secretaries of the American board. Miss Smiley detailing among other things and at some length conditions that Miss Rachel Barnes will encounter in the missionary work she is about to undertake in India. Last year Miss Barnes was a member of the faculty of Killingly High school, and recently was commissioned at her home in Richmond Mass., to do missionary work in the Far East. This afternoon's meeting was one of the most interesting and enthusiastic held here in a long time.

The Brooklyn Savings bank will close this Wednesday at one o'clock p. m., to enable the employes to attend the Windham county fair at Brooklyn.—adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bard of Detroit are expected here Wednesday to visit with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney W Bard at Brooklyn. The Bard brothers are twins and in observance of their birthday anniversary they are to entertain relatives and friends at a social and dance next Friday evening, the anniversary date.

Irritating static conditions spoiled the broadcast of the speech of Candidate Herbert Hoover from Newark last evening, much to the disappointment of many here.

Miss Sylvina C. Norton president of the Home Missionary union of Connecticut, and Miss Carolyn D. Smiley, a secretary of the American board, were speakers this afternoon at a missionary rally in the ladies' parlor of the Westfield Congregational church.

D. Fred Kenworthy, registrar, said that a re-check of those admitted as electors last Saturday shows a total of 404 new voters. Of these 179 were men, 102 of them from the first district, 67 from the second district and 9 from the third district. The new women voters number 225, and of this number 149 are from the first district, 72 from the second and 4 from the third.

George A. Masters of Providence was a visitor with friends in Danielson today.

Persons en route to the Brooklyn fair are advised to go to Brooklyn from Danielson via Wauregan or via Allen hill, the direct route over the trunk line presenting difficult traveling conditions on account of highway construction work.

The election of William H. Putnam of Hartford as a member of the directorate of the Windham County National bank was to fill a vacancy caused by the death, about a year ago, of Colonel William A. Gaston of Boston and for years one of the most prominent of New England bankers.

Tons of rock have been torn out by blasting east of the Gallup farm on the Providence route in making a new highway layout intended to eliminate curves an dmake the new roadway safer for travel.

These are days when office holders of the two political parties are digging down to produce contributions for the respective party campaign funds, for much money will be needed the coming fall to finance town, state and national campaigns.

Traveling men, among other non-resident patrons, have commented on what an exceptionally fine theatre for a town this size Danielson now has in the redecorated and re-equipped Orpheum, reopened last Thursday evening.

TOWN VOTES TO REPAIR PROVIDENCE ST. BRIDGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 18—Fifty electors of the town of Putnam met at a special town meeting to act upon the matter of which way the bridge at Providence street, spanning the Quinebaug river, would be repaired. The meeting was opened by Town Clerk Henry S. Benoit and City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan was elected moderator. First Selectman Clarence E. Pierce informed the voters that the bridge was dangerously unsafe and a report of its condition had been rendered the board of selectmen by the state highway department, accompanied by three ways in which it could be reconditioned and the hazard eliminated.

The plans were termed as schemes. The first would cost the town about $2,300, the second, $6,000 and the third, a new concrete arch bridge, was estimated to cost about $35,000. The first scheme was given no consideration as was the plan of a new bridge, since the town is facing many serious problems which will involve the spending of several thousand dollars. It was unanimously voted to adopt scheme No. 2, which would safely recondition the present bridge as well as prolong its life for a term of about 20 years.

It was also voted to appropriate $6,-000 and to authorize the board of selectmen to issue town notes to that extent. The meeting lasted but ten minutes.

CORN MASH BLOCKS SEWERS IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 18—Home distilleries today were adjudged the cause of the clogging up of the city sewers and preventing free drainage of the waste matters. The evidence of this was revealed by the test crib recently installed at the sewer outlet on Arch street. The crib was first erected by the city as a means to determine the amount of sewage passing daily into the river from Putnam, but the regular examinations of its beds and dials indicated that some foreign matter, other than the regular form of sewage is being dumped into the sewer and is preventing its operating.

An analysis of the material by the state and local engineers has revealed that corn mash and other ingred-ents used by the manufacturers of moonshine and other liquors is being dumped into the city sewers. A state engineer said today that corn mash has been deposited at the weir of the sewer crib more than a foot deep and is preventing the other sewage from registering as it flows into the river.

The Putnam police have started an investigation. Engineers working on the crib have volunteered their services and will trace the sewers by means of drawings and will easily find the persons using the city sewerage system as a means of disposing of their fermented waste.

The nature of the crime is very serious and the law provides for a stiff penalty in the event the offenders are apprehended and brought before the court for prosecution. City Engineer George W. Perry stated this afternoon that the clogging of the sewer outlet is a serious threat to the community's health and without the aid of the recently constructed crib, the violation would not have been discovered but would have continued until the outbreak of an epidemic.

During the period of time that elapses while the investigation is in progress a vigil will be kept at the sewer crib and reports will be made to the health and police officials. It was estimated this afternoon, with what evidence is already at hand about a fortnight's time will be needed to determine the origin of the dumping of cornmash into the sewers.

Rev. Nathan Burton former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Putnam was a Putnam visitor Tuesday.

Miss Gertrude Predell, a student at the Willimantic Normal school, was operated upon today for appendicitis at the Day Kimball hospital. Her condition was not regarded serious today.

With 408 newly enrolled voters of the town and city of Putnam, opinion was expressed today that one of the largest votes in the history of the community would be polled on election day. This was expressed by many today and was founded on the fact that such a large interest is being taken by the general public in the caucuses and other public meetings.

Work on the new bridge at Attawaugan is being rushed by the Providence contractors, who recently completed the two mile stretch of concrete highway. The bridge, like the road will be of concrete and will officially mark the completion of the road. The span is being placed over the little creek known as the Assawauga river and will replace the old iron bridge.

Preparations are now being made for the observance of Armistice of Armistice day, November 11, in a preliminary way by the Albert J. Breault post of V. F. W. The ex-soldiers are to hold their annual carnival and fair on this day and will also cooperate with the other patriotic societies in planning for a parade and ceremonies.

A general committee, composed of members of the organizations will meet to carry out the plans of Armistice day. Just to what extent the committee will go in the observance of the 10th anniversary of the ending of the World war is not known at present.

According to a health report received from City Health Officer Peter A. Gardner, conditions in Putnam have greatly improved over the reports of previous months. During the month of August there were but 10 cases of contagious disease and all were of a mild nature, measles predominated, there being eight cases reported. One case of mumps and one case of double pneumonia completed the list. The August report contained less diseases in the city than any previous month during the year. During the first half year Putnam was afflicted with an epidemic of measles that spread among a great number of families in the city and claimed two victims. The spread of disease was checked however by the sanitary conditions advanced by the health authorities with cooperation of the local physicians.

The weekly drill of the headquarters company of the 43rd, division of National Guard was held at the armory last evening. Close order drill and other routine made up the evening's drill of the peace time soldiers. Captain McGarry, commanding officer of the local outfit, said this afternoon that a waiting list of applicants desiring admission to the company is at the armory. The captain remarked that those who apply will be accepted only in the order of the application.

Robert M. Smith, superintendent of the New Haven division of the N. Y., N. H. and H. railroad, William E. Sault, assistant superintendent and members of the interstate commerce commission were in Putnam today making an inspection of the railroad property in this territory. The party arrived early this morning aboard the superintendent's special train, "Naugatuck." The group left Putnam for Thompson where a survey of the company's property in East Thompson was made. A return trip was made to North Grosvenordale and a similar inspection was made there. Late this afternoon the train bearing the railroad officials left for Norwich to inspect all property of the railroad in that city. The purpose of the visit was not made known by the officials.

Court records of the city of Putnam are still uninspected by the auditors of the state department of motor vehicles. Clerk of Courts A. Macdonald, Jr., said today that he is not aware of the date that state officials will make a check-up of his books, but feels assured that there will be little time lost by the auditors when they arrive in Putnam, as the books and records are up to date.

With the resuming of the trial of Raymond and Lalone, charged with murder in the first degree in Willimantic today several from Putnam departed for the Thread City to attend the session. Sergt Liard of the Putnam police and Special Officer Bechard left this morning upon a summons. Attorney Irving H. Miron, interested in the case, left this morning with the intentions of listening to the proceedings. The two Putnam police officers are witnesses for the state.

Thomas Kelly Jr., of Putnam through his counseyl A. Macdonald Jr., of Putnam, was granted a week's continuance in the Thompson town court last evening in order to prepare his case. Kelly is charged with operating under the influence of liquor. He was arrested after his employers' car figured in an accident in Wilsonville Saturday evening.

Albert Sparks and Maxwell Burry, injured in an automobile accident at Mechanicsville three weeks ago are still patients at the Day Kimball hospital. They are rapidly regaining their health but not sufficiently to warrant their being discharged from the hospital. Both Sparks and Burry are suffering from a number of fractures and other severe wounds received when their car crashed over the 40 foot embankment below the Mechanicsville bridge.

HERBERT HOOVER ON LABOR

In his address at Newark Herbert Hoover devoted his attention to labor and set forth his views in a manner that was particularly impressive and indicated his grasp of the situation.

Mr. Hoover speaks as one who has gone through the mill. He knows what it is to labor on the farm. He knows what it is to make his way as a wage earner. He knows what it is to serve as a manager and he knows what it means to be an employer of labor. He is thus well qualified to express his views concerning labor and to send home the idealisms he holds in regard to it.

He gave an interesting comparison of labor in this and other countries and showed how much better off the people in this country are in contrast to those in other lands, while his comparison of the purchasing power of the dollar was equally illuminating.

Showing what had been done for labor he pointed out that "real wages and standards of living of our labor have improved more during the last seven and a half years of republican rule than during any similar period in the history of this or any other country." That is a situation which cannot fail to show the desirability of maintaining similar condition through a continuance of republican rule.

Touching upon unemployment, Mr. Hoover covered that same period by declaring that "When we assumed direction of the government in 1921 there were five to six million unemployed on our streets * * * The republican administration at once undertook to find relief for this situation. A nationwide employment conference was called. I had the honor to be chairman of that conference. We set up a programme for the systematic organization of the whole business community to restore employment. Within a year we restored these 5,000,000 workers to employment. But we did more; we produced a fundamental programme which made this restored employment secure on foundations of prosperity. As a result wages and standards of living have during the last six and a half years risen to steadily higher levels." And as for the present unemployment Mr. Hoover declared it to be rapidly decreasing.

Touching upon immigration, Mr. Hoover rightly said that while the immigration law should be amended to overcome the hardship in families "the restriction upon immigration is a boon not only to those of my hearers who were born on American soil but to those who have come from old countries, for every one would suffer equally by the lowering of our wages and standards of living."

The warning which he issued against tariff tinkering is one which must make a strong appeal to this part of the country where industries are made possible because of the protection gained from the tariff. Take that away or modify it so that foreign industry will have a chance to compete with American industry and the results will be disastrous to American labor.

Mr. Hoover demonstrated his complete understanding of the labor situation and its problems and carried conviction when he set forth the manner in which he has dealt with such problems and the policies which he presented for facing them in the future. That he possesses the leadership that is needed at the helm of the ship of state was convincingly shown in this as well as in his acceptance speech.

BEGGING AUTO RIDES

Those who resort to hitch hiking are not restricted to any particular state or locality. They are to be found throughout the length and breadth of the country wherever the automobile driver is disposed to furnish them transportation.

In the state of New Jersey legislation has been adopted against such a practice for the purpose of breaking it up. There is a penalty for stopping drivers to ask for a ride and now the Pennsylvania Motor federation is planning to ask the legislature of that state to make it unlawful and provide a penalty for standing in the highways and soliciting rides from drivers.

Thus there is evidence that there is open opposition to this practice. It is perfectly evident that it is entirely within the power of the auto drivers themselves to end this nuisance if they so desire. There are plenty of instances which disclose the objections to it. Frequent are the cases where the solicitation of rides has resulted in the holding up of the driver, sometimes with serious physical results, while it is often disclosed that those who have been taken in for a lift have brought suit against the driver on trumped up charges or for damages following accidents. Such experiences are enough to cause most drivers to protect themselves by refusing to yield to the many requests. This doesn't mean that they are hard hearted, for they are probably found offering rides to those they know, but they react as a matter of self protection.

In Pennsylvania there is a feeling that such solicitations fall into the classification of a nuisance and as such should be dealt with by state law. Just because an appeal will be made for such legislative action does not necessarily mean that it will be granted but it indicates that sentiment is crystallizing against the practice. From that very fact alone there is a warning given to all auto drivers to so govern their decisions that the thumb jerkers will abandon the practice. It is, of course, clearly evident that if it was impossible to beg a ride there will be a prompt abandonment of such a method of getting transportation.

THE RHINELAND OCCUPATION

It is seldom that some question isn't interesting the countries of Europe. Just now, at the session of the league at Geneva, there is the demand for the evacuation of the Rhineland. Germany wants it. It believes that it will create better feeling if the French troops are withdrawn, and it feels that inasmuch as it has demonstrated that it proposes to carry out the terms imposed upon it in regard to reparations that such a step should be taken.

France is cautious. It appreciates the advantage it holds with its troops in the Rhine area and it is unwilling to give it up until it has been assured that it will not produce a reaction to its disadvantage. It is like the child who has previously gotten too near the fire. And yet there is evidence that there is a certain sentiment in France that some action should be taken, even though it is gradually put into operation, that will meet the German demand.

It is possible for France to appreciate that conditions in Germany must be regarded as satisfactory. It knows that Germany is meeting its obligations and it knows that economic conditions in that country have undergone marked improvement. It should welcome the betterment that is shown in Germany in regard to peace and the reconciliation of that country to the changed conditions. Whatever can be done to give assistance in keeping the people there satisfied must indirectly operate to the advantage of the other countries, and particularly those which are interested in reparations.

Possibly Germany is asking a bit more than the situation warrants today, even though it is ten years since the war ended. Possibly France is yielding a little too slowly, but certainly it would appear to be the time for all those interested in the situation to get together and bring the problem to a solution as rapidly as possible. If it cannot be done at one swoop let it be done gradually. If France proceeds to withdraw troops steadily and surely, though slowly, it will be far preferable to make the situation more tense by insisting that nothing can be done.

NAVAL CONSTRUCTION

Probably there has never been a time when there was so much talk in regard to peace, or when so many efforts were being made in that direction. The great need of preventing needless strife has gripped the people of many nations.

And yet while treaties of peace are being signed and while the policy of war is being renounced in favor of a peaceful adjustment of disputes, it is perfectly evident that all thought of national defense measures cannot be completely forgotten. It is necessary now and it will continue to be necessary for certain naval provisions for national safety. How great a reduction can be accomplished through disarmament agreements is a question. Not as much progress has been made in that direction as might be desired. Possibly it will come with time but in the present situation naval provisions must be made within the limits of the existing agreement.

At the last session of congress the navy department asked for the authorization of 15 light cruisers of 10,000 tons each and carrying eight inch guns. Nothing was done about it although it was proposed that the construction extend over a period of three years. Another plan was advocated but action was not insisted upon.

At the coming session of congress in December this same plan will probably be presented again. This would mean an outlay of $255,000,000 over a three year period while the additional expenditure of $19,000,000 for another airplane carrier was also advocated.

It is a case of refusing to so neglect our naval strength that we would be at a decided disadvantage in case of an emergency. We are not up to the cruiser strength of other nations, not up to the strength we are entitled to have. We had hoped for better results from the disarmament efforts, but even then national defense requires that we look adequately to our protection. Without a doubt the question of naval construction will occupy a prominent part in the deliberations or discussions at the coming session of congress. It isn't a case of leading other nations or spurring competition in naval construction but of being in a position to defend our shores.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The unpleasantest thing about football uniforms is that they call for cooler weather.

If August was the month for shooting stars, September seems to be the month for prison breaks.

The man on the corner says: The colder the weather grows the hotter the campaign becomes.

"Control of Quicksilver" says a headline. The weatherman has been trying to do that for a long time.

While the August fire loss in New England shows a drop, it requires such a record in more than one month to indicate permanency.

No explanation has been offered as to why the Byrd expedition is taking along so much popcorn and jam in preference to gumdrops.

You do not have to look very long to see numerous instances of driving that ought not to prevail. They go to show the reason for so many needless accidents.

YESTERDAY'S PICTURES

The spring air was soft and warm as it came through the half-open window. Westcott allowed the feeling of lassitude that he felt creeping over him to take full possession. He leaned back in his chair and glanced lazily through the glass partition that separated his small private office from the bookkeeping department.

His wandering gaze rested for a moment upon the bent head of Margaret Rockman, the latest comer in the department. It certainly seemed to him as if he had seen her before. While wondering where, he turned his chair around, clasped his hands behind his head and gazed dreamily out of the window.

Perhaps it was the touch of spring in the air that went to his head, perhaps he closed his eyes for a moment. At any rate, as he looked out on the dingy roofs and walls they seemed to fade away, and in their place there was a picture of an old-fashioned white house, a big yard, a tangle of shrubs and flowers, a lilac hedge, and on the on the other side of the hedge another yard.

Other children played in that yard. A big boy about his own age, a tiny girl—funny how things come back. They had mover away from that place when he was 11 years old, and yet he could almost see those children, could almost smell the purple lilac blossoms.

He swung his chair slowly back to its accustomed place. His eyes again automatically sweeping the outer office, looked straight into the smiling ones of Miss Rockman.

"She's laughing at me. I bet she thought I was asleep. Gosh, I sure have seen her somewhere." Suddenly he learned forward. "What's that she's got on her desk? Lilacs! I wonder if the smell of them started me thinking about the old place—and where in the name of common sense have I seen that girl?"

A little later he made an opportunity to walk past Miss Rockman's desk. He paused and sniffed the purple blossoms.

"Funny thing about flowers," he mused aloud, "how they sort of—don't you know—take a person back—"

"Lilacs always take me back home," she smiled up at him. "We had so many of them there." He certainly had seen her before. Elevated? Theater? Street car.

"We had a lot of them, too, where we lived once when I was a kid. I was just thinking about that place a while ago. Maybe it was your flowers that sort of started me. We had other flowers, too. Little white bell things strung along on a stem." Again the quizzical look, as though she were enjoying some secret joke. She shook her head in answer to his inquiring look.

"I've got it," he announced triumphantly. "Lilies of the valley, that's what we called them. Then there were those little purple and yellow ones that looked like faces—"

"Try hard and you'll remember in time," she counseled him. Where had he seen her? Dance? Restaurant? Concert?

When he came in from lunch with the air of a conquering hero he marched up to her desk proudly and handed her a little lavender box.

"Just to prove what a good memory I have," he said. "I walked right up to the clerk and said: 'Gimme some pansies,' just like that." She laughed and nodded approvingly.

Westcott half turned back with the intention of asking if she meant anything by that. Then he resolutely made his way to his office.

Exactly three days later he walked boldly up to her and put the question direct.

"Do you know," he said, "you've got me just about worried to death. Some things tells me we've met before and it's bothering the life out of me. I simply must know. You've got such a funny look; sometimes I kind of suspect you're holding out on me. If you remember me, I wish you'd spill what you know." She smiled her enigmatic smile. Then taking something from the top drawer of her desk she held a small object up to him.

"Does that help?" she queried. Before his eyes was a picture of a long-legged, gangling boy standing in the middle of a yard where the grass was badly in need of mowing, where the bushes were ragged and friendly. The boy's arms rested on the handle of a lawn mower, his eyes gazed off into space. At his feet in the long grass sat a small, demure, wide-eyed girl. Westcott looked at the photograph for a moment in silence.

"So you were one of the kids that lived on the other side of the hedge," he said finally.

"I was." said Miss Rockman. 'And I used to crawl through that hedge and play house with you—when the other kids weren't around. A boy of 11 couldn't be seen playing house with a girl of 9."

"And you've known me all the time?"

"I have," said Miss Rockman.

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"Because I wanted you to—remember—yourself," she murmured. "And I'm so mad at you because you didn't." She must have forgiven him. For he's been playing house with her for several years now—with considerable success.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—It is a whimsical twist that puts the republican national campaign in danger of becoming an unwilling source of financial contributions to the war chest of Johnny Raskob, generalissimo of the Al Smith campaign. Yet such is the case right here in Washington, the nerve center of the Hoover drive for the presidency.

It happens that Hoover Great General Headquarters, to which the republican nominee was introduced on his return from Palo Alto, is located in a Massachusetts avenue mansion belonging to Mrs. Francois Moran, aged 83. It is one of two big city homes Mrs Moran owns. She occupies the other, out on more socially elect Wyoming avenue.

There was a day when Massachusetts avenue was the very core of the residential section favored by the rich and great. It still discloses huge piles of masonry, many with for sale signs, in certain blocks of its wide, tree bordered stretch, sacred from the profaning touch of street car rails. Names that bulk large in the social or business world are connected with these edifices. Very rarely is there a name of political prominence past or present.

Landlady Smith Fan

Having followed the march of fashion to her home farther out, Mrs. Moran had her Massachusetts avenue home on her hands when the Hoover forces began looking around for a suitable personal headquarters for the nominee. The former commerce secretary did not want the business of the campaign to intrude on his home life on S street, just a few doors up the hill from the house to which Woodrow Wilson retired from the White House and where he died.

The Moran house, close by one of the busy circle hubs of car and motor traffic, offered a very suitable site for Hoover purposes and it was promptly snapped up. The nominee holds forth there, reserving only the most private and confidential of his conferences for his S street home and dinner table treatment.

And not until it was all an accomplished fact, with the headquarters throbbing with the purr of manifolding machines grinding out campaign handouts and the clatter of typewriters and the bustle of folks coming and going on campaign business, did it develop that Mrs. Moran is an ardent Smith fan. Her voting residence is Virginia and she has announced her intention not only of voting for the New York governor's election, but of working for it hard, as will all the members of her family.

Where Rent Figures

Rent for the Hoover headquarters, which will come out of the war chest Dr Work and his aides are busily trying to fill, will go into a new motor car, Mrs. Moran avers; but may not some of it be put into that work for Smith, or may not the new car be used to boost Governor Al's candidacy? What could be fairer for a Smith worker than so to use money obtained from Hoover sources, and Mrs. Moran has already done a little mass meeting work among the women of Washington in Smith's behalf.

Fractures of the Ankle Joint

By Frank D. Dickson, M. D., Kansas City.

There is an old adage—"a bad sprain is worse than a break." As in many of these sayings which have come down to us through generations, there is a certain element of truth in this particular one. This does not lie, however, in the statement that a sprain is worse than a break, but in the fact that the bad sprain is usually in reality a break or fracture of a bone in the region of a joint, a fact that was often overlooked before the introduction of the X-ray.

It is a very easy matter in these days of high-heeled shoes and other types of poorly supporting footwear, to turn the foot and sustain what is often considered a sprain of the ankle. Also, with the speeding up of life generally, due to the automobile and increasing activity in sports, injuries of all kinds are on the increase among these injuries to joints. An injury to the ankle joint is particularly serious, as this joint bears the entire body weight, is used constantly in standing and walking, and is subject at all times to great strain. The integrity of this joint and its smooth working is dependent upon the various bones which compose it being absolutely in their proper relation to each other. The chief damage done in a fracture or break of the ankle is that there is always a tendency for the bones composing it to become displaced so that the joint does not work smoothly and a painful ankle results, which is carried through life. The displacement of the bones in a break may be very slight and still seriously interfere with the mechanism of the joint, the most usual displacement resulting in the production of a fallen arch or flat foot, which is always a painful foot both for standing and walking. It should not be concluded, however, that every flat foot or fallen arch is the result of a fracture of the ankle, for this is not true; it is, however, a very common deformity resulting from such injuries.

Any severe injury to the ankle joint, then, should be given a very careful examination—this examination to include the taking of X-rays, as frequently what is apparently a sprained ankle is really a fractured or broken ankle and needs careful treatment. Above all it should be remembered that in the experience of surgeons it is the apparently slight injury to the ankle which causes the most of the trouble; bad injuries which cause much displacement of the bones and deformity are readily recognized and treated. It is the mild injury with little displacement or deformity which is overlooked and leads to the chronically painful ankle, which means inability to lead an active life.

WHIRRING MAIL PLANES TO LINK THREE NATIONS

Less than a year after Colonel Lindbergh's non-stop Washington-to-Mexico flight, the air mail prepares to follow him across the border.

Post office departments of the Mexican and the United States governments have fixed tentatively on September as the month in which to start the new international service.

"Thus 1928 should see the creation of an air mail route 2,800 miles long, the longest in North America," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Cities which will be stations on the United States-Mexico service are: Boston, New York, Washington, Richmond, Atlanta, Birmingham, Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, (possibly San Antonio), Laredo, Nuevo Laredo (where the Mexican division begins), Monterrey, San Luis Potosi and Mexico City.

"When citizens finally attain to the privileges of a stamped letter, the new air route will unroll for travelers a longitudinal section of the continent. The service will side North America just as the New York-San Francisco air line cuts a cross section of the United States. In about 48 hours planes will pass from the land of baked beans to the land of chili con carne; from the seaside metropolis of New York to the mountain valley metropolis of Mexico City; from the heat of Washington and Richmond to the cool breezes of San Luis Potosi; from the cotton fields and cane brakes of the south to the orange orchards and corn and wheat fields of the southern republic.

"Air mail planes leaving Boston at 6:15 p. m. will carry letters scheduled to arrive at Laredo at 2:30 p. m. the next day. The transit time by train is four days. Although the details are yet to be worked out, Mexican planes will probably pick up the relay at once reaching the capital about 9:30 p. m., cutting the letter-delivery time between New York and Mexico City by three to four days.

"In one sense the service can be considered a tri-national creation because the mail from Boston will meet the mail from Montreal at Hadley Field near New York City. It is even true that the three capitals of North America, Mexico city, Washington and Ottawa, will be connected by air when all the various services dovetail because Montreal and Ottawa are already connected by air mail.

"While Mexico must build an entirely new air route over its section, the United States must extend its present service. The service south to Atlanta went into operation last spring and is now being operated regularly to New Orleans. From New Orleans to Laredo a completely new route must be prospected and arranged for.

"Names of all the American towns on the route ring familiar, but the Mexican cities, with the exception of Mexico City are little known north of the Rio Grande. Thumbnail sketches will fix them in mind: Nuevo Laredo, Mexican twin of Laredo; Monterrey, the Chicago of Mexico and San Luis Potosi, a rich mining town.

"Once in Mexico the new air mail route will follow the National Railways of Mexico line south from Nuevo Laredo. For 165 miles over the sun-baked, cactus-spiked, semi-desert there is almost nothing of interest; but Monterrey, the first stop, is a good introduction to Mexico, partly because it is not entirely Mexican. English is spoken quite widely and there are American magazines and even an English language newspaper to assure the traveler from the north that he has not entirely cut himself off from his homeland. Monterrey also smokes familiarly with many factories, for it is the chief manufacturing city of Mexico, and in this industrial activity there is a reminder which has given the city its nickname, 'the Chicago of Mexico.'

"From Montrrey the air mail plane will have to climb over encircling mountains to skirt Saltillo which may be an emergency stop. Peaks and ridges confront the pilot on every hand from Monterrey south and the farther he goes the higher they rise. It is not flying country.

"At Saltillo the air mail will be over the capital of Texas—or what was once the capital of Texas—for Saltillo is the capital of Coahuilla, a state which at one time included Texas but has been shorn of most of the vast acreage it commanded in Mexico's heyday.

"Lovely San Luis Potosi, a clean, sparkling city lies in a beautiful valley. Although it is below the Tropic of Cancer line, its summer temperatures are cooler than the hottest spots most American cities must endure; and yet San Luis Potosi has groves of citrus and other tropical fruits at its very doors.

"Fortunately the mines that have made the city and have built its innumerable magnificent churches, occur not too close to tarnish the municipal housekeeping. And although they were discovered by the Spaniards, the mines continue to be worked to this day. More than $3,000,000 in silver is said to be mined every year in San Luis Potosi.

"About halfway between San Luis Potosi and Mexico City the air mail will pay its respects to Queretaro, the chief historical shrine of Mexico. The Mexican republic was born here when plotters, who have become heroes, planned the overthrow of Spain's power. Later Queretaro lived amid more great rays when Maximilian and his handful of defenders were captured, tried and executed on the hill where the Austrians have built a memorial. Few towns can support life on history as Queretaro has found, to its regret. One of Queretaro's bits of good luck has been the finding of opal mines in the neighborhood—a paradox when the world's superstitions are taken into account.

parents that whenever visitors called them some attention.

Some few days later a Mrs. Daniel, who had been asked to tea, arrived, and Leonard was cautioned to behave himself.

A Cat Story

A citizen who is known as a lover of birds is telling the following story: It appears that one of his neighbors lost a cat, and made it known in the community. Some way told him that the bird-lover had killed it, and was offering big rewards for other cats to kill. The story spread, others believed it, and now when a cat is late to its meals, or shows signs of undue drowsiness, the bird lover at once is suspected. Others are soliciting him for the best methods of disposing of cats. Recently a small boy carrying a large cat came into the office bringing the information that "Mother heard that you are killing cats, and she sent this one up to be killed."

Mineral Microbes

Some interesting experiments have been made with ancient medals, vases and so forth of lead that are gradually disintegrating in the museum of Cluny. After a certain number of years they fall into dust. The cause, it is thought, lies in the presence of minute quantities of saline matter, with which the objects have become impregnated during their long burial in the soil or under water.

These microscopic impurities play the part of bacteria and microbes in living bodies. In other words, the lead is "sick," and unless the noxious matter can be removed will inevitably perish. Curiously enough, it is found that if traces of salt are imparted to a fresh mass of lead, it is attacked and eventually falls to pieces like the objects in the museum of Cluny.

Doctor Found Women And Children Sick More Often Than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 89

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice, he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and placed it on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a public success as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us it helped when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, its mild gentle action is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or this coupon brings a bottle for free trial:

LOCAL APPEAL FOR RELIEF OF HURRICANE VICTIMS

The Norwich chapter of the American Red Cross has issued an urgent appeal for contributions for the relief of the sufferers in the Porto Rican hurricane disaster. The appeal was made by Charles Coit, president of the local chapter, as the result of a telegram he received Tuesday. The telegram, which came from the Washington headquarters of the American Red Cross, read as follows:

Latest reports Porto Rico and Virgin Islands indicate increasing demands upon Red Cross for emergency relief and rehabilitation with growing prospect further needs Florida and other southeastern states. President Coolidge accordingly today by proclamation called for generous contributions to Red Cross West Indies hurricane relief fund to care for all areas affected. Information too incomplete to enable us to state total amount needed, but clearly evident Red Cross faces serious responsibility and your present effort should be at least comparable to your effort at the time of the Florida campaign in 1926.

Chairman.

MOLINARO CAUGHT IN COLCHESTER SHACK THAT HELD FIREARMS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—Fortunato Molinaro, 36, of 129 Thames street, Norwich, was arrested at Colchester this afternoon charged with criminal libel in connection with certain literature he and his wife caused to be circulated here recently in which they indirectly accuse courts and attorneys of being guilty of an irregular enforcement of the law. In default of bail of $5,000 Molinaro was locked up at New London police headquarters and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning. In the event that Molinaro is not able to provide bail, providing probable cause is found, he will be remanded to jail to await trial at the January term of the superior court. Mrs. Molinaro, who was arrested at the time of the circularizing of the city with the literature is a prisoner at the county jail for she was unable to provide a surety on her bond, which was fixed at the same amount as that of her husband.

Molinaro and his wife were in New London a week ago and went about the city circulating the printed literature. Mrs. Molinaro and her husband separated and both decided upon certain sections of the city to distribute the circulars. Mrs. Molinaro was detected making a distribution of the printed matter on State street and was arrested by Sergeant William Babcock and Patrolman George Bruhns. The following day in the police court, she was bound over to the superior court for trial. Her husband could not be found, but County Detective William Lewis was assigned to the case by State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown.

A watch of the Thames street house in Norwich was maintained, but not until Monday was any clue obtained as to Molinaro's whereabouts. When an automobile known to be Molinaro's was driven to the house Monday and the driver entered. The car was followed and is believed to have been sent to the house for the purpose of procuring firearms for Molinaro. The scent led the followers of the machine to a shack about a mile and a half from Colchester in the section where the new Deep River reservoir of Norwich has been built.

Late this afternoon County Detective Lewis and Deputy Sheriff George Hoxie, Lebanon, went to Colchester and locating the shack, the officers laid in wait for evidence of some form of life about the place. Molinaro's car was outside the shack and after a wait of but a comparatively short time Molinaro appeared and was about to drive away when the officers covered him with revolvers. He was searched and then made a prisoner. The officers made a search of the shack and found two double-barreled shot guns and a beltier, fully loaded with shells in the house, one being found in the room occupied by Molinaro and the other in the room occupied by the owner of the shack, Martin Fazio. Both shotguns and the beltier were taken possession of by County Detective Lewis. A baseball bat was found in the automobile, but neither of the men were carrying any firearms.

After Molinaro's arrest he was taken to Norwich police headquarters and held there for a time until the officers were ready to take him to New London.

HOOVER-CURTIS CLUB ORGANIZED IN MYSTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

MYSTIC, Sept. 18—About 150 gathered in Odd Fellows hall here tonight to form a Hoover-Curtis club. A. O. Lewis called the meeting to order and in a brief address introduced Judge Johnson of Manchester who gave an address pointing out the many qualifications of Herbert Hoover, the republican nominee for president, also the many important commissions he has held and of his service while a member of the cabinet. After Judge Johnson's address a club was organized to be known as the Groton-Stonington Hoover club. The following officers were elected: President, James Cooper; first vice president, Henry Hammacher; second vice president, Henry Stahle; third vice president, Mrs. Carl Cutler; secretary, A. O. Lewis; treasurer, B. Everett Hoxie. Mr. Cooper took the chair and made a few remarks then caling on Mrs. Carl Cutler to speak for the women which she did most acceptably. John B. Grinnell made remarks that created much applause and laughter. Each speaker confined himself to straight facts and avoided any semblance of mud-slinging. It was voted to have a committee of two, a man and woman, from each voting district in the two towns to solicit memberships and they to solicit their assistance. Part of them were named as follows: Stonington, Mrs. Jerome Anderson; Old Mystic, George Swain; Road District, Seth Williams; Mystic, (Stonington side), Fred Moll, Mrs. Walter T. Fish; Groton side, William McDonald and Mrs. A. O. Colby; Noank, Lloyd Brown; Groton, Charles Lund. The others will be named later.

After empowering the officers to arrange for the next meeting place and dates the meeting adjourned.

STATE'S RIFLE TEAM WON NATIONAL HONORS

By scoring 2,583 out of a possible 3,000 points, the ten-man team of the Connecticut National Guard placed ninth in the national team rifle match at Fort Perry, Ohio, last Saturday in which 95 teams participated.

Norwich had two men among the ten shooting members of the team, Capt. William R. Denison, adjutant, First Battalion, 192nd F. A., and Lieut. Andrew M. White, Battery B., 192nd F. A.

By placing among the first 10 teams, the members of the Connecticut team each received a gold medal. They won further glory by placing fifth among the non-service teams who competed. The organizations whose teams shot better than the Connecticut guardsmen, are in order: Marines, Navy, Infantry, Cavalry, Washington National Guard, California Civilian, District of Columbia National Guard and Organized Reserves.

In the national individual match which preceded the team match, Captain Griffin and Sergeant Doyle each won a silver medal and Lieutenant White, Norwich, gained a bronze medal. Capt. Denison won a place in the marine match.

Fined $100 For Reckless Driving.

As the result of lack of evidence, the charge of driving while under the influence against Myles Burgess of Waterford, was pulled in the city court Monday morning and a charge of reckless driving was substituted. Burgess pleaded guilty to reckless driving and was fined $100 and costs. He was arrested in Greeneville Saturday night following an accident when his machine skidded and lost a wheel.

A previous report that the fine was imposed for intoxication was in error.

MADE HEROIC RESCUE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Rev. Arthur Cary Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Adams of East Great Plain, who was ordained to the ministry by United Congregational church in October, 1925 and left the same month for the mission field in South Africa, has recently received there a hero's reward for an act of bravery in saving the life of a boy who was drowning. The boy saved was one of a party of Pathfinders, an organization similar to the Boy Scouts, who were out on a camping trip.

The Pathfinder gilt cross for gallantry was presented to Rev. Mr. Adams who is district Pathfinder-Master was given the cross at a Pathfinder gathering which was attended by notable heads of the movement from London who were in Africa for an inspection tour. In its account of the presentation a South African newspaper said:

Chief Pathfinder-Master Rheinault

REV. ARTHUR C. ADAMS

Jones then called the attention of the Pathfinders to the presence of District Pathfinder-Master the Rev. A. C. Adams. "Those of you who were in the camp at Durban will remember how the best traditions of the Pathfinder movement were exemplified by a very fine and splendid act of bravery on the part of your Pathfinder-Master saved the boys from drowning. In he saved the boys brof drowning, in one case just in the nick of time. I am now going to ask Commissioner Gaddum to present him with this medal. I would also like to pay a tribute to the magnificent work that has been done in connection with the Pathfinders by Mr. Adams. He has thrown himself into the work heart and soul and has done wonderful things for the movement."

The act of bravery for which Rev. Mr. Adams received the highest award was performed at Durban on July 10, when a party of Pathfinders was spending a holiday under canvas.

While the party was bathing from the Durban beach, under the charge of Pathfinder-Master Adams, four of the boys got out of their depath in the treacherous backwash and were washed out to sea. Three of them were assisted ashore by their companions, but the fourth drifted farther out. The Rev. Mr. Adams went to his assistance, and after a prolonged struggle in the breakers, managed to bring the boy ashore. Rev. Mr. Adams was in an exhausted condition and the boy was completely unconscious. Artificial respiration was immediately applied, and after a long time the boy was restored to consciousness.

YOUNG DeFOREST IN GREAT SHAPE FOR BOUT AT NEW LONDON THURSDAY

Young DeForest of Danielson, who returns to an eastern Connecticut ring on Thursday night at the New London arena meets one of the toughest boys in his long career of fighting in Al Gillett of New Bedford. DeForest like all home town boys, was not so popular in eastern Connecticut as he was in the western part of the state and in Massachusetts where the majority of his boxing has been done. Times have changed within the past few months and Danielson and all eastern Connecticut is pulling for the boy to take over Gillett.

DeForest will need all the encouragement he can get for he is going to swap punches with one of the toughest of the bantamweights in New England. A victory for the Danielson lad is a big step along the road to pugilistic success and he intends to take this step on Thursday night. DeForest tapers off today with light work and will step on the scales

YOUNG DE FOREST

Thursday afternoon in tip-top shape. This bout is one of two eight-round semi-finals which support the main bout of ten rounds between Steve Smith of Bridgeport and Tiger Silvia of Fall River.

The fistic prestige of Joey Duggan, poker-faced little Irish bantamweight, will undergo the acid test in the other semi-final.

Beaten in his last two starts within four weeks, Joey, who once basked in the glory that is bestowed upon a fistic idol, will make his next appearance in a comeback role. He will meet the redoubtable Spike Marino, New Haven Italian bantamweight, in one of the two eight-round semi-finals.

Joey reached the heights of popular favor here less than two months ago when he thrashed the Filipino terror of the Coast Guard receiving station, Pete Aguinaldo. But in his next two bouts, Joey finished at the short end of the arguments with Al Beauregard of Taftville and Al Gillette of New Bedford.

There was a vast difference between the Duggan who bowed to Beauregard and Gillette and the lean, battle-thirsty Irish boy who ripped Aguinaldo to ribbons. Some critics attribute his slump to over-work while others declare that the youthful Duggan was not yet ripe enough to face the three opponents he has met in two months' time.

Joe Connelly Duggan's trainer, is confident that on Thursday night New London fight fans will see the same savage youngster who slashed Aguinaldo and Joe Santello into submission. Joe has his own theory to account for Duggan's defeat by Beauregard and Gillette.

"Joey's last three opponents have been top-notchers," Joe declares. "Aguinaldo was a slugger; Beauregard combines hard hitting with ring craft, and Gillette is a clever boxer with plenty of steam behind his punches. I think that Duggan, with plenty of rest between bouts, can whip any one of them, but with the three bouts bunched close together we are taking a long chance at best."

Connelly, who has always been opposed to hand-picked opponents, insists that Joey will fight them wherever and whenever he can get a promoter to make the matches."

CARDS CLEAN UP SERIES WITH PHILLIES WITH WIN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18—(AP)—The Cardinals cleaned up their series of five games against the Phillies by polishing off the supine home forces by a score of 4 to 2 with less difficulty than the score indicates. This gave the Red Wings a record of twenty victories and only two defeats in competition against the Baker boys this season.

The Cardinals merely protected their lead of two games over the Giants as the clan McGraw nosed out the Pirates in the rubber engagement of a three-game series in New York.

Jesse Haines pitched for the Cardinals and held the home team safe at all times, although the score was close to the finish. Ray Benge, Philadelphia recruit, did as well as could be expected, but weakened in the seventh when the Cards bunched hits for the runs which won. Bob McGraw finished.

Commissioner K. M. Landis sat in a box with John Shibe of the Athletics. The commissioner visited Philadelphia to inspect Shibe park as a possible world series site.

The Cardinals will be idle tomorrow before opening their Giant series with a double-header at the Polo grounds on Thursday. The Giants in the meantime will play a single game with the Cubs. The Cardinals will have another open date on Friday, but will meet New York in a third game on Saturday. After visiting Brooklyn and Boston, the red birds will return to the Polo grounds for a single game on September 30, closing the National league season.

YANKS DOWN BROWNS IN BATTING FESTIVAL

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18—(AP)—It was a good race while it lasted but it seems to be over now. The only element of doubt remaining is injected by the Yankee pitching staff which, to the last regular, was forced to perform here today to save a 14 to 11 victory for the champions over the Browns as the Athletics lost to Cleveland by 8 to 2.

The Yankee lead was stretched to two games by this combination of events. They probably will need every point of it if Messrs. Heimach, Johnson, Pipgras and Hoyt have many more afternoons like they all had together here today.

The Yankees spotted Dan Howley's boys to a lead of four runs in the first two rounds, and then began getting them back, in a small way at first but in bunches later. Harold Wiltse and Blaeholder were assailed for a collection of six markers in the fifth and the Yankees never thereafter surrendered the lead, try as they might.

The Yankee total was 17 hits off Wiltse, Blaeholder and Strelecki, while the Browns collected 14 off the four first-string Yankee hurlers. The Yankees totaled four errors against two for the Browns.

The victory gave the champions three out of four on the series and 12 out of 22 from the Browns for the season. The champions will enjoy an off-day tomorrow before opening a series in Chicago.

ATHLETICS WILL HAVE TO STEP ON THE GAS

(By the Associated Press)

A great deal of the tension was relieved from the American league race yesterday, when the Yanks increased their lead by two full games by battering the St. Louis Browns for a 14 to 11 victory while the Athletics were losing to Cleveland by 8 to 2. The chief remaining doubt is furnished by the Yankee pitchers. Mille. Huggins was forced to call upon all four of his available regulars to save yesterday's game.

The status quo again was maintained in the National league. As each of the three leaders won, the Cardinals still lead the Giants by two games, while the New York team is one and one half contests ahead of the Cubs. The Bruins invade the Polo Grounds tomorrow for a single game while the Cards are idle awaiting their double header against McGraw's men the following day.

GIANTS MAINTAIN PACE IN PENNANT RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—The Giants held pace with the Cardinals and the Cubs, their western rivals by defeating Pittsburgh in a hard-fought, ten-inning game here today by a score of 3 to 2. A home run by Bill Terry with one out in the tenth brought the game to a dramatic conclusion. Terry drove well up into the right field stands. The victory gave New York an even break in its twenty two games against Pittsburgh this season.

The game was a pitching duel between Fred Fitzsimmons for New York and Burleigh Grimes and Joe Dawson of the Pirates. Fitzsimmons finally smashed the jinx which Grimes has had on New York all season.

Grimes, traded from the Giants, tried for his twenty fifth victory of the season and his sixth of the year from the New Yorks. Grimes pitched another great effort against his 1927 team mates, yielding seven scattered hits in eight innings. Despite the fact that Burleigh had hit two singles and drawn a base on balls in three times up, he was withdrawn for a pinch hitter in the ninth when Pittsburgh scored its tying run.

Dawson was ineffective after he relieved Grimes in the ninth and suffered the defeat.

The Giants backed Fitzsimmons with brilliant support. Lindstrom, Jackson and Reese making one great infield play after another.

Lindstrom, playing the greatest ball of his career, was particularly brilliant. He smothered Hargreaves's hot grounder with a diving stop in the fourth and made a leaping catch of Adam's liner near the foul line in the seventh inning.

Pittsburgh scored its first run in the second inning when Comorsky opened with a single to center, stole second, took third on Wright's infield out and scored on Hargreaves's sacrifice fly.

The Giants tied the score in the fifth. Welsh led off with an ordinary grounder to Grantham, but the ball took a bad hop through the player and rolled to right field, giving the New York outfielder a triple. He scored on O'Doul's sacrifice fly.

New York got one more in the sixth. With one out, Jackson drilled a low liner to center on which Comorsky attempted a shoe string catch. The ball got through him for a double. Hogan's single then scored Jackson.

Pittsburgh tied the score in the ninth inning. Brickell batting for Hargreaves, singled to center, took second when Brame, batting for Grimes, grounded to Reese, and scored on Adam's single to center.

Reese hit Dawson for a single and O'Doul walked in the New York half but O'Neil then with a grounder to Grantham. Dawson retired Lindstrom in the tenth when Terry followed with his home run smash into the right field stands.

BOSTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—Chicago went on a batting spree in its last game this season with the Braves today and pounded two Boston pitchers for 17 hits in an 8 to 3 victory.

Freddie Maguire, second baseman for the visitors, led the attack with four singles in as many times at bat. As in previous games of their series here, the Cubs infield played a brilliant fielding game, contributing four fast double plays. Score:

N. E. Title Series Deadlocked

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 18—(AP)—Attleboro landed hard on Walter Stowers, Lynn pitching ace in the first and second innings of the sixth game for the New England league championship today and took the game by a score of six to four. Attleboro's win tied the series three and three. The final game will be played here tomorrow.

WORCESTER TEAM SIGNED BY DUWELLS

With five Massachusetts clubs all crying for work in Norwich, the boxing committee of the Duwell A. A. last night selected the Villa five of Worcester as the attraction to support the Springfield team at the twelve bout card that will mark the finish of outdoor boxing here Friday, when the local organization presents its final card at the Duwell field.

The team is the same one that appeared at the Duwell show two weeks ago and was voted by everyone concerned the best that ever was brought to the Rose of New England. Jimmy Villa, handler of the outfit, has guaranteed to bring down a team equally as good as that which appeared on September 7 provided that the local committee will give Joe Preston another shot at Benny Dempsky. It will be remembered that Dempsky kayoed Villas ace in less than a round when they met at the last show and naturally the Worcester boy is looking for a chance to redeem himself. Up to the time of the quick kayo at the hands of the Greeneville slugger, Preston had only suffered defeat twice in thirty-four starts.

While the Duwels might have brought in a different team for the final show, it is believed that they acted wisely in booking the Worcesterites for a return showing. Everyone knows what these boys are capable of doing, and as a result will go to the Duwell field satisfied that they are in for a night of real action, each one of the boys that showed here two weeks ago was experienced and was as tough as could be expected.

With the Villa men and five men from Springfield lined as the star performers and the biggest field of entries from eastern Conn. ever registered for a boxing show here there is no reason why the final episode of the Duwell boxing serial will not be a thriller. Although the Duwells are planning on a twelve bout card, the list of entries show at least forty athletes all of whom insist on scraps. As was previously mentioned Colchester and New London will be well represented at the final show in spite of the fact that not a single boy from either place has worked here at any of the previous shows this summer. The New London entry was boosted to seven Tuesday with the receipt of the names of Harry Hooper and Larry Tough.

With good weather Friday night it is predicted that all records for attendance at a fight here will be shattered as there is considerable interest in the bill in the neighboring cities and villages as well as Norwich.

INDIANS HAND ATHLETICS' PENNANT HOPES A JOLT

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18—(AP)—The pennant hopes of the Athletics were dimmed considerably, if not altogether extinguished, here today when the home Indians shaded the Macks by 3 to 2 in the final game of the series. This reverse enabled the Yankees to increase their lead over the Athletics to two full games as the champions crushed the St. Louis Browns for the third time in four days.

George ("Rube") Walberg opposed Walter Miller at the start, but neither of these southpaw rivals was in the game at the finish. Walberg retired to permit Eddie Collins to hit a double in the eighth as the A's began fighting to cut away Cleveland's three-run advantage, while Miller gave way to Willis Hudlin after Simmons opened the ninth with a double.

Walberg was forced out of the game at a time when he had allowed only four hits, but one of these was Ollie Tucker's home run over the right field fence in the fifth, and Hodapp's single and Harvel's double were bunched with Hale's fumble of Montague's grounder in the seventh for two Cleveland runs. Eddie Rommel pitched the last two innings without incident.

Walberg struck out seven men, and deserved a better fate. He doubtless would have pulled through, but for Hale's error.

Collins pinch double in the eighth was almost high enough to clear the right field screen, but was good for only two bases when it failed to do so. Eddie crossed the plate on Haas's double, but Perkins popped to Joe Sewell for the final out.

Simmons got around in the ninth on his own double, which blasted Miller from the box, Foxx's sacrifice fly to centre and Bing Miller's infield out.

HORWEEN SENDS 64 MEN TO SECOND STRING SQUAD

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18—(AP)—Coach Arnold Horween gave his Harvard football squad its first drastic shake-up of the season today when he sent sixty-four men to the second string squad. Forty-two men were retained on the first team, but this number will be further reduced before the opening game.

Of the players retained, sixteen are backfield men, four are centers, six guards, eight tackles and eight ends.

In the workouts today, Horween divided his men into three teams but said that "this doesn't mean a thing."

WINDHAM OPENS GRID SEASON ON SEPT. 29TH

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 18—Windham high school will open its football season on Saturday, September 29th in Putnam with a game with Putnam high school. To date the local squad has given promise of developing considerable speed although having less weight than usual. Team A has been former by Coach Thomas A. Callaghan to include A. Meikle, W Woodward and Chase in the backfield. The last-mentioned is a freshman but the mentor of the opinion that he is an excellent prospect. Luciani, who was being counted on for a regular position in the backfield, twisted an ankle in last Friday's practice session and will probably be on the sidelines for the present. The ends are H. Merrill and Fernier; tackles, Monast and Brettschneider; guards, Denault and Kasperkewicz, both first-year men; and Kelleher, center. It is expected that Coach Callaghan will devote considerable of his time to developing the line which is in need of seasoning. There are three experienced players in the backfield, as it shapes up at present and the coach does not anticipate much trouble from this quarter.

Team B is composed, for the most part, of first year men. Here the backfield candidates are Farrah, Czroka, Hendry, Johnson, Ashton, Turney and Collins. The ends are Stemmons, Lester and Costelio; tackles, Jordan, Gordon, Standish and Sanderson; guards, Wright, Blanchette and John, while D. Ahern has been used at center. Others who are out for places on the team include Lombardo, Rose and H. Smith.

BIG SHAKE-UP IN RANKING TENNIS STARS

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—A topsy turvy tennis season in which only the play of the French and of Miss Helen Wills was consistent has caused a complete upheaval among the country's so-called "first ten" players.

Only five of the ten men who were placed first by the United States Lawn Tennis association at the end of last season can be expected to hold their places in the ranking for 1928. Filling the vacancies will be a flock of America's younger players on whose shoulders rest the responsibility of eventually winning back the laurels that Cochet, Lacoste and Co., have taken to France.

In the tennis governing body follows the precedent set in the case of Vincent Richards, Big Bill Tilden will not be ranked at all for the first time in 11 years. Eight of those years he topped the list. Richards played as an amateur throughout the season of 1926 and was entitled to the No 1 ranking instead of Tilden, yet because he turned professional in October of that year he was not ranked at all.

With Tilden out, the No. 1 position for 1928 appears certain to go to Francis T. Hunter, largely because of his remarkable play in the national championship culminating in his victories over Jean Borotra and George Lott and his great five-set fight against Henri Cochet in the final yesterday.

The tennis solons never get around to ranking the players officially until February but the following more or les soff-hand rating, based on season's performances may do until the official one comes along.

2.—George M. Lott, Jr., Chicago.
3.—John F. Hennessy, Indianapolis.
4.—Wilmer Allison, Austin, Texas.
5.—John Van Ryn, Orange, N. J.
6.—John Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif.
7.—Fritz Mercur, Bethlehem, Pa.
8.—Frank Shields, New York.
9.—Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J.
10.—Julius Seligson, New York.

Of the ten, Hunter and Hennessey alone can be classified as veterans. Hunter this year at the age of 24 reached the apex of his game. Last year he was ranked at No. 2.

PAGE WINS HIS FIRST GAME IN MAJOR LEAGUE

DETROIT, Sept. 18—(AP)—Although he was extremely wild, Phil Page, Tiger recruit pitcher from Springfield, Mass., of the Eastern league, won his first start in the major league, downing Washington, 8 to 5, today. Page issued seven bases on balls but the lacing the Tigers gave Hadley more than made up for the passes. Hadley was driven from the box during a Tiger rally in the sixth and was replaced by Brown. West, Senator outfielder, drove out three doubles and a single while Goslin hit safely in his twenty fourth consecutive game.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 18—George Surber, 51, employed by the River Bend Cemetery Co. and residing in Lower Pawcatuck, is a patient at the private hospital, suffering with serious injuries received Tuesday morning about 8 o'clock. Surber was driving a two-horse tip-cart of the cemetery company and was about half way between the upper and lower cemetery gates on Beach street when his wagon was struck in the rear by the Rec truck of C. B. Bilven, driven toward the beach by William Edward McGarvie, of Pleasant View. McGarvie was accompanied by Mrs. Harry Powers and a young woman employed at the Charles Lamb store, Pleasant View. Surber was thrown from the cart and landed heavily on the road. Hanging to the reins he was dragged some distance by the horses, which started to run away. He was taken to the office of Dr. J. Gordon Anderson and then to the Anderson hospital, where it was found that he had been injured on the chest and abdomen and had broken ribs, as well as cuts and bruises. Officer Robert M. Kessel, who investigated, found marks of the wheels where brakes had been set for a distance of 50 feet on the wet and skiddy roadbed. The driver claimed to have done all that he could to stop his car on the wet highway. At the hospital, Surber stated that he knew nothing of the approaching automobile. His two side wheels were off the hard road surface at the time of the collision, which sent him to the road between the front and rear wheels of the cart.

GREAT FARE OF MACKEREL TAKEN BY VILLAGE BOATS

The mackerel fleet is having fun catching fish off the shores of Block Island. Boat Alice M., Capt. Billie Chappell had a catch of 65 barrels, getting 55 barrels of fish in one drag. Not having enough barrels aboard so the crew could pack the fish all ready for the trucks at the town dock. Mate Leon Sistare was standing on deck with fish up to his knees. He never saw fish so thick. Arriving at the town dock and packing the fish so to forward them to New York. Engineer Jack Singer said he went home the other night and got dreaming about the fish. He was counting them all night, after seeing so many of them. The town dock and north dock was the shipping center Monday. Several boats came in and unloaded 885 barrels of mackerel for the trucks to take to New York, keeping the truckmen busy. "Did you catch all the fish out there?" asked one truckman. "No! plenty left!" So many fish were at the docks that the fishermen were giving them away and nearly everyone in the town was going home with a mess of fish. One boat came in with 150 barrels and all you could see was the mast out of water and four of the crew, for the boat was even with the water. It was the greatest number of barrels of fish forwarded from the fishing village in 15 years, making a record. The fishermen don't know how much they are worth, for the fish are bull-eyes. The fish check might come back and read $1.10 for a barrel or trading stamps, as Fulton market will be flooded with all those barrels hitting the market. One truckman got his supper on Monday night at 1.30 in the morning. Turning to his wife he said "Turn the eggs, for it is not far off till breakfast time!"

Harold C. Brown has made an airplane model out of a piece of wood with a jack-knife. It took him two months working on the plane every evening after his day's work is done. From wing to wing is a 6 inch spread. It is 10 inches long and 5 inches wide. It is painted silver color. A man is sitting in the cock-pit at the wheel, made from wood. It is the most perfect model plane but doesn't leave the ground. The only tool he had was a jack-knife. One hous. carpenter who has handled tools for 25 years says it is the best piece of work he ever saw out of a piece of wood. He told the young builder to keep on and some day he will get a job in a toy shop with his jack knife. He has named the airplane "Spirit of Waterford". He also has made a large clock out of wood. It is 14 inches high.

Nelson Rathbun is moving his household goods from the Hill house on Terrace avenue to Mrs Gertrude Sawyer's house on East Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hadley have returned from a visit in Worcester, Mass.

Mrs. J. Alfred Slack has returned from a three months' visit in England, Scotland and Germany. She had a fine trip on the way over and never was seasick, no rough weather. Walking on the main street in London one afternoon she came across a Noank couple, Dr. and Mrs. William Hill who are touring Europe. They were surprised to see any one from the fishing village. After talking about 20 minutes she left for Germany and they were bound for Switzerland. She told how the school children go to school in England—the teacher rings a large bell and the children line up like soldiers in the army. The teacher looks at their hands and faces to see if they are clean. If they are dirty, a large faucet is on the outside of the building encourage them to wash up. The country towns are pretty. She says going into Germany the flowers are beautiful. And sheep! I never saw so many of them!"

Miss Ida Hadley has returned from a few days' visit in Webster, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Anderson are spending a week in Portland Me., with relatives.

The Dance hall nine baseball team after being the guest of Connie Mack in New York last week put on their batting suits for a game with Bridgeport Ironmen at Dunn field, before a good sized crowd. The Bridgeport nine was late in getting on the field on account of tire trouble in Seabrook so it was 4.30 when Umpire Edgar Ashly called the game. Coach Billie Crane sent in Lighting Sweet to pitch the game. Battle Axe Bracel caught. Coach Harry Scott for Bridgeport was looking for Buzzsaw McCarthy to stop the Noankers with Pushup Terry catching. In the fifth inning Shoeless Whitney, center fielder for the Ironmen caught the fork ball of Lightning on the end of the bat for a long drive over the center field wall for a home run with a man on second base and made the score 2 to 0. It was the first time a ball was ever knocked over that wall—it was some crack and he received a new hat from owner Dunn for being the first man to do the trick.

At the end of the 9th inning the score was 2 to 2, making 2 extra inning games in two weeks for Noank. In the 11th inning heavy hitters for the Black Bottom men came in order to put the game on ice and Buzzsaw McCarthy was in a poor place for the Ironmen having a few words with the catcher he went to work and strike out the heavy hitters on 9 pitched balls getting out of a good hole.

In the 12th inning Bridgeport team wanted to make their home before 9 o'clock and getting the bases full and two men out, Shoeless Whitney on third base stole home, winning the game. Final score Ironmen 3, Dance Hall 2.

Neil Robertson has returned from a short visit with relatives in Durham.

Miss Mary Cumane of Hartford was a week end caller in the village.

K. Butson has returned from New York.

Lloyd Brown is running for day constable on the republican ticket in the coming election. INCREASE IN THE CALL MONEY RATE CAUSED REACTION IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Stiffening money rates checked the resumption of the upward price movement in today's stock market. The reaction, which quickly developed on the increase from 7 to 7 1-2 per cent in the call money rate, followed an early outburst of strength which carried about two score issues, including most of the coppers, to record high levels.

Trading was again in such large volume that the ticker was hopelessly behind the market during the greater part of the session. With prices on the floor frequently 2 to 5 points away from those being printed on the tape, many professional traders and small speculators are reported to have withdrawn from the market temporarily because of their inability to "trade against the tape."

While final quotations disclosed a preponderance of net declines, there were several gains running from 3 to 10 points. Total sales approximated 4,412,600 shares.

Call money renewed at 7 per cent and appeared to be in plentiful supply at that figure. Banks called more than $25,000,000 in loans, reflecting the quick return of income tax checks to the banks and the semi-weekly adjustment of their position at the Federal Reserve bank. The United States treasury also called for the repayment by depositary institutions in the second Federal Reserve district tomorrow of $29,40,000.

Coppers continued in brisk demand in reflection of the recent advance in the price of the red metal, but the gains were not fully maintained. American Smelting ran up more than 6 points to a new top at 256 1-2, but forfeited half its gain. New peak prices also were registered by Anaconda, Calumet & Hecla, Cerro de Pasco, Chile, Granby, Kennecott, Miami and Nevada. American Zinc climbed nearly 7 points to a new high at 40, and closed at the top, on reports that the accumulation of about $45 in back dividends on the preferred would be paid up through the issuance of additional common.

Unusually heavy buying of Yellow Coach, which advanced more than 4 points to a new high at 42 3-8, featured the motor group. Reo also moved into new high ground. General Motors closed fractionally lower at 207 3-4 after having crossed 210. Revival of activity and strength in Briggs Manufacturing, which touched a new peak at 55 7-8, was based on reports that a large block of the stock had been taken out of the market by British investment interests.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe soared 20 points and then lost half its gain. A. M. Byers ran up 10 points to a new high at 118 1-4 and closed at the top. International Harvester climbed more than 8 points to a new top at 303 3-4, but lost more than half its gain. Among the many other new highs were American Can, Advance Rumely, Atlantic Refining, Tidewater Oil, Pierce Oil preferred, qiLuid Carbonii and Columbia Gas & Electric.

Late selling pressure was particularly effective against such recent favorites as Allied Chemical, International Nickel, Case Threshing, Curtiss Aeroplane, Electric Auto Lite, Greene Cananea Copper, Johns Manville, Montgomery-Ward, National Cash Register, Republic Steel, Savage Arms, Sears Roebuck, Vanadium Steel, Westinghouse Electric and Wright Manufacturing, all off 2 to 5 points. The Warner Bros. issues broke about 7 points each.

Time money was quoted as high as 7 1-4 for the shorter maturities, as against a ruling rate of 7 per cent last week.

Commodity prices were reactionary. Cotton fell back about $1 a bale on indications that storm damage to the crop had been exaggerated. Wheat futures declined a fraction of a cent a bushel. Coffee fell back 9 to 18 points and sugar quotations held fairly steady.

A slightly firmer undertone for sterling exchange, with London cables quoted around $4.85 3-32, featured the foreign exchange market. Failure of American bankers to purchase any of the South African gold auctioned in London today caused some disappointment in speculative circles, which had counted on further gold imports this week.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES.

Kindness.

Be kind in all thy ways to little friends
That ever may have need of thy concern,
For kindness is a blessing that depends
On measure given for a like return.

Each little furry creature of the wood
Fills his allotted place in God's own plan.
The faithful dog—his worth is understood
With lasting tribute from the heart of man.

The feathered minstrel of the meadow trail
Enhances all the beauty of the morn
With fitting melody where voices fail,
Beholding God within the day newborn.

Be kind in all thy ways to little friends,
For them each wind some cruel fate may hold.
True kindness is the sun that ever blends
The darkest shadows with a tinge of gold.

—Ruth B. Gabrie!

The Cage.

It tried to get from out the cage;
Here and there it ran, and tried
At the edges and the side,
In a busy, timid rage.

Trying yet to find the key
Into freedom, trying yet,
In a timid rage, to get
To its old tranquility.

It did not know, it did not see,
It did not turn an eye, or care
That a man was watching there
While it raged so timidly.

It ran without a sound, it tried,
In a busy, timid rage,
To escape from out the cage
By the edges and the side.

—James Stephens.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES.

The snake and the lizard are to most people a crawling creature that should be killed as quickly as possible. The majority of people are afraid of reptiles, often with good cause, as there are many species of these creatures that are deadly to human beings. However, these creatures of woods, forests and grass lands are as much afraid of you as you are of them. Most of them will run away from you. Even the rattlesnake, which is a poisonous reptile, will not attack anybody unless it is stepped on, unduly excited or tormented or otherwise mistreated.

Until recent years there was little accurate information about them given out in schools and other seats of learning in this country. Through specialists, however, we have learned about the habits of many of the members of the reptile family.

In this country there are only a few poisonous snakes, and dozens of harmless ones which are found in every state. However, through our ignorance, thousands of these harmless reptiles have been killed every year. These creatures are the greatest asset to the farmer in preserving his crops and trees from the inroads of rats, mice, gophers, and ground squirrels each year. Even the rattlesnake is credited with killing from 100 to 150 rodent pests every year.

Besides being crop destroyers, these rodents are credited with carrying diseases of various kinds such as tularemia, often found in squirrels and other ground animals of the open country. The dreaded hoof-and-mouth disease among cattle is often carried by infested fleas which find luxurious transportation on the rodents of the fields.

Whenever we come upon a snake unexpectedly there is a thrilling shock of surprise which is inevitable. Our next question is usually to wonder if the snake is a poisonous one or not. And right here is where many people fail to use good judgment. Instead of trying to distinguish the difference between the harmless and poisonous snakes, there is a tendency to class all snakes in one group and that group is usually the venomous one.

This snake fear becomes less acute the more one learns the habits and differences among the many snakes in our country. "But how can I tell the poisonous ones?" you may ask. Nature has provided the answer to this question very well by creating a very marked difference between the poisonous and non-poisonous snakes. If you will notice pictures of the live specimens of venomous snakes and compare with the non-venomous ones a definite difference will be apparent. The poisonous reptiles have heads which are big and broad, with the exception of the coral snake whose head is blunt. The rattlesnake has a body which is big and stout with an average length from two to seven feet. An exception to the stout bodies of the poisonous reptiles is the coral snake with a slender body resembling the king snake. The difference between the king and coral snake is that the dark stripes go all the way around the coral snake's body, while with the king snake the stripes break at the underside of his body, and his head tapers nearly to a point.

The non-poisonous snakes do not have the broad and blunt shaped heads like the poisonous varieties. Their heads have a sleeker appearance and taper down nearly to a point. These harmless reptiles have no fangs, or rattles on their tails, and their bite is not a serious thing.

A few of our common snakes which are harmless include: the king snake, corn snake, blue racer, chicken snake, striped racer, yellow rat snake, common pine snake, brown water snake, common grass snake, red garter snake, common river snake, gopher snake, and the mountain black snake. All these creatures are helping to keep the crops of America free from the devastating ground rodents which would multiply a hundredfold if all the snakes were to be exterminated.

The poisonous snakes in this country include the rattlesnakes, coral snake, water moccasin, cotton mouth moccasin, copperhead snake, and the spreading adders.

STORIES WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

My New Classroom

Dear Uncle Jed: I like my new class very much. We have 24 boys and 20 girls. Everybody seems to take a pride in looking neat, being polite and working hard. I think we are going to have a good time this term.

We try to have perfect attendance every day. Then on a Friday afternoon we are allowed to do as we please from half-past two to three o'clock.

My Wonderful Trip

Dear Uncle Jed: I have gone on many interesting trips with my mother but the most wonderful to me was my trip to Washington, D. C., last summer. There I saw some of the most magnificent buildings, monuments and fountains that I have ever seen. The place in which I spent many hours and enjoyed the most was George Washington's home at Mt Vernon.

In this beautiful mansion I saw so many beautiful things of interest. Each room had something more inviting than the other.

In the hall I saw four of Washington's swords, a family Bible with Washington's birth, baptism and his own handwriting. In his bedroom was a four post bed, his bureau, his washstand, shaving stand, trunk and his mother's armchair which was used in Washington's childhood. The new tomb, but a short distance from the old one, was a simple brick vault and as one looked through the plain iron gates they could read St. John 11:25. "I am the resurrection and the life he that believeth in Me though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Rowe Boat Tipped Over

Dear Uncle Jed: When I was up in Maine this summer, I had an accident. Another boy and I started out to fish and my father told us to fish off the rocks, on the shore. But we thought we could get more fish by going out in the row boat. The row boat is owned by my father. So we got in it and started to push it away from the beach but a big wave that we didn't see came in and tipped the boat up and when we tried to push it back it went right over and we fell into the water. I went right under the water and the boat floated away from us. I couldn't see because the water was in my eyes! I wondered where Emil was but he was all right as when the boat tipped over the wave carried him right up on the shore. It wasn't deep so I could stand up. But the boat got away and started to go out with the wave. One of the big boys on the beach jumped into another boat and rowed out and tied a rope to our boat and he brought it into the beach. It was all right but it was upside down. If we had gone straight out it wouldn't have happened. But we went out sideways. My father said it was a good lesson for me and said that the next time I'll know enough not to take the boat when he tells me not to. It was rougher water than I thought. It was a close escape for me.

My Birthday Party.

Dear Uncle Jed: I had a birthday party this summer. It was the first party I ever had and I liked it. So did the other boys and girls who were present. I was eight years old and I begged my mother to let me have a party. So she said I could and I invited ten of my boy and girl friends. We had it from 3 until 6 o'clock one afternoon. We played all kinds of games and my uncle told us stories and my mother and my aunt gave us sandwiches and ice cream. I hope I'll have another birthday party some day and I hope I will win a book. I would like one of the Dottie Dimple stories. A friend of mine has one and she let me read it.

My Summer Vacation.

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you about my summer vacation. I had a wonderful time this year. We went to the beach for three weeks and I had the best time that I have had at the beach. We we fishing off the dock and I caught about two dozen fish. None of them was very large but I enjoyed catching them, all the same. Then we had hot dog roasts on the shore in the evening and several days we had picnics. We cooked our food over a stove made of stones. We caught fish and cooked them as soon as we caught them. They tsated fine. We also made coffee and one night we had lobsters at the cottage. I was sorry to have to come home but I enjoy school just the same. Best wishes to the Wide Awakes.

My Dog Died.

Dear Wide Awakes: I want to tell you about my dog. He is dead. He died last week and we buried him the day after he died. I don't know what made him die as he was all right the day before he died. My mother said he must have had some strange disease or else he ate something that poisoned him. I always tried to keep him around the house but one day he ran away and was gone nearly a week. When he came back he was thin and looked as though he hadn't eaten much. He needed a bath too. I think he got in with some strange dogs and that he ate something on a dump or out of a garbage pail that didn't agree with him. The day before he died he got awfully fat and the next day his eyes were half closed. He didn't move much and every little while he would let out a yelp. We thought he would be all right but the next day he was dead. We had a funeral for him and I put up a large piece of wood on his grave with his name, Jack, the day he died. I feel lonesome without him but my dad says he will get me another dog some time.

A Golden Wedding

Dear Uncle Jed: My grandfather and grandmother recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at our home. There were more than a hundred people at our house and our yard looked like a parking station. Dinner was served at five o'clock on our porch which was decorated very prettily. There were benches and tables on the porch, and fifty people could be seated at once. We all had a very good time. After the celebration my grandfather and grandmother took a trip to Cleveland, accompanied by my mother. On the way they saw many vineyards which, they said, were about forty miles long. My grandfather and grandmother had not been to Cleveland for thirty-five years and their relations hardly knew them. My grandmother is 70 years old and my grandfather, seventy-three.

A Picnic

Dear Uncle Jed: One time my cousin and I were invited to go to a picnic with a crowd of our friends. A young girl was to be in charge of us and be responsible for anything that happened to us. My cousin and I were very excited and could hardly wait until we could pack our lunch the next morning. Everything we came across that we happened to like, we hid for our lunch box.

The next day was very clear and we were all in the best of spirits. We had to hike a long way. We were to picnic by a lake and go rowing and swimming.

When we arrived we went off for a walk in pairs. Our guardian told us not to go far away. My cousin and I struck out into the woods. We walked quite a way, when we felt drops of rain. We thought we could find our way back to our picnic ground easily, but we found we had a very hard task to encounter. We had walked a long way trying to find our friends when we saw a huge cave. We went into it to be sheltered from the rain. It was very comfortable, and snug, so we fell to sleep immediately. When we awoke, we found ourselves back at our picnic ground and all our friends around us. They said that as soon as it started to rain and we did not come back, they started to look for us and found us curled up in the cave, fast asleep.

Pleased With Book

Dear Uncle Jed: My book came yesterday. I thank you very much for it, and for sending it to me. Was very pleased with it.

I was telling my mother one day I wish I had a book to read. She asked me why I didn't write a story, so I thought I would try it.

Likes Norwich

Dear Uncle Jed: As I have just lived here about four weeks and I want to tell you and the Wide Awakes how much I like Norwich city and also Norwich Town. One Saturday morning my sisters and I thought we would take a walk and see how Norwich looked.

Some of the things we saw were the old homestead of Lydia Huntley Sigourney and also the place where she taught school. We also saw the Otis library. I am very much interested in Norwich and I am also very, very proud of Norwich. Hope the Wide Awakes enjoy going to school and also my story. Many wishes to Uncle Jed.

Glad School Has Started.

Uncle Jed: I enjoyed the long summer vacation but I am glad school has started. The first week or two of vacation were lovely but after that the days seemed long. I don't have many boys or girls to play with as there aren't many who live near me. My people went to the beach for a week. We went to Pleasant View and I had a great time there. I wished I could have stayed there all summer. We couldn't go in swimming as the water was too rough but we had a nice time playing in the sand. Then we went to Westerly one night and saw a show. It was a good show. All movies. One day we had a picnic on the beach. There are a lot of people who go to Pleasant View every summer and I hope I will be able to go next year. I am an upper grade girl. My birthday is next week and my mother says I am going to have a party. I read the Wideawake page every week. One of our neighbors gets The Bulletin and she saves the Wideawake page for me.

Likes to Read Books.

Dear Uncle Jed: I like to read books. That is why I am writing to you as I hope some day that I will win one of your books. You seem to have a lot of nice books. I like books like Tom the Telegraph Boy, The Boy Adventurer, stories about Wild West boys, and Indian stories. This summer I read a story about Robinson Crusoe and I liked it. I would have like to have been him. He had a lot of exciting times. He lived on an island for ever so long with a colored man he called Friday. He had a hard time getting along and getting enough to eat. I wish I could have been with him. I like girls' books also. Some of them are interesting. I like to go to school.

Our Week End At the Beach.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell you about the Camp Fire Girls' week end at Beach Pond.

The first night we were there we had a weenie roast which we all enjoyed. I will not tell you how much I ate, because you'll laugh.

After supper two of us girls went rowing. It took all my time dodging stones. The pond was full of them.

A few of us girls went fishing later in the evening. We did not get any fish but we enjoyed ourselves.

We went swimming too. After it got dark we played tricks on each other. I felt so sorry when we had to go home because we were having so much fun.

STATE RESTS IN TRIAL OF "ICE BOX" BANDITS

Raymond's answer was, "We went 75 miles an hour up a long hill." The conclusion of the notes was a record of a statement: "Wasn't it funny that we were both together that night somewhere else."

Officer Pettingill was severely grilled by Attorney Moynihan as to how he managed to take down everything said verbatum inasmuch as he was not a short-hand expert. The note book was entered by the defense as Exhibit WG for identification. Attorney Moynihan purported to show that both Raymond and Lalone knew that the witness was there for a "purpose" and that their conversation was frank and misleading in many respects. He referred to the note book as a "story" book. Witness stuck to a denial that he had heard anything as to the violence used by the Springfield police other than that Lalone said that he had been called a son-of-a-b——by an officer.

When court convened this morning Judge Yeomans announced that he would hold a civil session in Hartford next Friday and that consequently there would not be a court session here. Roll call of the jury was taken by Clerk Curtis Dean and Commissioner Robert T. Hurley of the state police, who was on the stand when court adjourned last Friday afternoon was recalled for questioning by Attorney Thayer of the defense.

The state had in preparation for testimony, 18 Masachusetts owners of Willys-Knight sedans bearing registrations in the series of which the numbers "40" were the first three. The purpose of this was to eliminate all other sedans as described as the car used by the killers of State Officer Nelson, from any presence at the scene at the time of the shooting on April 6. In this connection John Grabble of Worcester was called to the stand but the state immediately met with an objection by the defense which Judge Yeomans sustained, on the grounds that such testimony was immaterial. The jury was excused to the ante-room while the attorneys argued their cause in the matter, the arguments being placed by Attorneys Harvey and Moynihan. Judge Yeomans continued to sustain the objection, however, and the witnesses were not called. David Miller of Webster, Mass., testified that he found two caps near a stone wall on the state highway outside of Webster on April 11. The caps, found about one-half mile from Brandon road, were sizes 7 and 6 7-8. One was sandy colored while the other was light gray with blue threading. These caps had previously been identified as those purchased by Raymond and Lalone from the Ascher Haberdashery in Springfield. The caps were turned over to the Webster police. The caps were found while Miller and another man were raking rubbish near the stone wall. John J. Galvin of Dudley, Mass., said that he was raking rubbish and leaves with Miller when the two caps were found some 25 feet from the road.

John C. Templeton, member of the Webster, Mass., police department and Chief James H. Hetherman of that department testified to receiving the caps and of noting the sizes and colors. The caps were packed in a box and sent to the Springfield police.

Daniel F. McCarthy of Springfield, Mass., captain of the police detective bureau there, testified that the caps were received in Springfield and marked for identification. Lieutenant John P. Fleming of the Springfield department was recalled to the stand to testify as to the identification of the caps.

Frank Mulrain of Worcester, Mass., an automobile mechanic at the W. F. Bennett garage said that he had found a bullet in the gas tank of a Willys-Knight sedan owned by Francis J. Higgins while repairing a bullet hole in the tank. He turned the bullet over to the Worcester police.

W. T. Finneran of Worcester, lieutenant of the detective bureau told of receiving the bullet from Mulrain on April 12. The bullet was identified by him and marked Exhibit Y. He also related incidents relative to the rounding up of Raymond and Lalone at their homes on April 1 and of their identification by Officer Gallagher of Springfield in a police line-up. He said that Officer Gallagher had no difficulty in picking Lalone and Raymond out of a line of nine men. He was cross-examined by Attorneys Moynihan and Thayer.

Ernest Kimball a photographer was recalled and he identified photographs taken by him of Main street in Pomfret, showing scenes of the shooting. The photographs were marked Exhibit Z.

After the noon recess Lieutenant Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson barracks was recalled to testify as to the finding by him of pieces of plate glass near the scene of the shooting.

Two firearms expert then established, without question by the defense, that the bullet recovered from the gasoline tank of the Willys-Knight sedan had been fired from the .32 calibre revolver of Officer Gallagher of the Springfield police. They were J. Henry Fitzgerald of Hartford and Captain William A. Jones of New York city. The methods used in arriving at this conclusion were explained. There was no cross-examination of these witnesses. The revolver was marked Exhibit F. F.

Officer Pettengill then took the stand and occupied it until 4:30, a total of nearly three hours. The final witness was County Detective William E. Jackson of this city, who briefly told of the taking of Lalone and Raymond from Massachusetts into this state to stand trial.

When the state rested its case it had examined a total of 60 witnesses.

The defense immediately called to the stand Lieutenant Urquhart and he was grilled on the doings of a conference held between himself, County Detective Jackson and Albert Raymond at the county jail in Brooklyn one week ago Monday. The text of this testimony was that Raymond had said that he was not in Webster on the night of April 6 and that he would not "squeal" on Lalone, as there was nothing to squeal about and he did not think Lalone would squeal on him (Raymond).

Court adjourned at this point.

POETRY

"Leaves"

To my door step came a leaf,
Stealing softly as a thief,
In its dress of somber brown
Making not the slightest sound.
Up, up, step by step,
Then falling where none others crept
Because it was the autumn's time
To leave its tree and fall to earth.

Where one leaflet early fell,
And I thought 'twould be as well
To leave it till the others came.
In doing so was I to blame?
For all the leaflets then that flew,
And bigger daily their depth grew,
Until my little cottage eaves
Peaked out above a sea of leaves

Having no desire to strive,
Or to be buried thus alive,
I thought as how I might acquire
A harmless labor-saving fire.
Now my cot in ashes lies,
And I has'e two bloodshotten eyes
But as to how the fire got set
I haven't told a person yet.

—Alice Silvius, Jerome, in The Pathfinder.

Homesick

Sometimes I grow so homesick for the old hills of home,
The high hills, the green hills, that wait there for me yet;
I never have forgotten them, though far my feet might roam—
The blue hills, the true hills—how could my heart forget?

Here in the loud-voiced city there are no kindly hills—
Only hills of iron, great honeycombs of steel
That sing no song for my worn soul
like the happy rills
That gush below the hills of home—
dear hills that bless and heal.

Oh, for a day in the ancient hills!
Oh, for an afternoon
To lie upon their velvet side and watch the clouds of foam,
And twilight, and pale evening, and the, the solemn moon—
But I am pent in the city, ye far blue hills of home!

—By Charles Hanson Towne.

SEIZURE OF MUCH HOME BREW BEER AT HOLLOWAY HOUSE, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—The police received an anonymous tip this morning that a truck was being loaded with beer at the residence of Leon Holloway, 127 Elm street. As a result of the tip a seizure of beer of the home brew type was made and four arrests resulted, although two taken into custody were later discharged. As a result of the tip, Abraham Shapiro, Montauk avenue, was in the police court this morning charged with possession. Pleading guilty, he was fined $200 and costs. He paid. Holloway was charged with the manufacture of liquor of an alcoholic content greater than one-half of one per cent. for the beer seized revealed alcoholic content of two and one-half per cent. His case was continued to the 20th inst. Nathan Heffernan, 40 Gorton street and Horace Saunders, 12 Lewis street, young men in the employ of Shapiro, were charged with transporting, but Shapiro appearing at police headquarters and admitting ownership of the beer, he was prosecuted and the young men were discharged. Heffernan and Saunders declared that they knew nothing of the contents of the load they received at the Holloway house, stating that they had been sent there by their employer and supposed that they were given either near-beer or soda water. About 8 o'clock Desk Sergeant James Caffrey received a telephone message, the informer stating that two men were loading a truck with beer at the Holloway home. Acting Sergeant Augustus Ray and Patrolman George Bruhns were sent to the Holloway residence, but when they arrived there the truck and its load had departed. The officers started through Jefferson avenue and had traveled but a short distance when they came upon the truck which contained 32 cases of beer. The truck and load were seized and taken to police headquarters, together with Heffernan and Saunders. A short time afterwards, Shapiro appeared there and admitted that the young men were acting under orders and that he was the owner of the beer. Heffernan and Saunders were released and Shapiro was prosecuted. The officers then went to the Holloway home and arrested the alleged manufacturer of the beer. Thirteen additional cases of the home brew product were found. Shapiro, who has been prosecuted before for violation of the prohibition law is engaged in the bottling business, his establishment, which is located on Bank street, having ben raided by prohibition enforcement agents over a year ago.

COUNTY COUNCIL PLANNED FOR RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—Formation of a New London County Council of Religious Education is projected. Councils of Religious Education are the modern names for what all knew a few years back as Sunday School associations. For many years such an association has been helping the work throughout New London county, but more and more the northern and southern half of the county are coming together as separate units. Some little time ago, Norwich formed a Council of Religious Education, and it is understood that if the southern half of the county did likewise the membership would be extended to take in all of the Bible schools of the northern half of the county. A meeting for this purpose has been called for this week Friday, Sept. 21, in the New London Y. M. C. A. The Y cafeteria will serve supper to those who make reservation before that date in the banquet rooms on the second floor. Invitations have been sent every pastor and superintendent of the schools in the southern half of the county on record with the County Council office. Following the supper the matter will be presented by Wallace I. Woodin, secretary of the Connecticut Council of R. E., Hartford, and discussion of the possibility will take places.

Breed Theatre

Actual scenes of Paris during the American Legion convention there have been incorporated in "Legionnaires in Paris," the FBO comedy featuring Al Cooke and Kit Guard which will open at the Breed theatre for two day run commencing today. A corps of motion picture cameramen followed every phase of the convention throughout its duration, and prints of these scenes were rushed to the FBO studios for incorporation in "Legionnaires in Paris." All of the atmospheric shots which make the picture so realistic were actually filmed on the ground during the festivities, it is said.

Written by Louis Sarecky, the story deals with the adventures of two former American doughboys on their return to the French capital as Legion delegates from a little American town. Arriving at La Havre, Cooke and Guard find themselves awaited by a squad of gendarmes. Believing that are to be arrested for their activities in Paris just after the war, they escape to the city incognito. Then follows a merry chase through the hilarious scenes of the convention which ends only when Al and Kit discover that they are wanted because a French general wishes to decorate them for valor during the war.

New London County Fair

Pronounced interest in the Old Fiddlers contest for eastern Connecticut and western Rhode Island is warming up and new names are being added daily to the list of aspirants. Rhode Island has come forward with the name of Henry Ford as their first choice of one of the Judges, and an invitation has been sent to Mr. Ford at Dearborn, Mich., requesting his services at the contest to be held on the grounds of the County Fair at Norwich, Sept. 28th. The other members of the class of three Judges to decide upon who is to be the champion and the awarding of the prizes are Uncle Joe Shippee of Plainfield, champion fiddler of New England, and Prof. Ed. Tinkham of Hanover, the popular old time fiddler and prompter of New London and Windham Counties.

The first name received by the Old Fiddlers Fair Committee was that of Prof. James McCauley of Hopedale, Mass. and a member of the Old Fiddlers club of Chepatchet, R. I. Prof McCauley was winner of the silver cup over a field of eighty-eight, all New England states represented and broadcasted over the radio from station WBZ, the radio audience decided the contest. Eight qualified and 30,000 votes were received. The prize was the Henry Ford silver cup, the only cup ever given by Mr. Ford. Mr. McCauley will have the cup on exhibition at the fair.

Joseph Hopkins of Clayville, R. I. Eighty-two years young and one of the champion old time fiddlers will enter the contest. Mr. Hopkins has many prizes won in contests through Rhode Island.

Alonzo G. Wood a 65 year old artist of Hope, Rhode Island, in his talk to the committee expressed the idea that he feared no other old fiddler who might enter in the race. Mr. Wood will play without an accompanist.

William A. Spink, head of the old fiddlers club of Rhode Island and full of pep, will be on hand with his ancient fiddle and give a good account of himself.

Henry Bodern of Arctic, R. I. a half French and half Indian is an entertainer of much repute. Mr. Bodern cannot read or write nor does he know a note from a knot hole, yet his trick playing will make one of the big hits at the fair.

H. A. Wheeler of Norwich, who has won prizes in old fiddlers contests has entered his name and will be given an opportunity to hold up the musical dignity of eastern Connecticut.

J. A. Randall of R. F. D. No. 1, Yantic, who plays entirely by ear will be heard by the hundreds of rooters for New London County.

Frank L. Blanding of Auburn, R. I. a banjo player of over 72 years of age, and a banjo player for 60 years will accompany those desiring his services. Mr. Blanding is a member of the old fiddlers club and never misses a chance to demonstrate his skill on "the old banjo."

Mrs. Arthur C. Green of Washington, R. I., will preside at the piano, as she always does, when the club holds its conventions. Her services may be had free by any and all those taking part in the exercises.

Other contestants names will be published in another week and full details of the contest made clear prior to the event.

Let every old fiddler of eastern Connecticut, become patriotic enough to enter his name. Drop a postal card to H. R. Branche, chairman, Norwich.

Strand Theatre

Vice of today is of the gilded sort. This is emphasized in the ultra-modern picture of the underworld, "Dressed to Kill," Fox Films production, playing the Strand theatre. Edmund Lowe, Mary Astor, Ben Bard play the leading roles.

The exact replica of a French village street was built for the many scenes in the big Tiffany production, "Once and Forever," which will be the feature picture attraction for a two days run. The story from the pen of Houston Branch was taken from a real incident observed by the author while in France, and from his descriptions the Tiffany production staff built the village, giving it the real atmosphere for the filming of the big dramatic scenes that abound in this story of a little French dairy maid and the wealthy youth. In the cast are such well known screen players as Patsy Ruth Miller, John Haron, Burr McIntosh, Adele Watson, Emily Fitzroy and Vadim Uraneff.

An added attraction on the stage for the two days starting today will be Texas Ann and her rodeo and western performers. These performers have played in some of the biggest screen productions as well as doubling for the big screen stars in Hollywood, from where they have recently come.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Whitefoot Has Another Fright
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The careless always will, 'tis clear,
In danger be of sudden fear.
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and Mrs. Whitefoot and Trader the Wood Rat had become thoroughly settled in their homes in the little sugar-house in the Green Forest. At first Mr. and Mrs. Whitefoot had rather resented the coming of Trader the Wood Rat, but Trader is a pleasant fellow and a good neighbor, and they had grown to like him. So the three were getting along very nicely. There was a wonderful feeling of security inside that little sugar-house. Once inside, they felt absolutely safe. Had not Yowler the Bobcat and Cubby Bear tried to get in and failed?

But, of course, they couldn't stay inside the little sugar-house all the time. More and more they went outside, always ready to run back at the least hint of danger. During the daytime they rarely went out at all. You know they are little night-folk. They love the hours of darkness. But even more they love the hours between daylight and darkness—the hours of dusk. And they love moonlight nights. When there was moonlight they would be out nearly all night.

"Hooty the Owl will get you if you don't watch out," insisted Mrs. Whitefoot

It happened one moonlight night that Whitefoot had strayed a little farther than usual. For several nights they had not had a single scare and so Whitefoot had grown a little careless. You see, Whitefoot is very like other little folk in that he needs to be constantly reminded of things. He needed to be reminded that there was danger lurking all through the Green Forest. So Whitefoot was running about carelessly. Instead of keeping in the Black Shadows he often ran right out in the moonlit spaces and this was a very careless thing to do. Mrs. Whitefoot had warned him several times that he shouldn't do it.

"Hooty the Owl will get you if you don't watch out," insisted Mrs. Whitefoot. "You know how he snoops around without making a sound."

"Pooh!" declared Whitefoot. "He hasn't been around here since we've lived over here. Don't you worry about me. I can take care of myself. I know what I'm about."

It wasn't five minutes later that Whitefoot ran out into a little patch of moonlight and began running about hunting for something to eat. He was so intent on what he was doing that he thought of nothing else. What it was that warned him to look back of him all of a sudden he doesn't know to this day. But he did look back and he looked just in time. With a squeal of sheer fright he jumped to one side and dived through a little knothole in an old log that hapened to be lying there. And as he left the ground it that jumo someone else landed on the very spot he had just left. It was some one with a black mask on his face and rings on his tail. Of course, you know who that was. It was Bobby Coon. Bobby had just happened along with nothing in particular on his mind when he caught sight of Whitefoot running about in the moonlight. Now Bobby Coon, like so many other people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, like a Mouse now and then on his bill-of-fare. If Whitefoot hadn't happened to turn his head just when he did Bobby certainly would have had him. It was a narrow escape—one of the narrowest escapes Whitefoot had had for a long time.

Mrs. Whitefoot had seen it. She had been peeping out from the Black Shadows, and she was too frightened to even squeal a warning. When she saw Whitefoot disappear in that knothole she gave a little sigh of thankfulness, and then how she did run for the old sugar-house!

The next story: "Bobby Coon Grows Angry."

FALL HAY-FEVER IS RESULT OF RAGWEED

Certain of the million people in the United States who are listed as hay-fever victims are now developing symptoms of a "fall cold" or batch of sneezes. These are the ones who were not affected by the pollen of grasses of spring and early summer but are highly susceptible to the ragweeds, dwarf and giant, which grow profusely along roadsides and in vacant lots at this time of the year.

It is thought by many that their late summer hay-fever attacks are caused by the brilliant colored golden rod which also grows profusely by the wayside. But this is a common error since hay-fever is caused by wind-blown pollen, and golden rod is insect-borne. The only way in which golden rod could cause hayfever would be by inhaling this pollen in direct contact with the flowers, and this seldom happens over extended periods.

The ragweeds produce large quantities of pollen, light and buoyant, which are carried by the wind long distances. Great clouds of pollen may be shaken into the air on an extremely windy day. These plants flower at about the same time each year, regardless of weather conditions. So people who are susceptible to ragweed can anticipate their hay-fever attacks almost to a day. This is unlike the hay-fever from spring and summer grasses whose blossoming is often retarded by cold rainy weather, thus delaying the attack.

As in early spring and summer, fall hay-fever can be prevented by a course of diagnostic treatments to determine through skin tests the offending agent (that is which plant pollen causes it), after which periodic serum treatments with such pollen will relieve the symptoms. A preventive treatment preceding the anticipated attack is more effective than that given during the course of the disease.

HOT SPRINGS CONFERENCE WILL DISCUSS NTL. PROBLEMS

Means by which the combined forces of business organizations can be utilized most effectively during the coming year to aid in the solution of the nation's outstanding economic and legislative problems will be discussed at a conference to be held by the chamber of commerce of the United States at Hot Springs, Arkansas, October 5 to 9, according to a statement issued by the Norwich chamber of commerce.

The Hot Springs conference will bring together the business opinion of every section of the country as well as the opinion of the different lines of industry, finance and commerce. This widespread point of view will be brought to focus upon a wide variety of national business topics today confronting American business. Among these are: Street and highway traffic, trade relations, national wholesale conference, state and local taxation and expenditures, federal reserve system, trade association procedure, fire waste and prevention, reorganization of government departments and commercial aeronautics.

In addition to these subjects, other important national questions will be considered by some twenty committees of the national chamber dealing with the broad field of American business activity. These committees will take up such questions as national water power policies, agriculture, foreign commerce, and transportation and communication.

SUES INSURANCE COMPANIES TO COLLECT HIS CLAIM

Three suits, each for $5,350, have been brought in the superior court by Joseph W. Carievale, doing business at 56 Boswell avenue as the Norwich Barber Supply Co., to collect fire insurance loss occasioned by a fire at the place on April 3, 1928, by which he claims a loss of approximately $14,783.77. The defendant companies are the Homestead Fire Insurance Co. of Baltimore, Md., the Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., and the Federal Union Insurance Co., of Chicago, Ill.

In each of the policies, $4,350 covered on stock and $1,000 on fixtures. The premiums for a year were $55 for the Homestead; $55 for the Federal Union, and $51.32 for the Victory policy.

The complaint states that Carjevale has complied with the conditions of the policies but the companies have refused to have an appraisal of the loss and damage, which he demanded on Aug. 20, 1928.

COUNTY RELIGIOUS BODY PLANNING FOR CONVENTION

Plans for the annual convention of the New London County Council for Religious Education have been in progress for about three months, and are so far advanced that the first notice to the Bible schools throughout the country will be made through the mails this week. The convention is to be held in the Huntington Street Baptist church at New London on Friday, Oct. 19, and sessions are planned to begin at 11 a. m. and last into the evening.

The program committee consists of the Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, pastor First Baptist church, this city, and president of the county council; Mrs. Sunsan Penhallow elder, of New London, secretary of the county council, and Wallace I. Wooding, Hartford, secretary of the Connecticut Council of Religious Education. Through its efforts a strong group of speakers is to appear on the program, while exhibits and conferences will add to the working material which will be assembled for the workers.

Prof. James P. Berkeley, Newton Theological seminary, will speak twice and lead a conference on methods for the urban Bible school; the Rev. E. E. Sundt, pastor of the Federated church, South Willington, will speak at the afternoon session; the Rev. William D. Barnes, professor at Hartford Theological seminary, will lead the conference on methods for the rural schools, and the Rev. M. J. Creeger, pastor of the Hazardville Methodist Episcopal church, will lead the devotions at the morning and afternoon sessions and speak at the young people's rally in the evening.

A promotion committee, of which Herbert W. Hicks, associate secretary of the New London Y. M. C. A., is chairman, is charged with the responsibility of securing the maximum attendance, and especial emphasis will be laid upon the supper hour and evening meeting. A program of fun will follow the supper, which will be served by the women of the entertaining church, and the evening meeting will take the form of a young people's rally. To this each church will be urged to send extra delegates, especially their young people, and the program will be planned especially for them. It is hoped that the program committee will be able to find a pageant which may be used as a feature of this meeting.

WATER UTILITIES INCREASE PINE FOREST ACREAGE

Approximately 450,000 pine tree seedlings have been planted on the watersheps of Connecticut water supply reservoirs this year. Of this number, which is about 100,000 greater than the amount planted on watershed areas last year, the water companies of the state planted 300,000 while the public water departments of the state planted 150,000, making in all about 450 acres of land planted. Within the last two decades, the water companies of the state have converted approximately 6,000 acres of otherwise idle watershed land into pine forests.

The total acreage owned by water utilities throughout the stae is about 65,000. Control of this extent of land is of vital importance in order to prevent absolutely the creation of sources of contamination on land from which water flows into the reservoirs. Use of it for industrial, farming, dwelling or other purposes would inevitably create danger from impurities.

Ownership of this vast extent of land, however, calls for huge investments, and it is to obtain some return from that investment, as well as to prevent the erosion of watersheds, that the water companies have adopted the plan of planting pine trees on whatever land is available for that purpose. All of the land is not suitable for planting, but each company is making every effort to convert available land into pine forests. Some of the larger companies already have 100 per cent. of such land planted and add each year only enough to make up for the trees that have been cut down to be sold. Others have even gone so far as to plant fruit orchards.

HERTZ WINS SUIT IN COMMON PLEAS COURT

Frank Hertz of this city is the winner of a suit brought against him by Joseph Sigal of New London in the common pleas court, according to a decision handed down by Judge A. F. Libby who heard the trial of the case some time ago.

Sigal sued for damages of $1,350 on a claim that this amount was due from Hertz for the rent of premises in New London which Hertz surrendered to Sigal on Feb. 7, 1928. Judge Libby rendered judgment for Hertz, finding that the better evidence was that the sub-lease between Sigal and Hertz w. one from month to month. The rental of the place was for $225 and Sigal, who sub-let it to Hertz, claimed Hertz owed him for the unexpired term of the original lease of 11 months.

Boys Report Campaign Battle

Four boys who came to The Bulletin office Tuesday night, commandeered a typewriter and labored with it for 20 minutes, produced the following result:

"If anyone passing the Post Office at 8.30 this evening they would have seen a terrible battle between a Hoover and a Smith boy the Hoover boy took a awful liking, while the Smith boy took his pin away, and gave him a bloody nose. And sent him home with a sad and disgusting looking face. Later the same boy went up to the Hoover headquarters and got a picture of Hoover which he destroyed and threw in the street. If any more Hoover boys would like to get the same meet at the Junior Smith club."

The NEW BUICK is the NEW STYLE

A triumph in individual beauty ... a refreshing and radical departure from the tiresome commonplace ... a new style, a richer style, a more alluring style than the world has ever known!

THE SILVER ANNIVERSARY BUICK
With Masterpiece Bodies By Fisher

Only one completely new motor car style in the past twenty-four months—only one truly original and beautiful development in body design—and, as the whole world realizes, it is the Silver Anniversary Buick with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher!

Here is an entirely new scheme of body lines and contours—arresting new color combinations—matchless new interiors—new appointments of comfort and convenience unapproached by any other automobile of the day!

Here is true distinction wedded to genuine good taste. Here is a new style—a richer style—a more alluring style—than the motor world has ever known. And here, too, is tremendous increase in power, in flexibility, in responsiveness—so outstanding as to amaze even those motorists who have long been familiar with Buick's superior performance.

ROUGH WATER ALONG THE NORTH ATLANTIC COAST

Yacht and Barge Were Driven Ashore at Lewes, Del.—Standard Oil Tanker Grounded on Staten Island—A Few Small Crafts Were Worked Ashore—Beach Resorts Were Troubled by Unusually High Tides—At Some Points the Gale Reached a Velocity of More Than 70 Miles an Hour.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Old man ocean, made fighting mad by the buffeting of the West Indian-Florida hurricane, struck out with both fists at the North Atlantic coast today.

Ships sought shelter, beach resorts were troubled by unusually high tides and a few small craft were grounded as the northeast wind, reaching gale velocity of more than seventy miles an hour, piled up heavy seas on its wild course up the shoreline.

The weather bureau advised that a whole gale was blowing from Atlantic City, N. J., to Provincetown, Mass., and issued storm warnings from the Cape Cod town north to Boston and Eastport, Me.

The forty-five ton yacht Tigress, owned by Samuel P. Curtis of Philadelphia, dragged her anchor off Lewes, Del., and went ashore. A Philadelphia barge, seeking shelter in the harbor at Lewes, was driven hard aground near the lighter craft, and a coast guard cutter was assigned to stand by both.

A fifty-foot yacht that struck off Atlantic Highlands, N. J., and a Standard Oil tanker that grounded on Staten Island were other maritime casualties of the storm.

The wind was accompanied by rain and lower temperatures.

FLORIDA STORM DEATHS NUMBER BETWEEN 300 AND 400

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 19—(AP)—With the deaths from last Sunday's hurricane still not definitely determined but estimated by relief workers at between 325 and 400 persons, rescue squads toiled through the stricken Lake Okeechobee area today.

Howard W. Selby, chairman of the Palm Beach County Red Cross, announced that 200 persons were known by his workers to be dead. He estimated the count will reach 400 when final figures are available. Property losses to Palm Beach county alone, he said, will reach nearer $30,000,000 than his previous estimate of $20,000,000. Fifteen thousand persons are homeless in the county, he declared, and 8,000 persons in the lake region are desperately in need of medical aid, food and clothing.

Relief work throughout most of the area was under the direction of nearby Red Cross units, civilians and the national guard. Three representatives of the National Red Cross were here from Washington for a survey.

Danger of disease was reported by workers to be imminent in some sections of he stricken district unless all the refugees are immediately evacuated and given medical treatment and preventatives. Additional medical supplies have been requested.

THREE VESSELS WRECKED OFF DELAWARE CAPES

LEWES, Del., Sept. 9—(AP)—Most of the vessels that sought shelter behind the Delaware breakwater from the fury of the northeast gale that swept up the coast early today, rode out the storm safely.

Three vessels, however, fell victims of the high wind which reached a velocity of 76 miles an hour at the Delaware capes.

The barge Lottie, of Baltimore, owned by the Watham company, and carrying a cargo of coal from Norfolk to New York, sank inside the harbor refuge. The crew was saved by Captain Savage of the tug T. J. Hooper.

Early in the day the 45-ton motor yacht Tigress, owned by Samuel P. Curtis, of Philadelphia and the barge Thomas J. McNally, also of Philadelphia, dragged their anchors and were blown aground on the beach here.

RELIEF WORK IN PORTO RICO IS IN FULL SWING

SAN JUAN, Sept. 19—(AP)—Relief for hurricane-stricken Porto Rico was in full swing tonight. The army was distributing tents and blankets for emergency hospitals and shelter of the weak. The Red Cross had shot out food supplies in all directions. The San Juan chamber of commerce had moved to check profiteering and to extend credit.

Funds of $60,000 advanced by banks to the relief committee headed by Justice Del Toro were placed today in the hands of agencies for distribution in every island city and town. The San Juan relief fund is nearing the $100,080 mark.

Col. George Helms, commanding the 6th U. S. Infantry, was directing the distribution of army equipment today, while his soldiers were aiding the Red Cross in moving the supplies which arrived on a transport yesterday.

SCHOONER IN DISTRESS IN LONG ISLAND SOUND

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—A coast guard patrol boat was sent late today to the assistance of an unidentified two masted schooner which was flying distress signals in Long Island sound near Mamaroneck. Three men were said to be aboard the vessel. A 60-mile northeast wind was blowing.

$1,000,000 DAMAGE BY WIND STORM AT NEW PROVIDENCE

NASSAU, New Providence, Bahamas, Sept. 19—(AP)—The damage from the hurricane in this island alone was estimated to be $1,000,000. The city has restored its public services but miles of wires still are down in the country districts. Many sponge boats still are unreported but most of them are believed to have found shelter in the outer islands. A three-masted schooner which was torn from its anchorage here was found drifting today, bottom up, six miles out.

SMITH ENTHUSIASTICALLY RECEIVED IN NEBRASKA

GOV. SMITH'S TRAIN EN ROUTE TO OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 19—(AP)—Hailed by cheering crowds as he traveled through the farming belt of southeastern Nebraska into Kansas on his way to the border state of Oklahoma where he speaks tomorrow night, Gov. Smith was given another sample today of the way folks west of the Mississippi take political campaigns.

The democratic nominee for president, who endorsed the principle of the vetoed McNary-Haugen farm bill in an address last night to a demonstrative throng that packed the Omaha auditorium to its rafters, received an enthusiastic welcome at Lincoln, the state capital, and other Nebraska points where his train stopped. Late today his eleven car special crossed the Nebraska-Kansas line and headed for Topeka, home city of Senator Curtis, the republican vice presidential nominee, where a forty-five minute stop was scheduled early tonight.

The New York governor is due in Oklahoma City at 9 a. m. tomorrow. In his speech there tomorrow night before proceeding to Denver he is expected to take a fling at certain democrats who have bolted their party and at some of his critics. He may touch on the religious issue, which in recent years has had a tremendous influence on Oklahoma politics, and perhaps will have something to say to the Indians of the state, to whom the republicans are counting on Senator Curtis making an appeal.

SOCIALISTS SEE FLAWS IN HOOVER AND SMITH

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—A socialist criticism of the opening campaign speeches of Gov. Smith and Herbert Hoover today characterized the democratic nominee's Omaha address as "vague, weak and barren" in constructive agricultural ideas, and described Hoover's Newark speech as a "mixture of shameless Prussianism and statistical sleight-of-hand."

The comment, issued by the socialist national campaign committee, welcomed the "shift of both major parties from a 'cry baby' campaign to at least an attempted discussion of real issues," but asserted that neither Smith nor Hoover have "offered the workers and farmers any consistent program for dealing with existent evils of apparent industrial and agricultural over-production."

34 RADIO STATIONS WILL BROADCAST SMITH SPEECH

SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE ROMA WILL TAKE OFF

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Sept. 19.—(AP)—Facing a delay of several days before they can make another attempt to bridge the Atlantis, the Roma fliers are preparing an inspection of the motor which will disclose the ailment which nearly plunged the plane into the sea today.

The plane narrowly escaped plunging into the sea today when the motor began to fail and black smoke poured from the exhaust 12 minutes after she had left Old Orchard. Roger Q. Williams, who was manning the controls, circled over Cow Island in search of a landing place but could find none. At one time, the fliers said, it appeared doubtful whether they could make the return to Old Orchard. The plane was only 200 feet in the air when the difficulty developed.

But a few minutes after the single-motored Bellanca took off this morning a message was received from Dr. Mitchell of the weather bureau in New York warning the fliers of dangerous wind conditions along the path of flight. Sabelli said tonight that he expected a delay of some days before the weather is again auspicious for a trans-Atlantic flight. He does not expect to take the air again before Monday, he said.

TELLS OF ATTEMPTS MADE TO KILL LEON TROTZKY

LONDON, Sept. 19—(AP)—The Mail tomorrow will say that attempts have been made to kill Leon Trotzky, one time war commissar of soviet Russia, in his place of exile, Alma-Ata, Turkestan, on the instigation of a plot hatched in Moscow.

The newspaper will say that Trotzky eluded the vigilance of the secret police and smuggled out letters to Christian Rakovsky, former soviet envoy to Great Britain and now himself in exile, describing vividly how his little cottage was besieged by sharpshooters from the cover of the forest and how his son defended the household with two sporting rifles.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The oldest American citizen resident in Mexico, General G. H. M. Agremonte, veteran of five wars and friend of every American ambassador to Mexico for 40 years, celebrated today his 93th birthday. Hale and hearty he smoked some strong cigars and drank toasts with the friends who called all day long to felicitate him.

"I have no recipe, for longevity except to enjoy life and loke your fellow man," he said. "I have smoked and taken drink in gentlemanly fashion all my life and I am not through yet. This is the most interesting generation in which I have lived. I expect to pass 100 years and still be going strong."

LONDON, Sept. 19—(AP)—Unconfirmed rumors that grave political developments had taken place in Spain, were current today. GENEVA, Sept. 19—(AP)—While the preliminary and private parleys of the great naval powers will be held as proposed yesterday by Jonkheer Louden, of Holland, president of the preparatory disarmament commission of the league of nations, still was an open question tonight. LARGEST PRIMARY VOTE ON RECORD IN MASSACHUSETTS

BOSTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—The largest primary vote on record in Massachusetts was cast yesterday when both major political parties nominated their candidates for office. Tabulation of returns today showed that the total vote exceeded 640,000, as compared with the previous high figure of 475,000 set in the primary of 1924.

Benjamin Loring Young, former speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives won the republican nomination for U. S. senator in the principal contest of the primary. He defeated his closest competitor, Eben S. Draper, of Hopedale by approximately 21,000 votes. General Butler Ames, of Lowell, the third candidate for the nomination, was about 50,000 votes behind Draper. Draper had declared himself in favor of any modification of the Volstead act "to promote true temperance," while Young and Ames ran as drys. Young will oppose Senator David I. Walsh, who was unopposed for the democratic nomination in the November election.

Lieut. Gov. Frank G. Allen defeated Frank A. Goodwin, former registrar of motor vehicles by almost 100,000 votes for the republican homination for governor. Goodwin said today he had no intention of bolting the party and running as an independent candidate against Allen in Worcester. In a telegram to Allen, Goodwin expressed his congratulations and said he was gratified that their campaign had been waged on issues and not on personalities.

ANNUAL PARADE OF GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

DENVER, Col., Sept. 19—(AP)—Soldiers who shouldered muskets and answered the call to arms almost seventy years ago passed in review before thousands here today in the sixty-second annual parade of the Grand Army of the Republic.

To a man the white haired warriors of 1861 were in step, in most instances scorning proffered help from younger generations. Over a course of seven-eighths of a mile the army marched. Its ranks thinned by the passing years, only a few of the Civil war veterans were forced to drop out of the line.

True, there were shuffling feet among them but their steps beat an even cadence with the marital music of life and drum. At their head rode George A. Hosely, West Somerville, Mass., chief of staff, on a spirited chestnut horse. Behind the fife and drum corps of the Sons of Union Veterans, Jackson, Mich., trod the Illinois department, every member carried a musket.

Proudly erect, the marchers turned "eyes right" as they passed the stand in which their commander in chief, Elbridge Lafayette Hawk of Sacramento, Cal., reviewed the parade. Wrinkled hands were raised to visors and colors dipped smartly while Hawk returned the salute.

The Long Beach, Cal., drum corps beat out the Battle Hymn of the Republic. Here was the standard of the Rhode Island department and behind it only two veterans.

New Hampshire's standard too had only two veterans in its wake. Vermont's had eight.

SECOND TEST FOR BIG NEW GERMAN DIRIGIBLE

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Sept. 19—(AP)—The big new dirigible "Graff Zeppelin" will, weather permitting be given its second test flight tomorrow. Plans call for eleven hours in the air starting at seven a. m. and with government officers and newspapermen as guests.

The test flight probably will be made toward Munich. A week-end trip to Vienna or Berlin also has been mentioned as a possibility.

Berlin, however, seems a doubtful goal because the ships cruising radius is limited by the quantity of fuel gas which can be carried under present arrangements.

Police Officials Held For Bribery

Captain and Two Detectives Are Under Arrest in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19—(AP)—William C. Knoell, commander of the 10th police district, and his district detectives, Herbert Layre and John Sells, were arrested today on charges of bribery, extortion and conspiracy by order of District Attorney Monaghan on evidences uncovered by the grand jury investigation of gang murders and bootlegging.

Five other detectives, a policeman, and a member of a saloonkeepers' protective association have also been arrested this week on similar charges. A warrant was issued for another detective who is believed to be in Canada.

Monaghan decided to arrest the three today after he had questioned 20 saloonkeepers from the police district. Many of the saloonkeepers, one of them a woman, had been taken before the grand jury for questioning also.

The district attorney made it plain before the warrants were issued that every one of the saloonkeepers he had questioned had told of paying money to police for protection.

Monaghan said the woman, Mrs. Justine Solner, had paid the police more for graft in a month than she paid for the rent of her place, which was $100.

The district attorney said he had obtained evidence that money also was paid to members of the now disbanded Unit No. 1, organized by Gen. Smedley D. Butler when he was director of public safety, and abolished at the start of the mayor's administration.

The police department's effort to clean up the city as the result of Mayor Macke's orders, which was conducted independently of the grand jury investigation, today resulted in the suspension of Capt. William G. West, commander of a so-called Tenderloin district.

Supt. of Police William B. Mills said the suspension was due to conditions in Captain West's district, but did not specify what these conditions were.

HAD COLLECTED MORE THAN $10,000 FROM SALOONKEEPERS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19—(AP)—John Sells, a district detective, testified in open court before Judge Edwin O. Lewis today that he had collected more than $10,000 from saloonkeepers during the last six months from his superior, Capt. William C. Knoell, commander of the 10th police district.

The testimony was given at the hearing of Knoell, who with Sells and Herbert Layre another district detective, had been arrested on charges of bribery, extortion and conspiracy by order of District Attorney Monaghan on evidence alleged to have been uncovered by the grand jury investigation of gang murders and bootlegging.

At the conclusion of the hearing, Knoell was held in $15,000 bail for court; Layre in $10,000, and Sells in $5,000. All three were stripped of their badges and other marks of police authority by Assistant Supt. of Police Caleb J. Brinton, who at the same tim suspended them from duty and ordered them to trial before the civil service commission.

Sells testified that on each Monday he had collected $500 from John Englemann, a saloonkeeper, who, he said, acted as the representative of 20 saloonkeepers in the district. Out of each $500, Sells said he kept $60 for himself and turned the remainder over to Knoell.

Assistant District Attorney Bryan A. Hermes exhibited an envelope bearing Captain Knoell's name and containing $5,000 in $100 bills. He told the court the envelope had been obtained from a woman in whose custody it had been given to keep for Knoell.

Mr. Hermes also exhibited two bank books in which he said it was shown that Knoell had made large deposits since he became commander of the district. Knoell is 56 and has been on the police force 27 years.

STRIKE CONFRONTING 55 WESTERN RAILROADS

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—(AP)—Union officials representing the 70,000 western trainmen and conductors disbanded their conferences here today and returned to their homes to await action of President as the next move in the strike situation confronting 55 western railroads.

The federal board of mediation yesterday terminated its efforts to arbitrate the wage dispute on grounds that the unions and carriers could not agree.

The unions sought wage increases ranging from 10 to 18 per cent., the railroads countering with an offer amounting to about 7 1-2 per cent., contingent upon new working rules. The unions said they would accept the 7 1-2 per cent. but not the rules.

The unions objected to certain demands of the railroads calling for double-header trains and similar stipulations.

President Coolidge is expected to appoint a fact-finding commission to study the railway labor problem. This commission, if appointed, will have 30 days in which to make its survey after which another 30 day period must pass before the rail unions can legally call their strike which is undersood to have been voted

Raymond Testifies In His Own Defense

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 19—The defense in the case of Albert J. Raymond and Roland G. Lalone, Worcester youths charged in the Windham county superior court with the murder of State Policeman Irving H. Nelson in Pomfret, April 6, uncorked a flow of "alibi" testimony today, the first full day of the defense side, intended to counteract the state's offering of evidence that the accused were the occupants of a Willys-Knight sedan bearing the Massachusetts registration 401,976, who figured in a shooting affray with Officer R. P. Gallagher in Springfield, and later, on the evening of April 6, shot and killed State Trooper Nelson. The defense testimony was interrupted during the day with reviews of the evidence presented by several state witnesses who were recalled by the defense.

The defense had opened its case ten minutes before adjournment at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon by calling to the stand Lieutenant Ross V. Urquhart of the Danielson state police barracks. The feature witness today was Albert J. Raymond, one of the accused who was on the stand 40 minutes just prior to the adjournment of court until Thursday morning. Today, Raymond gave a detailed account of what he, by himself or in company with Lalone, the other defendant, had done April 6 and 7. He was being questioned as to the happening at the Worcester detective bureau on April 11 at the time of adjournment.

Lieutenant Urquhart who had already given testimony relative to a conference held by himself and County Detective William E. Jackson at the county jail in Brooklyn Monday, September 10, the day before the trial, with Albert Raymond, resumed the stand this morning. Under questions put by Attorney Moynihan, it was brought out that the witness and County Detective William E. Jackson had almost exclusive charge of the investigation of the case. Witness denied that during the conference Raymond had occasion to say, "You're a damn liar."

John H. Fitts, of Hampton, deputy sheriff of Windham county and engaged as a guard at the jail during the incarceration of Raymond and Lalone testified that he had heard the remark "You're a damn liar" from within the room where the conference was being held between the officers and Raymond. The defense attorneys showed some amusement while Attorney Harvey, special state's attorney in the case, attempted to determine to whom Fitts had told what he had heard.

County Detective W. E. Jackson, who stated that he had been connected with the state police for about 25 years and with the state's attorney's office since 1917 was subjected to a 50-minute grilling by Attorney John B. Hall of Worcester, on what had been said during the conference with Raymond. It was the first time since the trial started that Attorney Hall had taken active part in the questioning of witnesses. Detective Jackson said that he had explained the court systems of three judges or a jury to the accused. He asked Jackson which he would take, and he replied, "If I was innocent I would take the three judges," and the accused had immediately answered, "We want a jury." During the talk with Raymond, witness said, that the accused was warned that anything he might say would be repeated to the state's attorney and that he (Raymond) was being given a last chance to talk at the request of a friend in Worcester. With precision as to detail and action, Detective Jackson then repeated the words and re-acted the motions he had used in demonstration to Raymond what had taken place in the car at the time Officer Nelson was shot. He had described Raymond as intercepting Lalone and crying out, "For Christ's sake don't shoot!" Witness said Raymond considered this for some time and then asked that if two men were held in a shooting if both were guilty, provided only one shot. Jackson explained that this was not always the case and referred to the Chapman case. Raymond said he would rather be dead than get a life sentence. He was reminded that he was a young man and he would have a good chance of securing a pardon. After giving this some thought Raymond said, "I won't squeal on Lalone and I don't think he would squeal on me," then adding, "there is nothing to squeal on Lalone."

Miss Mary Bickford of Worcester, employed in a Valentine making shop, was the next witness. She said that on April 4 she was in civil court in Worcester in connection with an accident in which Albert Raymond was plaintiff and the Worcester Consolidated Railways company the defendant. She had been summoned. Leaving the courtroom with Raymond and Lalone they drove the latter home ad witness went to Raymond's home for lunch. About 2:15 she and Raymond went for a ride to Brigham's Spa, a hot-dog stand of repute, returning to Grafton Square in Worcester about 3 o'clock. Raymond got a haircut and they went for another ride, returning home at 5:30 o'clock when they parted company. A photograph of the 1926 class of Dean Academy of which Raymond was a member was shown her and Raymond identified. Witness also identified four snapshots of Raymond, all purporting to show that he parted his hair in the middle to offset certain state testimony that it was parted on the left side. The group photograph and the snap-shots were entered as Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5. Under cross-examination by Attorney Harvey she said that after reading the newspapers of Raymond's arrest in connection with trouble on April 6, she told her mother that she was ready to testify that she was with him on that date. She also described the Ford coupe owned by Raymond.

Attorney F. Joseph Donohue, affiliated with the firm of Mahoney and Moynihan, of Worcester, told of the civil case in which he represented Raymond. The summons served on Miss Bickford was entered as Exhibit 6. After court, Attorney Donohue, said that he had seen Raymond, Lalone and Miss Bickford riding toward Grafton square.

Albert LeBlanc, a former resident of Grafton street, Worcester, said that he was employed at the Square Deal garage in the vicinity of Grafton square at the time of the shooting. About 7

TEX. DEMOCRATS REQUEST HOOVER TO STUMP STATE

Delegation From the Lone Star State Tells of Open Revolt of Democrats in the State—Thomas B. Love, Fomer National Democratic Committeeman, Assured Hoover That a Journey to Texas Would Enable Him to Carry the State—Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Has Requested the Nominee to Appear in Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(AP)—Renewed appeals to Herbert Hoover to enlarge his speaking itinerary to conclude a swing into Texas and a speech at Chicago came to him today as he returned to his desk from two days of arduous campaigning in New Jersey.

The Texas invitation was given by a group of democrats from the Lone Star state who called on the republican presidential nominee during the day to tell him that their state was in the doubtful column and that if he would speak there he would stand a better than even chance of getting its electoral votes.

Thomas B. Love, of Dallas, a former national democratic committeeman for Texas, who headed the delegation, said the democrats of his state were in open revolt against the democratic nominee, Governor Alfred E. Smith, and that he had assured Hoover that a journey to Texas would enable him to carry the state.

The request for the nominee to speak at Chicago on his journey westward to vote was made by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican nominee for representative at large for Illinois. She brought to him optimistic reports of the outlook in that state.

No indication came from the nominee, however, of any intention on his part to alter the schedule of speeches he already has set for himself. Neither was there any comment forthcoming from the republican standard bearer regarding the speech of his democratic opponent last night at Omaha.

Despite his tiring New Jersey tour, the nominee was at his desk at his personal headquarters early today and spent one of the busiest days of the past several weeks. In addition to his study of the Texas situation, he gave his attention to fresh reports from Tennessee and Ohio and went over the general situation with members of the republican senatorial campaign committee.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, called on the nominee to discuss plans for opening the campaign in the Buckeye state. The senator described the situation there as very favorable to the republican cause.

Love, who has been actively engaged in the organization of groups in Texas to oppose the election of the democratic presidential nominee, declared that leading democrats were carrying the fight into every county in Texas.

"We are for Hoover," he said, "because we don't want Tammany Hall, liquor or a change in the present immigration restrictions, and because of Herbert Hoover's war service. We are supporting every other democratic candidate except the presidential electors."

Cato Sells, of Fort Worth, another former democratic national committeeman for the state, declared that not one of the six democrats in the party that visited Hoover today had ever before voted for a republican nominee for president.

"But we will in November," he added, "and thousands of other anti-Smith democrats will do the same. We have perhaps a more militant body of Hoover supporters in our state than is to be found in any other part of the union."

Other democrats in the party were Marshall Hicks, of San Antonio, a former democratic state chairman; Alvin S. Moody, of Houston, chairman of the anti-Smith democratic organization in the state; O. B. Colquitt, of Dallas, a former governor; and D. J. Sandifer, of Abilene, president of Simmons university. Three Texas republicans, including R. B. Creager, of Brownsville, republican national committeeman, also were in the party.

Mrs. McCormick brought to Hoover a report that the women of Illinois were intensely interested in the campaign and that no apprehension was felt concerning the vote of the Illinois farmers. While Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the republican national committee, was issuing a statement declaring that Governor Smith's Omaha speech on the agricultural problem was based upon misquotations, telegrams were being received at the Hoover headquarters from various labor leaders commending his speech on labor at Newark Monday night.

WATERSIDE WORKERS AT MELBOURNE RENEW STRIKE

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Strike of the waterside workers broke out again today with the men in most ports refusing jobs under the "two pickups" system. Shipowners decided to advertise for volunteer labor, declaring their determination to end the mix-up and appealing to the community to support their efforts to maintain the transport service.

The two "pickup" system was provided for in the award of an arbitration court. Under it the employes take on labor from the crowd of applicants twice daily. The workers at first refused to work under the system, insisting that only one "pickup" should be made each day. Later they returned to work so today's walkout was the second in two weeks.

KIDNAPED BOY IDENTIFIES PHOTOS OF HIS ABDUCTORS

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—(AP)—Safe at home and the center of a community celebration after being released by kidnapers who had held him prisoner for 10 days, 10-year-old Billy Ranieri today took time out of the jubilee long enough to identify photographs of two men as those of his abductors.

Squads of detectives were hunting these two men and a doctor and lawyer whose names were furnished by relatives of the boys as among those who offered to obtain the boy's release. Three other men, all charged with the kidnaping were in custody. Kidnaping is an offense punishable by death in Illinois.

The boy identified pictures of Julio Saluseo and Pasquale Larocco as those of two of his abductors. Angelo Petitti, arrested several days ago, formally was charged with the kidnaping today, and two others also have been charged with the same offense, having been in custody for a week.

PRISONERS WERE SUBDUED BY TEAR GAS ATTACK

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19—(AP)—Comparative quiet prevailed in Maryland penitentiary tonight after tear gas bombs were used effectively this afternoon to quell the disturbance started Monday night by convicts who claim they were denied a public hearing on their charges that officials have absolved guards at the jail of cruel and inhuman treatment of prisoners."

Of the 800 prisoners who took active part in the demonstration Monday night only 208 still continued on their "strike" today and barricaded themselves in their cells this afternoon in their last defiant stand against the prison authorities.

Steel chains were ripped from their cots and wrapped around their cell doors so that guards could not gain admittance. Some "striking" convicts piled their cell furniture against the doors as additional barricades. Some of the chains were chiselled away by guards and the inmates of the cells handcuffed and taken to more remote parts of the prison.

When the others continued in their rebellion Warden Brady ordered the tear gas squad of the police department to spray one section of the jail with tear gas. Five "striking" convicts were rendered helpless by the fumes and were taken from their cells and lodged in other sections of the building.

Walter Soolow, serving life term for murder, was subdued by six policemen before he could be removed from his cell. Followin the gas barrage the noise finally stopped and all barricades were removed. Alleged leaders of the riot were taken from their cells handcuffed and were removed under heavy guard to isolated cells.

Warden Brady declared that the gas attack had "broken the back of the riot." However, the gas squad, police sharpshooters and extra guards were being kept on duty in the event of another outbreak.

POSSE IS SEEKING BOY KIDNAPPING IN HONOLULU

HONOLULU, Sept. 19—(AP)—All Honolulu became a posse today seeking Gill Jamieson, 10 year old son of Frederick W. Jamieson, vice president of the Hawiian Trust company, who was kidnapped yesterday and held for ransom of $10,000 under threat of death.

No trace had been found of the boy or his abductors despite an all night and all day search by hundreds of police, military and volunteers.

Sheriff Parick Gleason offered $1,000 reward for the return of the boy and the Hawaiian Trust company offered $5,000 for his return with no questions asked.

Twenty thousand school children were released from their classes this afternoon to join in the search.

Three Japanese were held by the police for questioning, but nothing tangible was learned.

DANIELSON

RAIN CAUSES BROOKLYN FAIR TO BE POSTPONED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 19—Brooklyn fair was postponed today. For the first time in years a heavy storm put in its appearance to force a cancellation of the programe for the first day of the annual exhibition of farm and dairy products and all the other things that are the result of the arts of husbandry and its allied activities.

Announcement of the postponement came early—before 9 o'clock this morning—and was made known to the press by Secretary Marshall J. Frink. A raging northeaster forced the early decision that all plans for the day must go into the discard. Weather permitting, today's program will be carried out in full on Thursday.

The few who journeyed over to Brooklyn, all weather obstacles notwithstanding, found the main entrance gates locked.

Inside the grounds everything was at a standstill. Holders of concessions were huddled under tents, where tents for protection from the storm were available. In other instances only bare frames stood, stripped of their canvass, awaiting a more favorable day for doing business. Race horses remained comfortably housed in their stables. Cattle lay at ease in their pens, evidently enjoying what was termed a day off.

Naturally, the postponement was a grievous disappointment to the management of the fair, as well as to all of those who have exhibits there and to the thousands who ordinarily would have enjoyed the show.

However, disappointment did not rule triumphant. Secretary Frink said that with good weather on Thursday the fair would be practically the same as it would have been had it gone into its full stride today. The exhibits will remain undisturbed. The majority of the cattle entered will remain over during Thursday. The races planned for Wednesday will be held Thursday, and so, too, will other events on the card for the first big day of the exhibition.

While there was no announcement pertaining to the program of the fair beyond Thursday, there was the likelihood, it was said today, that it might be extended through to Friday. A good bet, however, for those who want to attend the fair is to be on hand Thursday.

There will be some interesting figures in the town report for those who like to make more or less of a detailed study of how Killingly's various departments function, financially. For instance, town properties, largely the town hall, produced, in rents, $2,270.93, during the fiscal year that closed on July 31. Dog taxes produced another sum amounting to $1,278.99 From the hunting and fishing licenses the revenue was $1,873.25 all of which was paid back to the state. State penalty and bank stock taxes collected from Killingly amounted to $4,811.47 the past year, of which $923.31, has been turned over to the thorough government as its proportion. Revenue from the town farm during the twelve months amounted to $2,988.96.

The past year, it so happened, the town court lost money, though it is hardly to be looked upon as tribunal expected to show a profit. The cost of the court during the period was $2,867.93, the revenue $1,606.94. The deficit in the court account therefore amounts to $1,260.99.

This morning from the home on lower Broad street the funeral of Paul Poirier was held with a high mass of requiem at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. The officers of the mass were Rev. Joseph Berger, Rev. Antheleme Mollard and Rev. J. A. Demers. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, where the committal services were conducted by Rev. Fr. Mollard. The bearers were Benoni Meunier, Nestor Godreau, Amadee Bernier, Peter Turgeon, Felix LeFleur and Frederick LeFleur. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

A death at Goodyear early this morning was that of Mrs. Oldale Juliann, 32, a native of the neighboring town of Foster, where she lived for years. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Hopkins. Mrs. Juliann leaves a son, William, and a daughter, Mrs. Charles G. Carver, of Goodyear. There are eleven grandchildren and 18 great grandchildren.

Lost days count now as the season advances and the time of cold weather drawes nearer, insofar as delays in state highway contracts near Danielson are concerned, among other things Danielson has had what informality calls a "tough break" this year as to the rebuilding of state highways leading into, or out of, this community. Today rated just about a total loss in forwarding these far from completed jobs. In this instance the storm was responsible. As much as this town is desirous of having high class trunk line routes, it will always have a tendency in the future to pray that it does not run into a combination of circumstances that have marked the highway construction blundering of the summer season now approaching its close, for what has happened has been a handicap to Danielson in several ways. And the end is not yet!

Today was observed at St. James' church as the 83rd anniversary of the apparition of the vision on the mount of LaSalette in France, and there were special early morning masses attended by a large number of the members of the parish. Pupils of St. James' school attended mass before the beginning of the morning session.

Tonight directors of the Danielson chapter of the American Red Cross met with Chairman W. E. Parker, superintendent of schools, at his office in the high school building, to consider various matters of importance, including the pressing question of relief for the hurricane sufferers in the West Indies.

Mr. Parker said this afternoon that he was uncertain whether a special general appeal for contributions to the Red Cross would be made at this time, or whether this community's relief offering would come from funds of the local chapter already on hand. That must be determined. However, the situation that has arisen as a result of the storm damage in the area mentioned is so grievous as to be worthy the attention of all who sympathize with suffering humanity. If there are those who desire to do something special for relief through the Red Cross at this time, they may send contributions to the local treasurer of the Red Cross, Cashier Francis E. Storer of the Windham County National bank.

Previous arrangements involving transportation and provision for lunch for pupils at the high school building prevented any change being made today in the pre-arranged plan to close the school at one o'clock this afternoon to permit attendance at the county fair in Brooklyn. Busses had been ordered to come to the school earlier than usual, the cafeteria had not planned for an all-day session, and in a word, the day had been arranged for closing early instead of staying open full time. It was an unfortunate fact that the storm upset all arrangements, but that is just what happened. So there will be no half-holiday to attend the fair this year, the high school being on regular schedule of study hours for Thursday.

Last evening at Kum-Along-Inn fox trot honors were won by Miss Elaine Poirier of Dyer street and Angelo Marro of 1531 Plainfield street, Providence.

Old-timers were inclined to rate today's weather disturbance as the "line" storm, coming as it did, just ahead of the autumnal equinox.

Incidentally the storm did no good to the flowers in gardens at East Killingly that are intended for display in the annual flower show at the church in that community on Saturday.

Contrary to all expectations in advance of the event, there has been practically no demand here for admission cards to the trial of Raymond and Lalone at Willimantic.

A marvelous crop of corn is being harvested off the acres of the Wauregan company farm at Wauregan, some of the ears being of giant size and all of the yield exceptionally good. This crop is of a standard to challenge the best of the western corn states.

Daniel A. Smith of Moosup is constructing a cottage house on lower Dyer street, where considerable development has taken place in the past two or three years.

This year, for the first time in several years, three school rooms are in use at the graded school at Wauregan. An increased number of pupils required that an additional room be opened

Motor tourists on long distance trips interrupted their travels here today in a number of instances to escape the dangers of operating cars in such a storm as prevailed.

A bulging wall holding back the waters of the pond of the Acme Products company plant at East Killingly is to be restored to good condition. The wall was built many years ago, and is directly across the highway from the plant of the concern.

Daniel O'Leary, superintendent for the First National stores in this section of Connecticut, and Mrs. O'Leary and their infant daughter are to spend the coming week visiting with relatives in Jersey City.

PUTNAM

TWO WANDERERS SENT TO BROOKLYN JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 19—Putnam still remains the congregating place for drunken rounders as there were two strangers on the police court docket this morning charged with intoxication and loitering about the streets in that condition. The first offender to be heard was Thomas Martell of no place in particular, arrested Tuesday afternoon on Main street by Officer Joseph Page of the Putnam police. Martell pleaded guilty to the charge and asked for leniency of the court. Judge Geissler questioned him as to his residence. "I was going through Putnam on my way to New London, when the train stopped. I got off and started to drink". He failed to reveal the motive that inspired him to use Putnam as his stop over, and his indifferent answer to Judge Geissler's question brought him a sentence of 52 days in jail.

The second offender was Thomas Harding, a native of Scotland. He was arrested by State Trooper Elton T. Nolan of Danielson barracks in Putnam Tuesday evening, after he had become intoxicated from the effects of two bottles of bay rum purchased at a local chain store. "Where is your home?" asked the judge. "Well, I was born in Scotland and my home is in Europe but I left my home to travel." came the jovial reply from the tramp. He later testified that he left home about 28 years ago, and only recently considered returning to his native soil. His statements brought the court to an uproar and also brought a sentence of 42 days in the county jail at Brooklyn from Judge Geissler.

Putnam is slated for a large observance of Armistice day on November 11th. Commander Martin B Robertson of the Anselm Mayotte post of the American Legion, this morning issued a call to all organizations to send representatives to a meeting to be held in the chamber of commerce rooms on Monday evening Sept. 24.

Commander Robertson said this morning that the interest displayed among individuals has indicated that the tenth anniversary of the ending of the conflict of 1917-18 will be observed in an elaborate manner as was the seventh anniversary three years ago, when the soldier's memorial bridge on Pomfret street was dedicated.

The invitation issued is not intended only for military and semi-military organizations but applies to the numerous fraternal organizations of the city to attend and send delegates to the preliminary meeting next week when a general committee will be appointed to direct the affairs

Corn mash continued to flood the sewer outlet of the city this morning as the daily inspection of the crib, now in use at the mouth of the sewer, by City Engineer George W. Perry showed. As stated Wednesday the analysis of the sediment that has served to impede free passage of city waste into the river has shown it to be mash of various natures, a waste from the plants of home liquor distillers.

Mrs. William Fraser, for a number of years resident manager of the Western Union office in Putnam, recently suffered a slight shock that has compelled her to retire from active service as an operator. She was reported to be resting comfortably at her home on South Main street and making a satisfactory recovery from her illness, yet it will be several weeks before she will be able to resume her duties. James Doyle of Philadelphia is substituting in her place.

The West Indian hurricane that has left a path of destruction in its wake in the West Indies and the Virgin Islands and along the Florida east coast has brought an appeal from President Coolidge, to the National chapter of American Red Cross and the organization in turn has sent word to its branch organizations. This morning a telegram received from Chairman John Barton Payne, asking the Putnam chapter for assistance in raising funds to send relief to the sufferers in the storm country.

In response to this message, the Putnam chapter with its branches in North Grosvenordale, Thompson, Pomfret, Woodstock, and Dayville has began its effort to answer the national call for help. Contributions will be received and forwarded to the National chapter in Washington.

W. Fulton Hume of Oberlin, O., is visiting with his aunt and uncle, Elbert J. and Miss Emma Kinney of Center street. He will leave Putnam next Thursday to enroll in the medical department of Harvard university.

Augustus T. Wilson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon T. Wilson of Laurel street has entered Suffield academy at Suffield, Ct., and his sister, Miss Corinne, has left for Boston where she will continue her studies in the New England Conservatory of Music.

THREE BOYS ARRESTED FOR MASS. AUTHORITIES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 19—Acting Captain of Police Joseph Page of the Putnam police today took into custody three boys, escaped from the Massachusetts state reformatory at Waltham, Mass. They are Charles Bennett, 15, Joseph Worfrayf 15 and Christopher Javesery 16.

The boys made their escape last Monday and a search by the officials of the institution in the vicinity of Waltham proved fruitless. As Captain Page was about to go on duty this morning his attention was drawn to three youths who were loitering in the vicinity of the station house on Church street. His approach did not scare the youths and the older of the three asked the officer if he could return them to the reformatory. Apparently they had been walking along the highway for several days without shelter or food. They were attired in the light prison garb, and their clothes were drenched from the exposure to the night's heavy rain. The local officers took them in charge and offered them food and an opportunity to dry their clothing. The boys stated that they were tired of the routine of the state institution and saw their chance for freedom and they left but after four days away they were overjoyed at the chance to return. Acting Captain Page, wired the superintendent of the Waltham school and received word that an officer of the school will call in Putnam Thursday to return the escaped juvenile prisoners to Waltham. During their time in Putnam they will be detained at the police station.

The members of the Putnam Rotary club met this noon at the Putnam Inn and held their weekly business meeting. Following the luncheon the club members were addressed by a fellow member, John F. Reardon of North Grosvenordale, superintendent of the Grosvenordale company. Mr. Reardon chase as his topic "Vocational Service" and talked along the lines of better business methods. His short address was well received by his audience and contained many ways in which the business man can put in practice several little forms that will net a big return. The business meeting was presided over by President James F English.

What might be termed the coldest day of the present season was recorded in Putnam today, when a cold north eastern gale accompanied by heavy rain swept over the city. The barometer and thermometer dropped to the lowest points since early spring. The fall and mid-winter wearing apparel was donned by nearly everyone forced to go out into the weather today. In one section of the city property owners unprepared for the sudden cold spell were seen with pails of soot from their heaters and more were beginning the first trials of the coming cold weather season, that of keeping a fire in the heaters.

In North Grosvenordale state highway construction is nearing completion and the delays caused to passing traffic during the summer months because of one way traffic, is nearly over, the road being closed to traffic but for a distance of 50 yards, near the Tourtellotte Memorial school. The trolley tracks that have been discarded have been removed and an extra layer of concrete laid in its stead giving room for another car abreast on the road. It appears that the finishing touches will be applied to the highway before the end of September.

THE BEST SINCE 1820

What Do You Expect of Your Heater This Winter

NATURALLY, you expect heat—heat that is steady in ordinary weather, and adequate through the cold snaps.

You expect heat without giving an excessive amount of care to your heater, and with reasonable coal bills.

All these things you have a right to look for from your heater, provided that the heater is clean and that you choose good coal.

You should have soot deposits removed from heater and flues before starting your fire. Soot acts as an insulator and cuts down the efficiency of any heater.

Then, have your bins filled with Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite. This is the coal that wise householders have been specifying for over a hundred years.

It gives the steady, even heat that you desire most of the time—and it has ample reserve to give you all the extra heat you need in emergencies. That is just a matter of draft regulation.

With this coal you won't wear out the cellar stairs in coaxing a stubborn fire, nor will you have more than a minimum amount of ashes to handle.

Old Company's Lehigh is an unusually pure anthracite. And it is prepared for your use with extraordinary care.

Your local Old Company's dealer, handling good coal, is a good dealer—dependable, and competent to advise you. If you are not sure that you know the best size of coal for your heater, let him tell you. If you would like to learn how firing methods have lately been improved, ask him.

You will find that he is interested, not merely in selling you coal, but in giving you heating service.

TRAFFIC POLICE COURTESY

Grateful are many people who experience the benefit of painstaking and clear directions, courteously given, by policemen whether engaged as traffic officers or other work. It is no different than the feeling that results from a display of similar interest on the part of an individual, but perhaps it receives added attention because of contrary experiences.

Not a few police departments can boast of receiving letters from tourists who are appreciative of the treatment they received at the hands of traffic officials. This doesn't include all who may have felt the same way but it shows a feeling of gratitude which the person believes should be expressed.

This is, in fact, what should be expected when strangers enter a city and solicit aid in reaching their destination, whether they are seeking the avenue that will take them to the next city or a street in that particular locality. It is no more than should be expected when strangers hesitate for a moment in an endeavor to find out which direction they ought to take in rounding a beacon, upon coming to a corner or in trying to obey the requirements of a signal system.

Perhaps this occasional expression of gratitude that is forwarded to police departments is prompted because the treatment is so in contrast to what has been received elsewhere. The wise-cracking traffic cop, who seeks to humiliate the stranger and bawl him out because he is going too fast or too slow, when as a matter of fact he is conscientiously trying to find out and do the right thing, needless to say, isn't the recipient of such communications. Neither does he contribute to the better movement of traffic by his methods. Frequently it is the case that his acts cause such resentment on the part of residents of his city that they hasten to give the desired information and help to the visitors who have been called down instead of aided.

The city which has police officials who can attend to their duties and still do it efficiently and courteously never get as many letters of commendation as it deserves.

NORTH DAKOTA KNOWS

There has been talk to the effect that conditions were uncertain, politically, in North Dakota. This has been heard by the Detroit News, but it takes little stock in it. It maintains that the farmers of that state know where their bread is buttered, that "a large amount of the world's raw material for bread is grown in North Dakota, and that the prosperity of the people of North Dakota is held back because of the low price they get for their chief product. They are also smart enough to know how they can get substantially more a bushel for their wheat, and what this would mean to a state which usually raises more than 100,000,000 bushels of that commodity, rivaling Kansas as one of the greatest wheat producing states in the Union."

The point which the News is placing emphasis upon is that of better waterway transportation facilities for it insists that the farmers of North Dakota know what the completion of the St. Lawrence waterway would mean not to North Dakota alone, but to all that section of North America between the Rockies and the Great Lakes."

That the farmers of that part of the country should appreciate the need of this advantage is only natural, but in doing so and in realizing that it would mean the establishment of an ocean port within a comparatively short distance of their doors they cannot fail to understand the position which has been taken by the present administration and the part which has been played by Herbert Hoover in the advancement of the St. Lawrence waterway project. There is no mistaking the fact that Mr. Hoover is heart and soul in favor of such development. He is on record in that respect. It is not simply a campaign proposition. He wasn't opposed to it up to the time of the republican national convention or the time of making his acceptance speech and then began to hedge. He has been a supporter of that plan for a long period of time. He has aided in pushing it and can be relied upon to give his best efforts to carrying it through.

This fact cannot be overlooked by the people of North Dakota and if the News is right in representing the sentiment in that commonwealth they will not fail to make the right use of it election day.

FEWER CHILDREN KILLED

According to figures which have been given out by the New York safety congress the claim is made that the streets of New York are safer for children than those of most large cities in this country. That may seem surprising in view of the fact that New York has the largest population of any and probably the largest number of automobiles on streets which are in many instances none too wide, but if it is so it is time for others to study and utilize the methods which New York employs.

By the New York figures it is shown that where children under 16 were killed to the number of 453 in 1923 there were but 408 killed in the same period in 1928, while there is likewise cause for congratulations over the 16 per cent. decline in all automobile fatalities during the first eight months of this year in comparison with the same period for 1927.

With such a reduction taking place in the metropolis, it displays a sharp contrast to the fatalities which are occurring elsewhere, for both Connecticut and Massachusetts, as states, are showing an increase.

Naturally interest centers on what New York attributes this improvement to and it is found that it credits this safeguarding to intelligent direction with chief credit going to the school authorities. That would appear that either the school authorities are more successful in sending home the importance of safety first or else the pupils have become better accustomed through long experience to appraise for themselves the dangers of the street traffic. At any rate the figures would indicate that they are being more careful and as the result fewer are being killed although the number of automobiles is yearly increasing. New York is proving that this betterment is possible and certainly if it is possible to produce such results in a city the size of New York it ought to be able to accomplish similar reductions in smaller places.

New York is showing that there is no need for the increase in fatalities from year to year just because there are more machines. This has been persistently maintained but the necessary amount of care to accomplish it seems to be lacking.

SMITH AND THE FARMERS

When Alfred E. Smith went into the west it was for the purpose of influencing the farm vote. It was intended that he should captivate those who have shown so much blind deference to the McNary-Haugen bill. It was expected that he would clear up the misunderstanding as to where he stands in regard to that bill, and particularly his attitude in regard to the much discussed equalization fee.

He talked about the farm relief measure and he reiterated what he has said before as to what he would do after election concerning the getting together of information that would help in getting legislation, but he left no clear cut idea as to what his farm policy is, what remedies he has in mind or what could be expected if he were elected.

On the equalization fee he was mum. He approved the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill and he attacked the republicans for not adopting farm relief legislation but he didn't point out that farm relief legislation that would have incorporated the good points of that measure and excluded the bad would have been adopted and now be in force but for the blind demand for the equalization fee or nothing, and in that attitude there was a generous democratic backing.

Mr. Smith has spoken in the east against the equalization fee. He has declared that he was opposed to it. Others who have undertaken to speak for him have tried to give the impression that such was not his view. The confusion that exists upon this point could have been cleared up had he told the west that he was for the equalization fee, first last and all the time. That he did not do and the farmers of the west are apparently well aware of it. This may be surprising but perhaps no more so than his statement that liquor is not the great issue will be to many in the east.

URGENT NEED FOR AID

As additional facts are learned concerning the havoc wrought by the West Indian hurricane it becomes evident that the first reports were not exaggerations. When it is possible to tell the full story it will be one of distress and horror. From all indications the conditions in Porto Rico are extremely bad and call for the advancement of every possible assistance.

In Porto Rico it may be possible to face such conditions much better in certain respects than it might be in colder climes or at another season of the year but when there is a shortage of food, when sanitary conditions are deplorable and when difficulty is experienced in meeting the situation it becomes apparent that the appeal for aid for the suffering and hungry is a real one and should have an early and generous response.

As is frequently the case, it had been hoped that the early reports because of lack of communication had overrepresented the situation. It was hoped that under calmer conditions it would be found that the losses had not been as great either as to deaths or property damage. Time is, however, showing the contrary to be true in many instances for while the storm continues in abated fury the death list continues to grow and the tales of distress and destruction frightful.

Under such conditions the people of this country are certain to respond effectively to the appeal made by President Coolidge for funds to aid those localities which need it. Florida as well as Porto Rico needs aid. The storm was merciless wherever it struck.

Speaking of the melancholy season there have been persistent indications that it has arrived and going to be difficult to escape.

ROMANCE AND BLUEBERRIES

Helen sat curled up on the davenport nibbling a pencil, a notebook in her lap. It was a new notebook, full of clean, blank pages. For a full half hour Helen had nibbled her pencil and held the book—and its pages were still blank.

Of all subjects for a theme—a romantic incident from the life of some ancestor! Miss Morse, her teacher, must think every one possessed the kind of ancestors that figure in novels. Helen's immediate forebears were prosaic business men and her grandfathers had done nothing more exciting than to erect big red barns and build grape arbors on their wide farm acres. Romance, indeed!

"You might tell how I happened to meet your father," said her mother.

Helen sniffed.

"Romance is the picturesque, the unusual. Romance is adventure," she recited, quoting Miss Morse.

"Well," said mother, serenely, "there wasn't anything picturesque about my first introduction to dad, but it was surly unusual. And to me it was high adventure." Helen regarded her mother dubiously.

"You never did anything unconventional in your life. Mean to tell me you picked dad up?"

"I was introduced to him properly, of course," said mother with dignity, "but I met him through a blueberry pie." Helen giggled.

"I wouldn't call that romantic."

"Maybe not, but it always seemed so to me.' A faint undercurrent in her mothers voice made Helen penitent.

"Tell me about it, mummy."

"It seems like yesterday." Mother's voice grew reminiscent. "It was a beautiful April day and I was 17. I went downtown to a matinee and mother had told me to stop off on the way home and get a blueberry pie from Higgins' bakery. He used to be famous for his pies.

"I must tell you how I was dressed. I was wearing a gray voile suit. The skirt was four yards wide at the bottom, trimmed with medallions of ecru lace set at six-inch intervals, and the front breadth was made of little panels of the goods held together with spider-work facoting. I nearly went blind making it.

"The jacket was tight-fitting in the back, bloused in front, trimmed with lace medallions and properly lined, boned and wadded. The sleeves ended in two enormous puffs made of the fagoted strips of voile.

"And my hat! Hats were hats in those days. It was a huge scoop-shovel of straw, wreathed with violets and lilies of the valley, and had violet velvet ribbon streamers that hung down the back. It was simply the last word when it came to style, and how well I knew it!" Helen giggled.

Helen giggled.

"How could you ever bring yourself to carry a pie?" she asked.

"I was a properly brought up and dutiful young women. I had no choice. With the pie between two pasteboard plates and carefully wrapped, I got on the street car. I was haughtily conscious of my elegance, and to protect myself from the familiarity of a possible admiring glance I looked steadily out of the window, the pie in my lap.

"Happening to look up, I stiffened. A man sitting opposite was smiling at me. I gave him a look calculated to freeze him to his seat and turned my attention steadfastly again to the window.

"I glanced up again, and the man was smiling more broadly. I gave him another look kthat was positively venomous, and his smile deepened. I gasped. This went beyond any impudence I'd ever experienced. Then I chanced to glance down at my pie. The juice had soaked through the pasteboard and was running in purple streams down the front of my beautiful new skirt.

"I rose, blindly, pie and all, and without knowing where I was, got off at the next station. The man who'd been smiling got off, too. He crowned his impudence with insolence: he actually spoke to me.

"Little girl, come into my drug store here on the corner and we'll try to repair the damage," he said kindly.

"And was it dad you'd been trying to squelch?" Helen said.

"No, indeed. Dad was the nice-looking boy in the white coat whom your grandfather called from behind the prescription screen, and he brought towels and scrubbed my dress, and finally helped me pin the front panel over so that the damage wasn't quite so evident.

"And after a while he put me on the street car again, with a box of candy to soothe my wounded feelings. And that's how I got to know him. Romance wears everyday clothes sometimes, dear."—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

More Attractions About Norwich

Mr. Editor: Just a final word regarding the beauties of the "Rose of New England" and the surroundings within the nine miles square, for there can be no question that there are wonderful scenic spots to be found. Go out in the direction of Salem and see that wonderful Gardner Lake and on a fine clear day one can see the trees and surrounding hills mirrored in it as in a beautiful picture. Then there is that freak of nature, the Devil's hop yard, and the old gold mine at Wauwecus Hill (Wauwekus the original spelling). Then drive out from the four corners toward Colchester, the home of one of the pioneer rubber plants, and then along the shore of Westminster Lake with their summer colonies, where the people are living next to nature. All this to me is just wonderful and worth while. Tourists go in raptures over the beauties of Lake George. But Gardner Lake in its beauty compares with it and doesn't lose anything in comparison.

Then travel slowly back toward Norwich over the fine state road, down through Norwich Town. On a recent visit to Norwich I called on some very dear friends of mine who live on Tanner street in the Norwich Town section, and on my way to the city as I stood waiting for the trolley I glanced across and saw the historic old Hyde Tavern, and the date 1647. This thought came to me, what a wonderful state of preservation that house is in! The buildings of those days were built with a guarantee to last. Just think, 281 years ago, and it looks like a new building even today. I also noticed where the Old Tavern house in Greeneville, between 13th and 14th streets on Boswell avenue, has taken on a different appearance with a coat of paint and a new porch built on one side of it, and I may say it has taken on quite a gay appearance. This may take away some of its historic interest, but it certainly has improved its looks. As the Rev. John Jasper said, the sun does move and so does the world and its people.

Norwich, and the surrounding towns have an endless source of interesting places which are remembered, and are to be seen and appreciated.

There is the Chelsea parade, known in my time as Williams park. Why was the name changed? On the junction point of Broadway and Washington street we see the memorial to the Boys in Blue and this is certainly a fine replica of those boys of 1860-65. The ones who offered all they had, their lives and fortunes, in defense of their beloved homes and country. Could anyone do more? And I in fancy could once again see them as they appeared when they were assembled at the far end of the park in the fall of 1865, with their ranks thinner than the days when they marched away, for some were left behind and are sleeping in the south. Some bright day they will once again hear the Great Commander's voice tell them in no uncertain tones: "Boys, you did splendidly. Perhaps not to the extent of your desires, but certainly to the limit of your ability."

And just beyond the parade we see the beautiful Congregational church and then to the left of the church we see the Free Academy that stands on a plot of ground of seven acres that was given by General Williams in 1854. And nearby is the wonderful Slater memorial. It is useless to name all the places of interest for they are everywhere in and around the Rose of New England with its beautiful lawns and flowers and the wonderful homes. But time is fleeting and cold weather is just around the corner and, must I mention it? nothing has been done to better the appearance or condition of the Buckingham Memorial.

I note the population of Norwich is 30,689, as appears in The Bulletin heading, and if each one would give a dollar this would be a nice little sum, or even half a dollar, this would amount to approximately $15,345. Even 25 cents would give about $7,672, while ten cents each would provide more than $3,000. Why the delay in doing something? I suppose I am just starting trouble for myself in bringing this matter up again but if anyone starts gunning for me on account of it, I give them fair warning, I am going to take to the tall timber and they wont find me, but if a subscription is gotten under way I will hand in my widow's mite. What do you say, let's go.

Yours very truly,
C. H. ("DAD") SHAW.

Dyspepsia Due to Gall Bladder Disease

By George A. Dowling, M. D., Seattle, (Member, Gorgas Memorial.)

To the average person dyspepsia, in itself, is a complete diagnosis. As a matter of fact, dyspepsia means nothing but trouble with the stomach or, rather, symptoms which the patient himself refers to as trouble with the stomach. It may be caused by a great variety of ailments and is a very common cause for the patient's seeking the advice of a doctor, as distress or pain after eating, or inability to eat certain foods without discomfort, commonly sends the sufferer to the physician for advice rather promptly.

Dyspepsia may be due to organic disease of the stomach itself, chronic gastritis, ulcer of the stomach, or duodenum, and cancer of the stomach comprising the list. Reflex symptoms, as for example in disease of the gall-bladder, chronic appendicitis, chronic constipation, or ulceration of the colon are often interpreted by the patient as indigestion or stomach disease.

From five to ten per cent. of all adults have some affection of the gall-bladder or biliary ducts. Gall-bladder disease is the commonest cause of dyspeptic symptoms; one out of every five persons coming to the doctor for indigestion has gall-bladder disease. Persons of any age may be subject to gall-bladder disease, but it is commonest after the third decade, usually arising between thirty and forty years of age, but the dyspepsia of early youth is more commonly due to chronic appendicitis. As these people become older, ulcer of the stomach and duodenum, and gall-bladder disease become more frequent. Cancer is a disease of advanced years rather than of early youth or middle life, so it can readily be seen that the age limitation furnishes a clue to the doctor when he comes to unravel the puzzle of these digestive symptoms.

Symptoms of dyspepsia caused by gall-bladder disease are common to dyspepsias from disease of other organs, but the common complaint is gas, distension and belching, and inability to eat certain foods without distress called food selection. Foods which cause most distress are foods which we speak of as roughage; raw vegetables, the skins and seeds of fruits, and fried foods. Sour stomach and heartburn are common. Acid eructations, heartburn, dizziness, irregular appetite, constipation, vague abdominal and chest pains are often associated.

Such symptoms, if persistent and troublesome, should send an adult to a competent physician for careful diagnosis. Diagnosis is based on a carefully taken history and a physical examination and, frequently, on special laboratory examination of the stomach and gall-bladder. The sufferer should not be satisfied with less. If in addition to dyspeptic symptoms, he had had attacks of severe colic, he is not likely to be satisfied with less. Those with mild symptoms may be treated medically. For those with severe trouble, surgical removal of the gall-bladder is the only cure.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(AP)—Secretary Kellogg's return from his European peace pilgrimage brings sharply to the front the question of the next hurdle the war renunciation pact has to take, the senate of the United States.

If Mr. Kellogg has a notion that senate ratification of the pact will be just a matter of form, more or less, he is completely unaware of the sort of talk that has been afloat recently in important senate circles.

There is already an idea circulating in democratic senatorial minds that the pact and related diplomatic exchanges should be exhaustively examined by the foreign relations committee. Some senators are inclined to feel that the communications from some governments, notably London, announcing readiness to sign in the light of observations made in those notes actually amounted to reservations. The suggestion is made privately that it might be just as well for the senate to do a little interpreting itself on the meaning and limitations of the pact in its ratifying resolution. That would reopen the whole question in other capitals.

Adherence Questions

Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee has stated that he does not regard the pact as conflicting with the Monroe Doctrine or see any necessity of an amendment or reservation to insure that that American pronouncement continues in full force unimpaired by the war renunciation pledge. Whether the democrats concur in the Borah view it is too early to tell. It seems possible they might not make up their minds about it until after the November elections. Should they capture the senate in that battle of ballots, it might well be democratic strategy to see that the question of ratification was deferred to be acted upon under democratic auspices.

But aside from the Monroe Doctrine angle, there are other aspects of the peace treaty ratification matter filled with possible trouble for the Washington administration. There is the question of Russian adherence, for instance. Senator Borah and both the Harding and Coolidge administrations have not seen eye to eye on the Russian recognition discussion and it is already clear that Russia's adherence to the peace treaty, when formally received from France for deposit in Washington, will raise that bogie again. The state department holds that Russia's adherence is a mere routine job of depositing, so far as it is concerned. Some foreign relations committee senators contend that as adherence of non-signatory powers is provided for in the treaty, adherences become a part of the treaty and subject to the senate's ratification jurisdiction. They profess to see a definite step toward Russian recognition involved.

Precedence Cited

By way of answer to this, it is pointed out that Russia has already adhered to treaties to which the United States is a party and no question of recognition of Russia been raised thereby. Also, it is argued, if the senate is to pass on every adherence to the peace pact, ratification would be postponed indefinitely to await universal adherence, which the treaty itself invites. Otherwise, every additional adherence after ratification would mean, presumably, return of the treaty to the senate for reaffirmation of its approval.

Stories That Recall Others

Undecided

Joseph, age four, was petulant one day, much to the exasperation of his mother. At last, when there was nothing else to complain of, he held up his foot, saying "sumpin'" was in the shoe.

His mother unlaced it, but could find nothing to cause the pain, whereupon Joseph countered with:

"Maybe it's in the other's."

Helpful Afterthought

A group of bachelors was camping. None of them liked to cook, although it was an indispensable task. They drew lots and the one who received the unlucky number said he would act as chef until someone complained against his cooking, when the objector would have to take charge of the kitchen. It was agreed.

That evening for dinner the cook emptied a large quantity of salt into the gravy. On taking a generous quantity of it, one of the group exclaimed:

"This gravy is bitter."

When his companions began to laugh he saw his mistake and with a verbal coup he added: "But it's just the way I like it."

DENIES NEGLIGENCE BY DRIVER OF FORD TRUCK

Contention that there was no negligence on the part of Leon Bruckner, driver of a motor truck of the estate of John H. Ford, but that there was contributory negligence on the part of Chester J. Oddie of Lisbon, who was riding a bicycle, was the defense's claim made in the superior court at New London Wednesday before Judge John Richards Booth in the joint trial of two suits against the Ford estate for $30,000. Chester Oddie, who is a minor, sues for $25,000 damages and his father, Frank L. Oddie, for $5,000. The boy on his bicycle was struck by the motor truck late in the afternoon of March 22, 1927, on the Norwich-Jewett City highway, opposite the J. B. Martin Co. velvet mill.

Besides the driver, the defense put on the stand Russell Morgan, who was riding on the truck, and Phillip Roberts, who testified to measurements made at the scene of the accident.

Judge Booth reserved decision after hearing the arguments made by Attorney Arthur M. Brown for the plaintiffs and Attorney C. Hadlai Hull for the defendant.

Following the plaintiff Tuesday afternoon, Dr. David Sussler testified as to the lad's injuries and said that his bill was $2,011. Attorney Hull asked the physician to send in an itemized account on it. Wednesday the court received a bill for $2,140. Attorney Hull in his arguments scored the bill sent in by Dr. Sussler, saying that in all his experience he had never heard of a bill for such service coming anywhere near as high as $2,140. He would not lay the bill in as evidence, saying that the evidence showed that the bill was $2,011 and that the bill sent in was not what he should term an itemized bill.

SETTLEMENT OUT OF COURT IN SUIT FOR $10,000

Settlement out of court was effected Wednesday in the $10,000 automobile negligence action brought by Samuel Goddard Kent of Stonington, against N. H. Avery and Latham Avery of Groton, doing business as the Stonington Lobster Co. The case was scheduled for trial before Judge John Richards Booth in the superior court at New London.

Kent claimed that two trucks belonging to the defendants were parked on either side of the Boston Post road, leading from New London to New Haven. One truck, according to the papers, was headed in one direction and the other in the other direction. The complaint stated that one truck had no rear light and the other was standing with its headlights facing the direction in which the plaintiff was operating an automobile belonging to the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., for which he was a traveling representative.

The plaintiff claims that, due to this carelessness, he figured in a collision with one of the trucks, as the result of which he was badly injured, lost wages for one month and spent some time in a hospital.

WOMAN'S CITY CLUB FORMS SEASON PROGRAMME

Tentative plans, outlined in the last spring board meeting of the Woman's City club of Norwich, have crystallized into a well-rounded winter's programme, under the able direction of Mrs. A. N. Foster, and the chairmen of departments. The underlying idea of the 1928-1929 activities is "something grave and something gay"—in other words, a programme meeting on the third Tuesday of each month.

The second Tuesday of each month.

According to last year's custom, each department will have charge of one programme meeting. Folk ballads of southern Europe, presented by Sydney L. Thompson, an evening's entertainment by The Versatilians, a talk on oriental rugs, are sure to please and enlighten at the October, December and May meetings. Two afternoons of bridge, an operetta and play put on by the music and dramatic committee, a fashion show and children's afternoon, a renewal of that delightful institution guest night, a civics program and an evening devoted to literature, give promise of much to interest, inform and enjoy. The art department, whose movie, slide-motor, exhibit, and beautiful display of textiles will long be remembered has prepared for their November exhibition this year, something which will appeal to every woman in the community. Later in the year there will be another exhibition dealing with the life of the American Indian. Business meetings, so vital to club functioning, held in the afternoon, will perhaps resolve themselves into supper-meetings, thereby giving all of the members a chance to attend.

Open house, on Oct. 2, which marks the beginning of club life for the year, will afford members a charming occasion on which to renew club enthusiasm. It is to be an indoor garden party, planned for the afternoon and evening, with tea, solo dancing and much music, and for the closing hours a short play let.

Those who attended current events, and literary and civics round tables, last year, have something upon which to base their anticipations for what has been prepared this season. The current events course has been increased to nine lectures, open, as before, to all club members and the men of their families. Mrs. Marion Gaylord Atwell, so able and popular in her former series, will give six lectures—the other three will be delivered by Prof. Ralph Henry Gabriel of the department of history at Yale. Mrs. Atwell, always well prepared, has added to her grasp of world problems through her attendance, this summer, at the Institute of Politics, held annually at Williams college. Prof. Gabriel, a man of varied experience and wide repute—as a scholar, a soldier, a member of "Yale in China," a professor of history—is sure to be an authoritative speaker. Through these two the club may avail itself of both the feminine and masculine points of view. Literature round tables, always a source of delight, will have interesting speakers in the persons of Miss Josephine Thomas of The Children's Bookshop, New Haven; Dr. Gerard E. Jensen and Dr. George H. Nettleton of Connecticut college; and round tables addressed by Mrs. Channing M. Huntington Mrs. Alexander H. Abbott and Mrs. A. N. Foster, than whom none will be more gladly heard.

The arts committee is giving its usual opportunity for practical work under the inspiration of round tables on such subjects as education, Americanization, sanitation, parks and trees, home economics, recreation and gardens. The list of speakers is not yet complete, but is sure to include such well-qualified people as Mrs. Rich, Miss Bennett, Miss Nancy Lucas, Miss Hill and Miss Baldwin. The various sub-committees are well arranged under capable management, and considerable accomplishment is looked for from this group. In November the club may consider itself fortunate in being addressed at its regular meeting by Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman.

An ambitious series of round tables has been planned by Mrs. Willis P. Austin, chairman of dramatics. In the course of seven afternoons, Mrs. Austin and her committee will trace the development of the old-time stage of Shakespeare's day through to the present time with its clever and artistic lighting and costuming; will use some plays to show the influence of the older stage on the modern play, and will take up the principal movements of today as shown in the Actors' Equity and different Little Theatre movements.

Another new department which has grown from a popular demand for it, is that of Mrs. Witter K. Tingley, parliamentarian of the club. On the second Monday afternoon of each month, classes in parliamentary procedure will be conducted by Attorney Charles V. James in the City club room at the Wauregan.

This is a full and varied programme, giving an outlet for all the talent and energy of the club, and a chance for each and every member to choose the thing she most needs or finds most appealing.

BAPTISTS OF COUNTY HELD NIANTIC MEETING

The New London Baptist Association, Inc., holding its 111th annual meeting at the church at Niantic on Tuesday elected the following officers: Moderator Richard W. Mansfield, New London; vice moderator, Rev. R. W. Ferguson, New London; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Gerge Mosher, Waterford.

In the afternoon session the two principal addresses were by Miss Elsie Kappen of New York and Miss Chesebrough of Brooklyn. In the evening four-minute reports of the summer conferences were given. Sidney Pitt and Emily Hill of this city and Martha Penn of New London reported on the Storrs conference Doris Racine of this city and Jennie Long of New London gave a report of the Northfield conference.

TROLLEY LEAVES TRACKS IN CRASH WITH AUTO

A Boswell avenue trolley car and a delivery truck owned by Benjamin Weisman of No. 109 Sachem street collided at the corner of Oak street and Boswell avenue shortly before 7.45 o'clock Wednesday morning. The trolley car left the rails and the truck was badly damaged.

The truck was being driven from Oak street to turn up Boswell avenue when it collided with the trolley car, which was bound for Franklin square. Passengers in the trolley car were shaken up but no one was hurt.

BODY OF MAN WAS FOUND AT TRADING COVE

The dead body of a man, with nothing on it or in the clothing to assist in identification, was found about 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in a patch of woods to the west of Trading Cove hill. The flesh was entirely gone from the bones and the supposition is that the body may have lain where it was found since last winter or early spring or even longer.

Discovery of the body was made by Peter Kozanicki, a twelve-year old boy who caught sight of the skull as he was walking through the woods. The boy hastened to the store of Frank Foote and the latter notified Norwich police headquarters and also Dr. John J. Donohue of Montville of the find. The doctor secured authorization from Coroner Edward G. McKay to act as medical examiner and both the doctor and the coroner visited the place where the body lay. After they had concluded their investigation, it was removed to the undertaking rooms of Cummings & Ring in this city.

The place where the body lay, face downward in the path of a small stream was on the Congeshall land and about 300 feet from the home of the Connelly family. The clothing covered nothing but bones as the flesh had entirely disappeared and there was not even any hair left on the scalp to offer even this slight clue to the identity of the man. The clothing consisted of overalls, blue coat, outer shirt, slip-on sweater and heavy cotton undershirt. No hat was found and the feet were without shoes, but a pair of shoes several sizes too large was found about 20 feet away.

There were no evidences of violence and Dr. Donohue was of the opinion that the man probably died of exposure. The body was apparently that of a man about 55 years old 5 feet 6 inches tall, with rather prominent cheek bones, teeth in good condition, but a few of them missing.

It is thought he may have been a tramp weaver or one of the gang of workmen employed by a road work contractor in the Trading Cove section about a year ago.

McCARTHY BOUND OVER ON CRIMINAL CHARGE

Thomas McCarthy, 52, of Stamford, against whom a mere charge of intoxication was placed when he was arrested Tuesday afternoon, was accused of assault upon two four-year-old girls when he was presented in the city court Wednesday morning. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the next term of the criminal superior court.

The alleged offense is said to have taken place Tuesday afternoon after McCarthy had lured the children from their homes with a few pennies. Unable to provide a $500 bond, McCarthy went to jail to await trial.

He was arrested late Tuesday afternoon on Washington street, near Broad street, by Officer William Ryan. The arrest followed a complaint that the two little girls had been kidnaped. Before McCarthy was arrested the little girls were found playing near the Broad street school house and they gave a description of the man who had lured them from their homes.

McCarthy claimed in court that he was drunk Tuesday. He denied the charges made against him. Probable cause was found, however, in the face of the evidence given by one of the girls and he was bound over. McCarthy has been in trouble before. Some time ago he was sent to jail for the theft of a raincoat from a machine and later for entering a boarding house without the permission of the owner.

SECOND OF GEER BOYS GOES TO NEW YORK BANK

David Geer, eldest of the four children of Mrs. Geer and the late Charles D. Geer, of Poquetanuck, has been making a success in New Haven of the traffic-controlling device which he helped invent, after his graduation from Yale university. The three other younger members of the Geer family are also giving a good account of themselves. George Owen Geer, who was graduated from Yale in June, left this week for New York, where he has secured a very position with the Bankers Trust company. Miss Marian Geer is now a junior at Connecticut college, while Richard Geer is a member of the entering class at Peddie Institute, New Jersey.

The father of this interesting and ambitious family, the late Chas. D. Geer was one of the most talented musicians—singer, teacher and director—who ever lived and worked in Norwich; and the success of his daughter and sons is a matter of satisfaction to many who may never know them personally. Their mother has retained her residence in Poquetanuck, and her talents and inspiration account for much in the steady advancement of her children.

May Be Line Storm

It was high tide at 12:43 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and at that time the surf was breaking at least 20 feet inside of the usual mark along the shore from Weekapaug to Pleasant View.

Some of the old-timers claim that this is the yearly linestorm which usually comes about the middle of September. The sun crosses the line Sept. 23, Sunday next.

MOST people know this absolute antidote for pain, but are you careful to say Bayer when you buy it? And do you always give a glance to see Bayer on the box—and the word genuine printed in red? SILVIA-SMITH BOUT BANNER BOUT ON NEW LONDON CARD TONIGHT

TONIGHT'S CARD
Main bout, 10 rounds
Tiger Silvia of Fall River vs.
Steve Smith of Bridgeport
Semi-finals, 8 rounds
Young DeForest of Danielson vs.
Al Gillette of New Bedford
Joey Duggan of New London vs.
Spike Moreno of New Haven
Preliminary, 6 rounds
Gene Pecheeni of Norwich vs.
Rene Lubear of New Haven
Opening bout, 4 rounds
Joey Thomas of New London vs.
Max Maravetch of Meriden

If the storm that held throughout Wednesday and last night abates today the boxing fans of eastern Connecticut will crowd into the Hamilton street arena in New London for the star card of boxing bouts. The card is representative of the eastern part of the state, Danielson, Norwich and New London being represented.

In the main ten-round attraction Tiger Silvia of Fall River is slated to face the flying fists of Steve Smith of Bridgeport. It will be Silvia's second fight in four days. Silvia fought and defeated Freddy Bender of Newport in a six round bout at Fall River two nights ago. He won handily all the way, and although the bout was shorter than the battles he is accustomed to fighting, he put in an evening's work at a time when most boxers would rather be resting with a ten-round battle so close at hand.

Silvia was in New London Wednesday and had his usual workout at the Coast Guard receiving station. He described his fight of the previous night as "just a good workout."

All of the locally attached boxers who will appear on the card had their final warming up session yesterday at the receiving station. Silvia went through a semi-rigorous drill, having already reached fighting edge.

Steve Smith, concluded training at the gymnasium of his manager, Joe Smith, in Bridgeport. The Park City Hungarian was reported to be in excellent shape. He is a natural junior lightweight and as a result he does not have to exert himself inordinately to keep under the 135-pound limit.

Al Thomas, manager of the Fall River Tiger, said that Silvia will be 135 pounds or under, but if the Portuguese battler does come in lighter than the limit the difference is expected to be very little. Silvia is at his best at 134 pounds.

Silvia, who recently lost a questionable decision to Georgie Day of New Haven, is said to have made more friends than if he had been given the decision. His newly acquired popularity has loosened the purse strings of his admirers and yesterday there were reports of moderate wagering at even money. Smith, the veteran, is rated as the favorite on paper.

Al Gillette, the dark-haired French youngster who recently defeated the local idol, Joey Duggan is confident that he can take Georgie DeForest of Danielson for a rough ride in their eight-round semi-final.

The second eight-round bout in which Joey Duggan meets Spike Marino, New Haven bantamweight, has the local fans guessing. Duggan has lost two of his last three fights, but his victorious opponents. Gillette and Al Beauregard, are rated somewhat higher than Marino. Marino has been beaten but once in his last five bouts, the one set back being a close decision which he dropped to Gene Pecheeni of Norwich.

Pecheeni will appear in the six-round preliminary opposite Rene Lubear of New Haven who outpointed Tom McCarthy of Norwich two weeks ago in New London.

Joey Thomas, the olive skinned featherweight who came here a month ago from Fall River, tackles Max Maravitch of Meriden in the four-round opener.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19—(AP)—Mal Stevens, coach of the Yale varsity, today named thirty-three men on his "blue" squad. This selection left something like 75 on the grays. The blue squad is Yale's first varsity squad, but the members of the gray squad will also be eligible for play on the Eli eleven.

Nineteen "Y" men and five sophomores are on the squad picked today. The squad selected follows:

LIEUT. OUIMET REACHES THIRD ROUND IN ARMY GOLF

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(AP)—There seems to be a strain of golfing blood in the Ouimet family of Boston.

Lieutenant Wilfred A. Ouimet, brother of Francis Ouimet, the former national amateur and open golf champion, came through the first and second rounds of the army golf championship tournament here today with flying colors. He defeated Major E. B. Lyon of Washington, 3 and 2 in the first round and Lieutenant P. M. Pfaffman of Worcester, Mass., 3 and 1 in the second round.

The 1926 army champion, Lieutenant Lamar G. Sceligson of San Antonio, Texas, was defeated 2 up by Lieutenant H. A. Barrow of Fairfield, Ohio. Captain R. C. Scott, 1927, titlist is not defending his championship.

PRINCETON SHOWS LACK OF RESERVE MATERIAL

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 19—(AP)—When wetter football days are made this fall, the youngsters who specialize in toting pigskins for Princeton, will be more than ready for them.

So bent on bringing new and gaudier pelts back to the Bengal Lair are the 50 candidates for Princeton's eleven that they pranced out into the remnants of the West Indian hurricane today and scarcely knew it was raining. In swirls of sheet rain and a biting wind, the husky youths of Princeton tackled, charged machines and dummies, hurled forward passes through the mist, and even played a game of "touch" football.

Although Coach Bill Roper was not here to see it, the day was just what the coaching staff wanted. It gave Roper's assistants a chance to work with flying footballs under the worst possible conditions, and flying footballs this season appear to be the major Princeton hope for another great eleven.

Good men will be available for every position and the freshman squad of last season has sent forward several sturdy candidates, yet there is a decided lack of reserve material and with Princeton football geared to such a high pitch, man-power is the great and crying need at Old Nassau.

In an effort, perhaps, to overcome this lack, the Tigers seem headed toward an orgy of forward passing, depending on fleetness of foot, the experience of veteran first string material, and the offensive power of a deadly overhead game to gain the ground that Princeton might once battered out in the pinches.

The team has lost Earl Baruch, quarterback last season, who could kick, pass, run and plan his attack with the best in the country. Although Baruch failed to return to college, Mile Miles, smashing defensive back, the brilliant Ed Wittmer, and sturdy Jack Norman are back in orange stripes. Phil Strubing can take Baruch's place but the reserve material, aside from Scarlett, Jones, Requardt, and a big rangy sophomore, Holmes Bennet, is unconvincing.

After only three days of practice, the line is an even greater problem. Captain "Chuck" Howe, a great wrestler last year, will play guard, with the center post left open to his former understudies, Caldwell and Taylor. Bill Barfield and Jack Whyte, varsity tackles, haven't appeared for practice yet. Whyte broke a wrist in a recent automobile accident. Again substitutes must make the grade in the tackle berths and fill the vacant guard post. Roper has two find ends in Johnny Stinson and Newman Lawler with plenty of reserves.

Not the least of Princeton's problems is a schedule that packs Cornell, Ohio State, Yale and Navy into the final month of the season. The Tigers, taking the first two in stride, must cut loose with everything they have against the Elis, and leave the battle with the midshipmen resting on the laps of the football gods.

But if there is anyone worried about the situation in the Tiger camp it certainly is not Bill Roper. There's a cheery smile on his face and confidence in his manner as he looks his squad over and admits, "There's an interesting job ahead."

NEW HAVEN AND CINCINNATI IN SANDLOT RACE

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 19—(AP)—Champions of sandlot baseball in Cincinnati and Detroit today were victorious in the fifth round of the National baseball federation tournament.

The Cincinnati New Era, defending champions, trounced Pittsburgh 7 to 1, disqualifying the Pennsylvanians from further participation. Cincinnati still is undefeated.

The Detroit team which has lost one game, romped on the Omaha Nine, 10 to 2, also the second defeat for the westerners, who were playing in the national elimination contest for the first time since its organization four years ago.

New Haven and Birmingham both participating in their first national match, went ten innings with New Haven winning 5 to 4. This defeat put the Alabamans out of the race.

Only Cincinnati, Detroit and New Haven remain to take up the battle, the other 15 entries having fallen into two defeats. Only Cincinnati boasts an untarnished record.

FARRELL IS ELIMINATED IN METRO PRO TOURNEY

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 19—(AP)—Johnny Farrell, of Quaker Ridge, national open golf champion, was the third holder of that title to be eliminated from the metropolitan professional golfers' championsh going down before youthful Tom Creavy, of Bonnie Briar, of the 19th hole in their third round match today. Two former open champions, Cyril Walker and Jim Barnes, were defeated in the first round yesterday morning.

Going out in ", he reached the tenth hole four up, 3 on the champion only to have Farrell stage a rally and win five holes in succession. Creavy squared the match by winning the 16th and took the extra hole with a five to Farrell's six.

With the young Bonnie Briar pro in the semi-finals are Gene Sarazen, 1922 open champion, who defeated Henry Ciucl, of Mill River, today, 2 up. Charley Mayo, Pomonok veteran, who eliminated Joe Turnesa of Elmford by the same margin, and Craig Wood, of Forest Hills, who put out Alex Watson, of Mount Kisko, 2 and 1.

CHAPMAN TECH GAME SHIFTED TO WILLIMANTIC
(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 19—According to an announcement made Wednesday the football game scheduled for October 6th, the game with Chapman Tech of New London, will be held in this city. An agreement between the athletic authorities of the two schools has been reached with Coach Thomas A. Callaghan representing Windham. This means that the local eleven, which is holding practice sessions at Havdn's Field, will play five games at home this year. The season will open in Putnam on September 29th. Other school teams which will appear here are Westerly High, Stonington, Norwich Free Academy and Manchester.

Coach Callaghan will attend a meeting of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island athletic conference which will be held at the Wauregan hotel in Norwich on Monday evening of next week. The conference opens with the coming football season. Final arrangements will be made at this session regarding officials and other matters.

Steady improvement is being shown by the local squad and it is the belief that the team will give a good account of itself when finally selected. Captain Howard Nelson, who injured his foot during the summer and is still using crutches, will not be available for the first few games and Coach Callaghan is planning to use Kelleher at center for the first few games.

THREAD CITY SERIES STARTS ON SUNDAY
(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 19—Another city baseball series will be started at Recreation park on Sunday between the Majors and the Over-the-Rivers. The understanding is that a series of three games will be played between the two teams in the event that the first game indicates that they are fairly evenly matched. The Brooklynites have played twenty-three games so far this season, the majority of them having been out of town, and the team has chalked up fifteen wins with eight losses, which is considered a good showing. By their 18 to 1 victory over the Chapman Aces last Sunday, the Majors conclusively showed their superiority over that team and accordingly the proposed three-game series with that outfit was called off, due to lack of interest. The exact line-up for the two teams have not been announced. The Over-the-Rivers have been hit a hard blow in the loss of two of their star players, "Ollie" Rivers having been transferred to the Majors and Desormier, who has gone to the All-Stars, Jack Curtis will probably do the twirling for the Majors in the coming encounter, while Manager Dubreuil of the Over-the-Rivers will probably announce several new players in his line-up.

ALL STARS TO PLAY HARTFORD CLUB SUNDAY
(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 19—The All-Stars hope to return to their winning ways this coming Sunday at Windham Field when they stack up against the speedy Holy Name club of Hartford. The Stars' streak of victories was halted at seven last Sunday when they went up against Heywood's Lucky Dogs of Webster, Mass., one of the fastest teams appearing here this season. The Holy Names at present are only a game and a half behind the leaders in the Hartford Twilight league. One familiar face will be seen in the visitors' group on Sunday, that of "Dinny Flaherty, a native of South Coventry, who has established a reputation of being one of the speediest ball chasers in and around the Capital city.

J. B. MARTIN TEAM PLAYS ELM CITY GIANTS AGAIN

The Elm City Giants, premier colored baseball outfit of New England, will again be the attraction at the J. B. Martin diamond on Sunday afternoon. This game is the third game between these two clubs each having won a victory. Cannonball South is slated for the pitching work of the Giants while either Fisher or Pepin will perform for the Velvetmen. The Giants boast some of the hardest hitting boys in semi-pro ball, Simmons the giant first sacker was the one who defeated the Velvetmen in the first appearance.

PROLONGED RAIN MAY SERIOUSLY BALL UP MAJOR LEAGUE SCHEDULE

By WILLIAM J. SHIPMAN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Another crucial series was imminent in New York tonight—with rain a threat. Leading the Giants by two full games the Cardinals were already upon the battle site, prepared to meet the clan McGraw at the Polo grounds tomorrow in a gala double-header which may go far toward deciding the ownership of the National league pennant for 1828.

Although the tension was not so great as ten days ago when the veteran Cornelius Mc Gillicuddy invaded the Ruppert stadium to have it out with the Yankees, preparations were being made by club officials and police authorities for the greatest National league event in this city since the Pirates came to town to prove their case against the Giants late in August of 1925.

No all-night line was in prospect at the Polo grounds, probably because the weather was inclement, and reserved seats were still to be had, but all club officials expected the historic baseball stadium to be "comfortably filled" at 1:45 o'clock tomorrow when the first game of the crucial double header is started. The capacity of the Polo grounds for a non-world series game is somewhere around 55,000.

The threat of rain remained in the air tonight as the tail-end of the Florida hurricane blew itself out about the house-tops after having swept the entire National league schedule into the discard this afternoon. Rain and cold might dampen the ardor of the fans considerably as it did back in 1918 on the second day of the famous Cincinnati-New York series, which consisted of three consecutive double-headers.

John McGraw was ready and waiting with Larry Benton and Joe Genewich, while Bill McKechnie was prepared to counter with Wee Willie Sherdel and old Alex the Great—or perhaps the veteran Clarence Mitchell, long famed as the only left-handed spitballer in captivity and an arch-nemesis of the Giants.

If rain should force a postponement, which seemed not improbable this evening, the Giants and the Cards could lock horns twice on Friday, an open date in the schedule, and wind up the current segment of their series on Saturday as advertised. The Red Birds are to return here on Sunday, September 30, to close the season at the Polo grounds.

All American league clubs enjoyed an open date today, and consequently the Yankees remained two games ahead of the Athletics and no double headers were piled up. The National league, however, had every intention of playing four games in three cities and had to re-arrange the schedule quickly when the baby hurricane descended upon the east.

The Boston Braves now face three double headers in three days against the Cincinnati Reds, but the Braves would just as soon lose them in pairs as singly. Further rain in Boston would wash games permanently from the schedule of the rivals.

The Cub postponement in New York today probably will be played off next Thursday when the Cubs return to the Polo grounds to complete their series. The Phillies already have announced a double-header with the Pirates for Saturday to make up for today's rain.

ABE MITCHELL PUT OUT OF BRITISH GOLF PLAY

STOKES POGES, England, Sept. 19—(AP)—Abe Mitchell, famous long distance hitter of the British links, who was favored to win the tournament, was today's victim of another of the series of upsets that have marked "news of the world" golf tournament here. In the second round Mitchell bowed to an unknown professional Isherwood of Warrington two up and one to play.

Mitchell is the fifth noted British pro to meet defeat in the first two rounds of the event for which prizes aggregating $1,040, or about $5,200 are given. In the first round yesterday George Duncan, Harry Vardon, Arthur Havers and Len Holland were eliminated.

Mitchell played indifferent golf on the first nine while his opponent was flashing a great game. Isherwood required only one putt on each of the first six greens while Duncan putted poorly enough to miss a two footer at the ninth. The Warrington pro was four up on Mitchell at the turn. On the incoming nine, the veteran played better but was unable to overcome Isherwood's lead.

READY FOR LOS ANGELES TO CINCINNATI AIR RACES

LOS ANGELES Sept. 19.—(AP)—Eighteen airplanes today were given a final tuning up and inspection for the start tomorrow of Class 'A" of the Los Angeles-to-Cincinnati air air races.

The race, one of three for a total of $20,000 in prizes and several trophies, will start at 5 a. m. The sky-birds will lay a course for El Paso, their first overnight stop.

The Class "A" division is open to planes with motors of 510 cubic inches displacement or smaller.

Friday morning eight ships entered in the Class "B" will be given the starting gun and Saturday three non-stop entrans will take off.

Art Goebel, first pilot to reach Los Angeles from New York in the recent non-stop transcontinental flight is one of the entrants in the non-stop to Cincinnati. He will fly his Lockheed-Vega monoplane. Captain Charles Collver, co-holder of the "round the world" record, and Emil Burzin, both entrans in the non-stop race from Roosevelt field, will vie with Goebel for first honors.

COOLIDGES EN ROUTE FOR TRIP THROUGH VERMONT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—President Coolidge left Washington tonight for a two day trip through Vermont.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge and Attorney General Sargent.

Only a small crowd of spectators watched his departure due possibly to the rain and winds that prevailed in the capital. There also was no ceremony in the way of farewells by cabinet officials in his departure.

Members of the white house staff and newspapermen also accompanied the chief executive on his special train.

CONN. HUNTERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

MISSING COUPLE WERE KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 19.—(AP)—A fatal automobile accident on a mountain highway was revealed today as the solution of the mysterious disappearance August 18 of Mr. and Mrs. Albert La Huis, wealthy residents of Zeeland, Mich., and a business acquaintance, F. J. Walter, La Jolla, Calif.

The bodies of La Huis and his wife were recovered from the wreckage of the car which had plunged over a precipice on the highway and officers said they were convinced Walter's body was buried beneath a small landslide heaped behind the car.

Until the finding of the wrecked automobile authorities and relatives of La Huis had worked on the theory that the wealthy Michigan man and his wife had met with foul play.

Papers found in the pockets of the dead man were addressed to La Huis. A son, C. J. La Huis, Miami, Florida, identified the body of the woman at that of his mother.

Dynamite will be used to remove the earth and rocks in a search for the body of Walter. The deputies said a road widening crew operating a steam shovel had unwittingly dumped tons of earth behind the wrecked car, which was at the bottom of a small but steep sloped ravine bordering the mountainous highway.

La Huis and his wife had invested $75,000 in oil lands through Walter. All three were last seen in Bakersfield August 13 from which place they motored southward to inspect the site of the La Huis oil investment.

OBITUARY.
Sedley Brown.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The death after a brief illness of Sedley Brown, 72, veteran stage director and writer, at his home here during the night, was announced today.

Brown formerly was the husband of Henrietta Crossman, noted actress, who now is the wife of Maurice Campbell, federal prohibition administrator at New York. A son, Sedley, Jr., and a sister survive.

Electricity and Bananas

Among the many extensions of the use of electrical machinery attention may be called to the employment of motor-driven "marine legs" machine to unload bananas from the holds of fruit-carrying vessels at New Orleans. Not only is there a great saving of labor, but it is said that the fruit is much les damaged than when unloaded by hand. At Louisville electric radiators have been employed to ripen bananas for local consumption. The fruit is hung in ripening rooms and subjected to a temperature of from 75 to 80 degrees during a period of 48 hours. Afterward it is kept in storage at a temperature of from 60 to 70 degrees.

FORTY ENTRIES FOR DUWELL BOUTS

Judging from the amount of heavy timber listed for the final outdoor boxing to be staged at the Duwell field Friday night there should be at least five bouts in the welterweight and middleweight classes. In addition to the four big boys that will be brought down by the Springfield and Worcester outfits there will be at least a dozen of the sluggers from Norwich and vicinity. Norwich will be represented by Freddie Beaade, Patsy Ferra, Chick Mara and Benny Dempsky. Westerly will have Tony Gengarelli, Ben Herr and Herman Joly will come down from Danielson and there will be at least four of the hefties from New London.

While the smaller boys who usually furnish the boxing and science are alright, the fans just thrive on hard hitting and action which generally is contributed by men in the welter and middleweight classes.

A glance through the entry list which closed last night with the names of over 40 simon pures listed shows the names of many of the favorites from the vicinity of Norwich who have not shown here this summer. The most prominent of the new entries are the Polinski brothers from Colchester, Dinty Moore and Harry Hooper from New London and Sal Comfort of Westerly. Tony, the younger of the Polinski brothers, will be watched with much interest Friday as the fans always did like his style of fighting and without a doubt will welcome the opportunity to watch him in action again. Tony is of the rip tearing type, always willing to take a couple as long as there is an opportunity to give a few in return.

The Polinski boys will bring a big following of admirers from their home town and it is expected that the Whalers will draw a big aggregation from the city beside the fans. With pleasant weather, there is no question but that all records for attendance will go by the board with the final outdoor show.

E. C. BOWLING LEAGUE ORGANIZED

The Eastern Conn. Bowling league was organized Wednesday afternoon at a meeting of the alley owners at the Ashland club in Jewett City. Six bowling establishments in the eastern part of the state were represented and two others sent word that they could not attend. The alleys represented at the meeting were: Aetna Alleys, Norwich, by Lester Hull and Claude Combier; Palace Alleys, Norwich, by Michael Morin; Taftville Alleys by Fred "Chip" Dugas; Casino Alleys Danielson, by Frank Barber; Plainfield Community club by Leroy Desinger, and Ashland club alleys by Prentice W. (Hal) Chase. The Jewett City public alleys and the State Hospital Riverview club are expected to join the league to round out the eight teams.

At the business session Prentice W. Chase was elected secretary and treasurer and other officers will be named at a future meeting of the league. The league voted to open the season on Monday evening, Oct. 1, and a schedule committee was appointed to draw up a schedule for approval. It is planned to play two rounds in the league which will operate for about 20 weeks. The prizes will be cups which will be awarded to the winners and runners-up in the league. At the close of the season there is to be a banquet for the team members. It was also voted to send a team from the league to compete in the state tournament to be held later in the bowling season.

An all-eastern-Conn. bowling team will be organized within a few weeks for matches with prominent teams in the state. Chip Dugas was named manager of the league team with Frankie Barber as captain. It will be a five-man team with the high bowler of each team in the league being a member of the all-star team. It is planned to schedule the first match at the Ashland alleys early in October.

POETRY
Old-Time Vermont Ladies

What pleasant ladyfolks there were
When I was just a shaver!
I'd own their pictures if I kept
A painter or engraver;
How nice to meet them when they called
To sew or tat or visit,
Their well-lined dresses falling down
O'er ankle-works quite exquisite!

"I'm not a dribbling dumbbell yet,
Although perhaps I may be;
I shan't get wrinkles in my face
A-fussing 'bout the baby";
I never heard that kind of talk
From any lady caller,
But hear a tongue so speak last week
Since when my soul seems smaller.

"I shan't stick home a single night,
Not I; when nightfall settles
I'm-readier for a livelier line
Than jouncing pans and kettles;
Whe'. Tom comes home from work tired out,
He needs a change that's snappy;
I have less use for weary men
Than men who make me happy."

I heard that, too, not long ago—
It gave me chilly flashes;
Said I: "Come, Lord, and judge the world
And burn it up to ashes;
It's nothing but a heap of froth,
A show, a streaming ribbon;
Great Roma fell—I guess I know
My Bible and my Gibbon."

Then those dear ladies came to mind
And made me sentimental;
Those true-lived, mellow-mannered dames
So gracious and so gentle;
Thought I: "The true and good live on.
This crosswise modern section
Of life will pass and fine things have
A glorious resurrection."

I won't start any war, I guess,
But let my feelings smother,
And think of ladies just as dear
As my and Whistler's mother;
True womanhood will sure endure—
I can't believe the Maker
Will let his world drift where it needs
A fier, undertaker.

—Daniel L. Cady, in Burlington Free Press.

In a New Place

All that is here my heart has known before,
In other countries, by another name;
Here still the autumn woodsmoke, more and more,
Clouds afternoons of blue and golden flame;
And here a music that is grave and lonely
Stirs on the air like bells without a wind,
And thought, itself, suspends, remarking only
How delicate the trees, how finely thinned.

And here the dusk that gathers on the lake,
And brings a spell of quiet to the land,
Again will lead the young moon in its wake,—
And at that moment I, myself, shall stand
Unchanged in moods and moons that I have known
In other countries that I called my own.

—David Morton, in "Nocturnes and Autumnals."

NOANK

JINX FOLLOWS CAPTAIN WHEN FISHING IS GOOD

Boat Idella has been laid up at the packing house dock with disabled engine for 12 days. Out at the fishing grounds Capt. Lawrence Ellis and his men were fishing, when the engine went bad. He did not put up the signal for help but came from outside Block Island 75 miles with only one cylinder working. Coming along slowly as a caterpilla crawling to his winter home it took ten hours to make the dock.

Capt. Ellis got the village gas engine fixer, Earl Foster on the job with his tool bag. He looked over the engine and said: "You will have to send it to Bridgeport where the engine was made!" This the captain did taking a week to do the work. Now Mr. Foster has it in place, all ready for sea again. Hard luck has been following Captain Ellis for a long time. But when the fishing is good and he has to lose out for a few days or a couple of weeks, Captain Ellis will only smile and say: "Luck will change for me some day! It all takes time!" He had better name the boat "Hard Luck"—that might bring good luck to the good ship Idella.

HOUSE OF DAVID TEAM UNABLE TO PLAY IN VILLAGE

Coach Billie Crane of the Dance Hall nine baseball team, went to New London Tuesday evening and attended the game between the whiskers known as the House of David team from Michigan and the Socony team. Coach Crane was talking to the manager of the long-haired men for a game with the Dance Hall team in the village, but the manager of the House of David players said they are booked ahead until snow flies "but we would like to play in Noank. I've read of several games of your team in the Norwich Bulletin." It would cost $200 to bring the strangers here but Coach Crane thinks he could swing it O. K. Having had an introduction to all the players by the manager and watching a good game of ball. The first baseman, Kennedy, had the fans laughing with his jokes and the way he walked.

PRIZE OF $10 FOR GIRL WHO NAMED NEW HALL

The new hall on Smith court opened its doors Tuesday evening for a big dance to which 325 fans came. The hall was gay with red and pink crepe paper, with 10 blue balloons on each electric light and the windows had red and blue draperies. A large flower box at the head of the hall held flowers. The floor is 40x46 of the best maple, one of the best floors in New England. Russo's orchestra of New London, six music boys in black suits played for the evening. It was 8:30 when the first dance was played, "Get Out and Get Under the Moon." The floor space was filled.

L. Valet of Mystic made a speech and said: "Do you all know that a $10 gold piece is awarded anyone suggesting the best name for this new dance hall? Slips of paper will be passed around and the ballot box is in the check room. Three judges will pick the best name. Don't forget to pick a name and vote." At intermission the ballot box was closed the three judges going to a small room downstairs to decide the name. It took 25 minutes and several said the jury was out. In 20 minutes the drummer beat the drum so Chairman L. Valet could tell who was the lucky one. He said the three judges Rollin Rathbun, Stretch Morrison and myself having looked the slips over carefully found that several had the same name, so picking out the six best names looking them over several times we found that Miss Florence Harley of the village suggested Corona Hall. The judges consider that the best name. So she won the ten dollar gold piece and received a big hand from the crowd. Later a moonlight dance was enjoyed. The people of the village feel proud to have such a dance hall, also such a good place for basketball.

NO CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE IN AUTOMOBILE FATALITY

In a finding made by Coroner Edward J. McKay, he exonerates Paul K. Rogers of New Britain, treasurer of the Skinner Chuch Co., and president of the City National bank of that city, of any criminal negligence for the death of Raymond Joynt Sullivan, 22, on Aug. 13 on the Norwich-Colchester road, when Sullivan was struck by the automobile Rogers was driving.

In his finding the coroner says:

On August 13, 1928, the said Raymond J. Sullivan was living with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, and his brothers and sisters, at their home on the Norwich-Colchester Turnpike road, in the Town of Colchester, about three miles from the village of Colchester. The said Raymond J. Sullivan did considerable work about the home and helped to conduct the farm which was owned by his mother. In connection with the farm a small herd of cows was maintained and the said Raymond J. Sullivan had charge of this herd. Together with a hired man the said Raymond J. Sullivan was accustomed to drive this herd from the pasture, milk the cows and then drive them back to the pasture.
